10-12% ICBC increase likely

New rates out in two weeks

By JAKE BANKY

B.C. motorists can expect to pay more for auto insurance in 1980.

ICBC president Robbie Sherrell presented the proposed Autoplan rates to cabinet Thursday and said afterwards they will be made public within the next two weeks.

Although Sherrell gave no hints about the new rates they are expected to show a 10- to 12-per cent increase over 1979.

This projection by industry sources is based on the recently released ICBC half-yearly report which expressed serious concern over the rising cost of settling claims, particularly for accidents involving bodily injury.

In the first six months of 1979, cost of the average reported claim was up 12 per cent and cost of settling bodily injury claims up 16 per cent compared to the first half of 1978.

The report says this increase puts acute pressure on attempts to stabilize rates and hold the line for B.C. motorists.

The sources suggest this translates into an increase slightly heavier than last year's 10-per-cent jump in the basic rate.

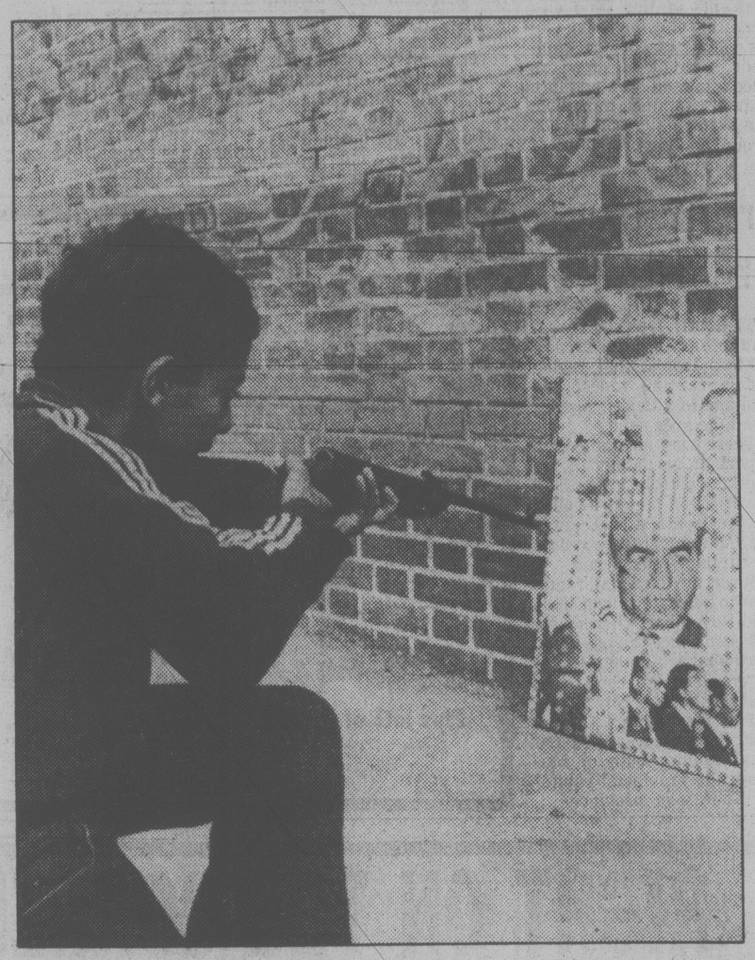

They draw particular attention to the fact that there has been no change in the premiums for collision and comprehensive coverage since the massive rate increases brought in by the new Social Credit government in 1976.

Sherrell, meanwhile, is shedding no tears for the private insurance companies who are asking the government to limit ICBC's new Fundamental Auto Insurance Ratings (FAIR) structure to basic coverage so they can compete for non-compulsory coverage.

Sherrell said the private companies will have to pull

Eerie chants from Iran's roofs

Young Tehran boy shoots pellets at shah, Carter photos

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iran's foreign minister said today some of the 50 U.S. hostages will be freed shortly and others tried as spies, with possible death penalties. But Ayatollah Khomeini quickly jeopardized the promised releases with a blistering attack on the United States.

Khomeini said Iranians should sever all ties with the U.S. and "rub America's snout into the dust." He dismissed the U.N. Security Council resolution calling for release of the hostages as an "American plot."

In one of the eeriest developments in the entire month-long crisis, millions of Iranians, at Khomeini's behest, took to their rooftops at nightfall chanting, "Allah Akbar!" ("God is great!"), "Down with Carter!" and "Death to America!"

The entire capital of Tehran echoed to the repeated chants for 15 minutes from seemingly the entire population.

Militant students, too, denounced Foreign Minister Sadegh Godbzadeh's statement on the release of more hostages as "completely false" and said none of the Americans, being held for the 34th day today, would be released until Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran to stand trial.

In Paris, French justice ministry sources said a nephew of the shah, the son of his twin sister Princess Ashraf, was shot and killed today on a street in the French capital. He was identified as Mustapha Chafik, 34, one of the two sons of the shah's sister.

The conflicting statements on the American hostages reflected the continued deep divisions in Tehran and a continuing battle involving Khomeini, militant students and various governmnt members about the future of the captives.

Godbzadeh initially announced what appeared to be a breakthrough in the deadlock at a news conference when he said some hostages would be freed.

"I assure you they will be freed," he said. "I cannot say when that will be ... I hope not very far from now."

But he insisted some hostages almost certainly would stand trial and promised to issue a statement on the matter by Saturday.

"Those who are guilty of espionage ... have breached the limits of diplomatic immunity," Godbzadeh said. "Some of them are not even diplomats. These people are not going to benefit from diplomatic immunity."

Asked if any hostages might be sentenced to death and shot by a firing squad, the foreign minister replied: "Anything is possible."

Meanwhile, ethnic Turkish rebels claimed control of the capital of northwestern Azerbaijan province today, and said any government peace mission must be approved by their religious leader, whose reservations about Khomeini's theocratic constitution touched off bloody rioting.

Supporters of Ayatollah Mohammed Kazem Shariat-Madari, spiritual head of Iran's 3.5 million ethnic Turks, seized the radio and TV station in Tabriz.

And in the U.S., President Carter's mother said Thursday she is "getting more money than you ever saw" since she suggested a contract should be taken out on the life of Iran's unofficial leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Campaigning in Alabama for the re-election of her son, Miss Lillian was asked about a statement she had made Nov. 29 in Bow, N.H., that if she had $1 million, she would hire someone to kill Khomeini.

Boost in gas exports big bonanza for B.C.

B.C. will receive $85 million a year in additional revenue from natural gas exports as part of a $15 billion gas export plan, a spokesman for Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. said Thursday.

John Anderson, Westcoast executive vice-president, said the revenue will come from a contract under which Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. will sell a minimum of 60 million cubic feet of gas daily to El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Federal Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshin announced Thursday that additional exports of natural gas to the U.S. totalling 3.75 trillion cubic feet will be allowed between now and 1987.

The gas will be sold at $3.30 U.S. a thousand cubic feet but the price is expected to increase with changes in the price of crude oil.

Westcoast's allowable daily exports of gas will go to 869 million cubic feet from their present level of 809 million cubic feet.

Anderson said that under existing revenue-sharing arrangements, B.C. natural gas producers will get about $25 million a year and the provincial government's B.C. Petroleum Corp. will receive a minimum of $50 million and perhaps as much as $58 million.

Anderson said additional pipeline facilities needed to service the contract will reduce revenues by about $10 million a year. However, in the early years of the contract, costs will be almost entirely offset by additional revenues the province will receive for transporting natural gas from the Yukon to the U.S. under another export contract approved Thursday, he said.

Meanwhile, a B.C. energy policy promised for this month will not be forthcoming.

Energy Minister Bob McClelland said the provincial energy policy statement will be made instead "around the end of January or early in February."

McClelland, who took over the portfolio from Jim Hewitt in the Nov. 23 cabinet shuffle, says:

"I am gratified at the progress made under my

Imperial hazy over supply

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark said today the government hasn't been able to get clear assurances from the giant Imperial Oil Ltd. that oil destined for Canada won't be diverted to Imperial's U.S. parent, Exxon Corp.

Clark said that Imperial president Jack Armstrong will be asked for better assurances at a meeting today with Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn.

"The Imperial-Exxon situation, which is historic and too well known in this country, is one of those over which we have least control," Clark said at his weekly news conference.

He said the government had sought assurances from all oil companies about the security of supplies destined for Canada and "Imperial's response was one of the most equivocal of the responses that we received from the companies regarding the diversions."

Clark's comments about Imperial appeared to contradict his reply to a similar question earlier in the same news conference when he said Hnatyshyn "has dealt with all the major oil companies" on diverting oil from Canada.

"It would seem that there would be no diversion of supplies intended for Canada," he said. "The commitment of the oil companies is something we can count on."

Last winter, Exxon diverted Venezuelan oil destined for Imperial refineries in Canada to markets outside the country and set off a furor in the Commons.

Imperial, largest oil company in the country, already is being called on the carpet by the government to explain why it decided to increase gasoline prices this week by 3.4 cents a gallon.

Bouey to stay head financier

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald K. Bouey, 59, has been reappointed Governor of the Bank of Canada for a seven-year term, Prime Minister Joe Clark announced today.

Senior deputy governor R. W. Lawson has also been reappointed to a second term of seven years.

For a central banker, Bouey has been an unusually high-profile target of criticism for raising interest rates to record levels. The bank rate has been raised 11 times since March, 1978, and now stands at 14 per cent.

Bouey, who reaches the retirement age of 65 in 1985, two years before his second term expires, said he may not stay the full seven years.

In the Commons, the Opposition criticized the timing of the reappointment before completion of a Commons-ordered investigation into the central bank and its interest-rate policies by the finance committee.

The governor has maintained the increase in rates has been necessary to defend the value of dollar.

There had been speculation Bouey would be replaced by the Tories.

Sunday punch for Lord's Day Act

The B.C. government is preparing to smite the Lord's Day dilemma hip and thigh.

For years the old Lord's Day Act, a federal statute relating to Sunday activities, has been a centre of controversy.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said Thursday the government finally is ready to act.

After two years of study and nine months of discussions, he plans to put a set of recommendations before cabinet in the next week or ten days, and new regulations for Sunday opening may be revealed as early as next month.

'Get out,' top Bennett aide explodes at press

By JAKE BANKY

For the second time in two days a senior aide to Premier Bill Bennett has blown his cork at the press.

Dan Campbell, the premier's director of [illegible] out of his office today to tell reporters he doesn't intend to answer any more questions on the dirty tricks affair.

Then when reporters persisted in asking questions, Campbell lost his temper.

"I'm a free citizen," he snapped.

When it was pointed out that his office is public, he repeated: "Get out of here."

When newsmen continued to press him about payment of Social Credit election expenses, Campbell angrily suggested they look at provincial election expenses.

Told no details were available, Campbell warned: "Don't come into this office."

Reminded again that his office is paid for with public funds, Campbell replied: "Sit on the floor if you want".

Campbell said he won't speak to the press "because you're hassling and harassing me."

On Thursday he threatened legal action against the news media for what he termed "political harassment."

Campbell said today: "Don't you feel, in the fourth estate, if you've been asked a question four or five times, at night, in the morning, 2 o'clock in the morning, 6 o'clock in the morning, that that's hassling?

"Now if the fourth estate in B.C., the B.C. press gallery, wishes to carry on doing that, that's fine, carry on. If it makes you happy, go ahead, that's you're decision."

Campbell's outburst came in the wake of statements by fired Socred researcher Ellen McKay.

McKay said Campbell circulated a memo last February promoting the use of the tapes that urged dirty tricks by party workers, and that he handed her a $1,000 bill during the election campaign to pay expenses with no receipts required.

"I won't say anything about what Ellen says. That's her statement," Campbell said before exploding into his tirade against the press.

Campbell told reporters he does not deny writing the memo but said he had not heard the tapes and if he had, they would not have been sent out.

"If I get harassed any more by the press," he said, "you may meet me in court."

The source of campaign funds and where they were spent is "none of your business," he added.

Mackay and another former Socred research worker, Jack Kelly, both of whom have been implicated in the so-called dirty tricks affair, turned over 40 to 50 documents to RCMP investigators Thursday.

Mackay and Kelly, who advocated sending to newspaper editors letters supporting Social Credit and signed with phoney names, met with police in the Vancouver office of their lawyer Robert Gardner.

They would not say what was in the documents until the RCMP investigators had finished with them.

Kelly, who quit his research job under pressure in October, said in a television interview he was told by Campbell receipts for a truck he had rented were not necessary.

Under provincial election laws, political campaign expenses must be reported within 60 days after polling day.

It was not immediately known whether the party reported the hotel and truck bills through receipts issued to other Social Credit members.

"I remember paying the first instalment of the hotel bill (at the Richmond Inn)," Mackay said. "He (Campbell) gave me a $1,000 bill."

Campbell did not ask her for receipts, she said.

Kelly said he had been given $200 by Campbell to rent a truck.

"The first time I went I had re[illegible] to his office. He said they weren't necessary," Kelly told the television interviewer.

In another development, Conserva[illegible] Stephens charged Thursday that the mass firing this week of the four Socred caucus research workers shows they were sacrificed to protect politicians.

Stephens said the press has failed to pursue the most important aspect of the Socred dirty tricks campaign.

He refers to the advice to party workers that they use pressure tactics to prevent small radio stations from running anti-Socred interviews.

It was suggested that letters of complaint be written to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission and that pressure be brought through advertisers.

Gas export move boon to B.C.

predecessor in preparation for a provincial energy policy statement. However I feel it is important that I have the fullest possible understanding of the initiatives proposed to date and the opportunity to have some initiatives of my own reflected in the statement."

McClelland added it is also appropriate to wait until introduction of the federal budget and for the first ministers meeting Dec. 17-18 before completing B.C.'s energy position.

"Both these events may have an impact on some aspects of our policy."

The B.C. energy policy had been expected to be made public before Premier Bennett went to the first ministers meeting in Ottawa.

Meanwhile, federal opposition parties are in an uproar over the the decision to allow the new gas exports.

Liberal and New Democratic spokesmen immediately blasted the decision as a sellout of strategic resources at a time of threatened energy shortages in Canada.

The board report nearly doubles the export volume it reported as surplus to domestic requirements only nine months ago. Domestic consumption is about 1.6 trillion cubic feet a year and current exports are about one trillion annually.

Hnatyshyn said almost half the total new exports are granted to Pan-Alberta Gas Ltd. of Calgary to encourage early construction of southern portions of the giant northern pipeline to carry Alaskan gas to the lower 48 states.

The export price will be the current rate of $4 Canadian—about U.S. $3.45 — a million cubic feet, compared with the $3.62 (U.S.) that Mexico is charging for its gas exports to the U.S. effective Jan. 1.

Hnatyshyn told the Commons the government has "more than sufficient evidence these exports are in the national interest." The energy board had gone to great lengths to ensure the "massive conversion" to natural gas from oil the government has planned for eastern Canada will not be jeopardized, he said.

Liberal energy critic Marc Lalonde labelled the decision "one of the biggest sellouts in Canadian history."

"This statement will be one that Canada will live to regret," Lalonde predicted, accusing the new Progressive Conservative government of inaction on energy issues since assuming office in June.

Cyril Symes, NDP energy critic, called the decision "shocking and irresponsible" in light of Prime Minister Clark's admission there may be limited oil shortages in coming months.

"We are giving away our trump card," Symes told MPs.

Clark said today it is necessary to sell some of Canada's dwindling natural gas supplies so petroleum companies will be encouraged to try to find more.

Heating oil exports up, Canada inventory dips

Times News Services

Canadian exports of heating oil to the United States have risen this year while domestic inventories have shrunk, according to a report in the Globe and Mail.

The newspaper in an Ottawa dispatch said National Energy Board official Ralph Brooks, chairman of the board's oil export panel — made the comment after "the leaking of NEB statistics that apparently were the basis for statements by Prime Minister Joe Clark that some parts of Canada may have shortages of home heating oil this winter."

Brooks is quoted as saying exports of 375 million gallons of heavy oils and fuels during the first 10 months of 1979 were almost all from the Irving Oil Ltd. refinery in Saint John, N.B. About half of this was heating oil.

Brooks said the NEB approved all the exports as surplus to Canadian needs, on the basis of figures from Irving indicating the company's own markets were well supplied.

Shrinkage of industry-wide heating-oil inventories was disclosed in an NEB statistical summary, copies of which were released here by the provincial New Democratic Party. The summery showed inventories of heavy oils, including home heating oil, were down 14.6 per cent from October, 1978.

Meanwhile, Liberal energy critic Marc Lalonde has accused Joe Clark of suppressing the NEB assessment of Canada's oil supplies because it did not support the prime minister's statements.

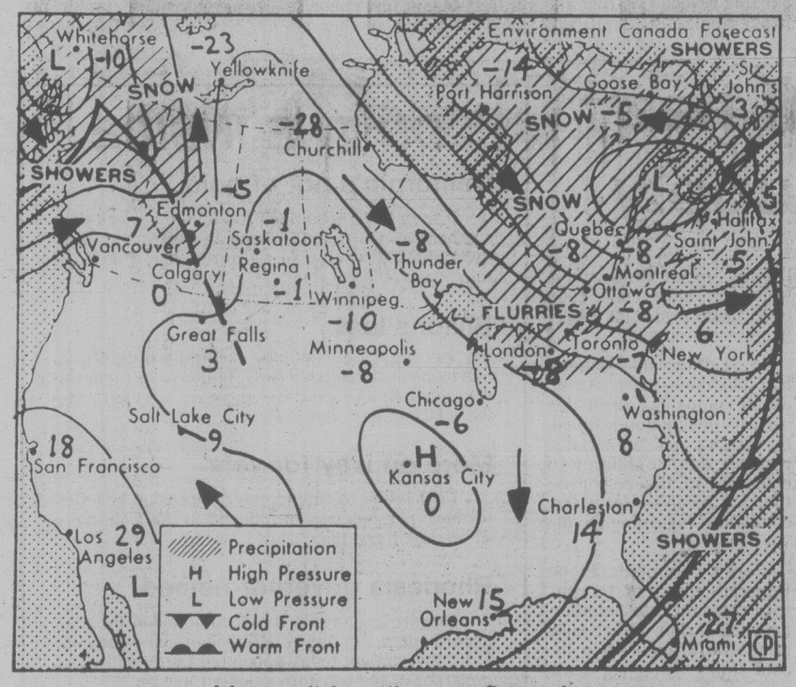

The NEB's monthly report had been scheduled for release Thursday — the day after Clark warned of possible heating oil shortages — but was delayed initially until next week, then it was announced later that it would be released today.

Lalonde said he was told by "impeccable" sources that Clark had delayed release of the report "because it was not in accordance with the statements made by the prime minister."

Clark challenged Lalonde to prove his charge.

The prime minister's remarks Wednesday, switching to a warning of shortages after months of talk about "tight but manageable" supplies, was interpreted to reflect a gloomy assessment by the NEB.

Irish pick Haughey

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Millionaire Charles Haughey, acquitted in 1970 of involvement in an Irish guerrilla gun-running plot, was chosen today to be next premier of the Irish republic.

Haughey, 54, will become premier of this country of 3.5 million people next Tuesday when Jack Lynch formally resigns.

He was elected today by the parliamentary members of the governing Fianna Fail (Soldiers of Destiny) party to succeed Lynch as party leader.

Haughey's accession to power in Dublin is expected to raise anxieties about the future of Anglo-Irish relations over the issue of Northern Ireland.

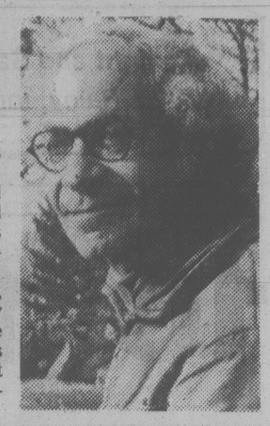

Haughey is considered hawkish on Northern Ireland, where Britain maintains 14,000 soldiers.

In 1969, he was fired from the government by Lynch amid allegations that he was involved in a plot to spend government money on arms destined for the Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Haughey maintained his innocence. He was arrested, tried and acquitted by the court and returned to Lynch's cabinet.

He was chosen by a 44-to-38 vote of Fianna Fail parliamentarians to succeed Lynch, whose popularity had waned amid a rash of strikes and the end of Ireland's economic boom.

A charismatic figure, Haughey was preferred by the governing party as the man most likely to revive its flagging fortunes and lead it to victory in the next election, due in 1982.

Iran struck by quake

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — A sharp earthquake struck eastern Iran's Khaf region today, causing widespread damage to villages, reports from the area said.

There was no immediate report of casualties in the quake, which measured "over 6" on the open-ended Richter scale, a spokesman for the Central Geophysical Institute in Tehran said.

It was the third major temblor to hit eastern Iran since mid-November, when nearly 600 people died in a pre-dawn earthquake. Another 17 villagers died in a second shock that hit the area Nov. 27.

The Geophysics Center said the tremor struck the Khaf region south of Mashad, the provincial capital of Khorassan province.

Gasoline spill at Anacortes

ANACORTES (AP) — As many as 3,000 gallons of regular gasoline spilled into the sea at the Texaco Inc. refinery Thursday when a tugboat caught its anchor on a filled Chevron shipping barge and punctured a hole one-foot below the deck line.

The accident happened when the tug was manoeuvring to pull the barge from the dock and punched a fist-sized hole in the hull, said Don Comfort, plant operations supervisor for Chevron U.S.A., Inc.

A crew member immediately opened an empty compartment on the barge which caused some of the gas to drain into it rather than into the water.

LSD use on upswing in B.C.

RICHMOND (CP) — A drug roundup in which 44 arrest warrants were issued Thursday confirms that the use of the illegal chemical LSD is on the upswing again in B.C.

RCMP S.Sgt. John Kovalick said the roundup is the result of a four-month operation by an undercover constable in Richmond, Delta, Vancouver and Burnaby.

Thirty-two arrests were made by late Thursday on charges of trafficking in illicit drugs. Those arrested or sought included six juveniles, one a 13-year-old boy.

Businesses on reserve to be taxed

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The free lunch will end next year for the 120 businesses on the Kamloops Indian reserve.

The band has decided to exercise a long-dormant right and start taxing the businesses next year. Initially, the band expects to receive $140,000 to $160,000 a year from the taxes.

Band administrator Garry Hutchinson said the Kamloops band will be the first in B.C. to tax businesses on reserve land, "but it is being done in most other provinces."

Diving victim 95% to blame

KELOWNA (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court jury has found that a 26-year-old Calgary man was 95 per cent to blame for injuries, including a broken neck, he suffered in a diving accident at Skaha Lake near Penticton last Aug. 4.

Jurors found that the City of Penticton, sued by Terry LeBlanc after the accident, was five per cent to blame. Under the ruling, the city will pay about $11,000 of a $225,000 claim by LeBlanc unless there is a successful appeal.

Tentative legal aid pact reached

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of 18 legal aid offices in British Columbia have reached a tentative contract with the Legal Services Society, the B.C. Government Employees Union said Thursday.

The one-year agreement, retroactive to Aug. 1, gives the 40 employees an eight-per-cent wage increase. Results of a mail ratification vote are expected in January.

Morphine importing charge laid

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Parmajij Singh Dhaliwal, 23, of Edmonton, charged with importing morphine, was released on $2,000 bail in provincial court Thursday.

Dhaliwal is charged with two Kamloops residents with importing $40,000 worth of morphine from India. Ten others were charged with conspiracy to traffic in the drug.

Killer twice lucky in eluding police

VANCOUVER (CP) — Convicted killer Anthony (Bunny) Gerein got his second break in a successful escape when he was recognized by a Vancouver policeman who did nothing because he thought Gerein was in custody.

The policeman, working as a school liaison officer, recognized a man getting out of a taxi in Vancouver as Gerein, police said Thursday.

It wasn't until he got home that the policeman learned Gerein had fled from his United States escort as they left their plane at Vancouver International Airport and took a taxi into Vancouver.

Gerein, known as a master of disguises, had a beard and mustache when he escaped custody. But the man seen by the Vancouver policeman was clean-shaven, police said.

"At least it gives us an indication of what he looks like now."

Gerein's first break in his escape Wednesday came when there was a gap in the handover from U.S. immigration officers and the RCMP escort waiting for him in an immigration area some distance away.

The gap in the handover will mean a tightening of procedures in transfering prisoners from American to Canadian escorts, authorities said Thursday.

Monica Bell, regional deputy director for the U.S. immigration department in San Francisco, said Thursday that past practice has been for Canadian authorities to be at the door of the aircraft when meeting a potentially-dangerous prisoner.

She said U.S. procedures also will be changed because of the escape. In future the prisoner and escort will remain aboard the plane and Canadian authorities will have to come aboard to take custody.

Gerein, who previously escaped Nov. 19 from the B.C. Penitentiary where he was starting a life sentence for a double murder, was recaptured Nov. 24 in a motel at Hayward, Calif. Ms. Bell said Gerein's girlfriend, who was with him at the time, was deported to Canada Thursday.

Gerein was being deported under escort as an alien who entered the U.S. without inspection, Ms. Bell said. Two escorts were assigned because he was known to be a potential threat.

The escorts were unarmed and handcuffs or other restraints weren't used because of American airline regulations.

He wasn't in handcuffs after the plane landed, Ms. Bell said, "because we feel we don't have authority over a Canadian citizen on Canadian soil."

She said Gerein questioned his escorts about whether they were armed which indicated "he was considering an escape bid and was wondering if he would be shot in the back if he ran."

When there was no Canadian escort at the plane, Gerein bolted from the U.S. escorts and fled through a fire door in the walkway to the immigration centre.

His escorts pursued him across a runway and over a wire fence before they lost him in a parking lot.

Sit-in at ICBC earns second look at claim

SURREY (CP) — A retired plumber has ended a sit-in at the Insurance Corp. of British Columbia claim centre in this Vancouver-area municipality after being promised that his claim for a stolen camper will be re-examined.

John Johnstone, 60, maintains that the $250 ICBC awarded him for his 1966 Ford van, stolen in August, was far less than the vehicle was worth.

Johnstone said the van contained nearly $1,000 in custom camping equipment and was worth $2,300.

He had threatened Wednesday to remain in the claim centre with his German shepherd guard dog until he reached a satisfactory settlement with ICBC. However, the corporation called in the RCMP to have Johnstone remove the dog.

He agreed that the dog presented something of a hazard and voluntarily removed him to his truck.

Johnstone's claim that his van was in mint condition was disputed by Don Sandburg, director of ICBC's special investigations unit.

Sandburg said investigators spoke with "several people who knew the vehicle in question, including the mechanic at the service station where (Johnstone) does business, and everyone we spoke to said the vehicle was not in good condition at all."

Surrey claim centre manager Gordon Farquharson told Johnstone to round up everyone he could think of who had seen the van or done work on it, and also gave him an instruction sheet outlining appeal procedures on claims rulings.

Commerce bank signs first union contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, target of withdrawals of union funds because it refused to agree to a union security clause, signed the clause Thursday in a first contract at a bank branch in Creston, B.C.

Marg Klein of the Union of Bank Employees said the one-year contract, retroactive to Jan. 1 and expiring at the end of this month, contains a nine-per-cent wage increase for the 23 employees and the Rand formula, which provides for collection of union dues from every bargaining unit employee.

The B.C. Government Employees Union announced a month ago it was withdrawing its $6 million from the bank because of it's "union-busting attitude" and other unions followed. The Commerce was the only bank at that time which had refused to sign a union security clause with the bank workers' union.

Two weeks ago, unionists hailed a breakthrough when the Commerce signed a first-contract security clause with the Retail Clerks Union in a Winnipeg branch.

John Fryer, BCGEU general secretary, said he told bank officials his union was not unhappy with service at the Commerce and "would give every consideration to putting the money back" if the bank agreed to the Rand formula.

Bank bomber guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 47-year-old unemployed man was convicted Thursday of 10 counts of attempting to set fire to banks and government buildings last winter.

County court Judge J. J. Anderson deliberated 20 minutes before convicting Julian Bela Demjan. He was acquitted on 10 counts of mischief.

The series of firebomb attacks — which numbered 22 in all — prompted one of the most extensive police mobilizations in the city's history. Most of the attacks involved the use of Molotov cocktails.

About 90 persons — including police and fire officials and citizen band operators — were involved in efforts to apprehend individuals involved in the firebombings. Ten financial institutions, six government offices and six other buildings were hit in the attacks.

Demjan will be sentenced Feb. 5.

Gun roulette suspected

NANAIMO (CP) — A bizarre shooting incident in a city apartment building Wednesday night may have been the result of a game of Russian roulette.

Nanaimo RCMP said Thursday that their investigation into the shooting of Charles Allan Mee, 23, includes the possibility that Mee was playing Russian roulette after seeing the movie The Deer Hunter.

Russian roulette is a game in which a revolver with one bullet in the chamber is passed between players. The player puts the gun to his head and fires hoping the bullet is not in the firing chamber.

It's just not normal

Premier Bill Bennett has described the way the Social Credit government has gone about its partisan political work as "quite normal for political parties."

Perhaps — unlikely though it may seem — it is.

If so, the definition of what should be considered "normal" behavior for parties in B.C. needs to be changed.

In a statement yesterday, Bennett returned to his old theme that the whole dirty-tricks affair is a tempest in a bottle of printer's ink, a non-event created mainly by the media. Everything that has gone on is quite normal, he implied.

Sorry, Mr. Premier, but it just doesn't wash.

First, it is not normal for a caucus to fire its entire research staff on about five minutes notice on the grounds it is "reorganizing" its staff functions. Any sort of "reorganization" normally involves a rather lengthy period of planning and of work with existing staff to determine how best to fit them into new programs. At least it would have been nice if caucus chairman Jack Kempf had been able to suggest, even in vague and general terms, just how the office was to be organized in future.

Even less is it "normal" for the caucus chairman to announce that the mass firing was a unanimous caucus decision when several members of the caucus have made it quite clear they were totally unaware of the decision until they heard about it through the press.

It is not normal for the RCMP to be working for weeks studying parts of the election campaign of a political party. It is not normal for the police to seize caucus files nor for former employees of the caucus to be asked by the RCMP to co-operate in an investigation.

Third, to the best of most people's knowledge, it is not normal for party leaders to have tucked away mysterious bank accounts that they can use for political projects, separate from either government or the mainstream of the party.

There is, it must be emphasized, nothing illegal about the creation of such accounts. Their existence does, however, afford party leaders a power independent of party and government that would seem more appropriate in a presidential style of government than in a parliamentary democracy.

In the presidential system, a leader tends to run on his own and as an individual. In a parliamentary system, however, it is the party that gets elected to government, not the premier.

Hence, to keep the system of checks and balances in good working order, it should be the party that controls the money spent on its behalf during any election campaign.

If the Social Credit leaders believe it is normal to have bank funds for party purposes outside the control of the party, they should reconsider the nature of the party system under which our governments operate.

Indeed if Bennett or other leaders think that the entire scenario of their party and government during the last few months is normal, they must have a peculiar idea of what is abnormal.

Better late . . .

Better late than never.

That's about all that's left to say to the B.C. Law Society, now that it has finally agreed that its members can advertise their fees, at least in moderation.

The Society has fought valiantly for months against moving into the 20th century by allowing B.C.'s lawyers to advertise. It has tried to punish lawyers who went out and advertised anyway; it has fought court cases under the competition act against advertising; it has implied that to allow any advertising would be to open the floodgates to a barrage of $1.49 Day specials from lawyers across B.C.

But now the society agrees that its members can advertise in the print media, provided the ads are dignified and first approved by the society. Presumably, the society will be sensible and reasonable in deciding what types of advertisements will be acceptable.

The decision is really not likely to make much difference in the amount of advertising by lawyers. But the change in the society's position has at least opened up a closed profession just a little. And that can only be a good thing.

Kennedy campaign slipping

WASHINGTON — Ted Kennedy and his well-laid plans for the White House are fraying at the edges, and it hasn't even started snowing in New Hampshire.

What happened?

It's far too early yet for political obituaries, of course, but there are signs that the attractive senator from Massachusetts is in trouble.

The excitement of last summer, when Jimmy Carter's popularity hit rock bottom and Kennedy was allowing himself to be seduced into the race, has all but evaporated. The Iranian crisis is only one of several factors.

High expectations

As a potential candidate waiting in the wings, Kennedy was the dream ticket, never mind the skepticism about what he stood for, his questionable appeal to 1960s nostalgia, and his checkered past. He had the name, a good jaw, and 17 years in the senate to draw from. And Carter was in a political coma.

Kennedy's first problem, when he announced in early November, was the towering expectation that people had to him.

The mechanics of presidential politics in the U.S. today forces candidates to pay heed to the "underdog theory." Because of the length of the campaign season — a circus of primaries, caucuses, conventions and straw polls — a candidate must pace himself carefully, or perish.

Early leaders get undue attention, and often get clobbered.

The trick, as Jimmy Carter demonstrated in 1976, is to avoid being seen as the front-runner for as long as possible. Small victories and even near-victories thus take on greater dimension.

In the jargon of the times, Carter had a low "identification factor." When he started running, only two per cent of Americans recognized him. Thus when he won a state caucus in Iowa, heads began turning.

Kennedy started out on the top, and became the immediate target. All it took was a single hour of television — the now-famous CBS interview with Roger Mudd — to punch a gaping hole in his carefully crafted strategy.

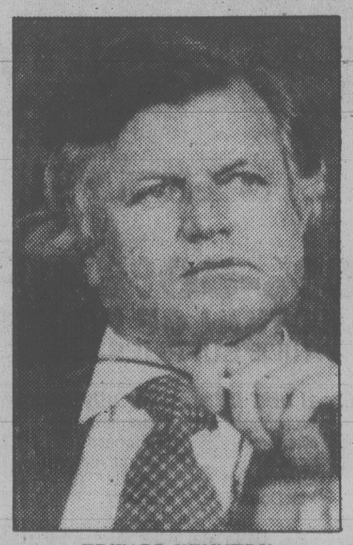

To everyone's astonishment, the senator was unable to handle the most basic questions about Chappaquiddick. And he had an awful time explaining why he even wanted to be president.

The polls dipped. Just as the Kennedy campaign was climbing back on the rails, the nation was seized with the Iranian crisis. Nobody was in a mood to listen to policy statements on national health. Even inflation and energy become secondary.

Kennedy on the stump whether among farmers in Iowa or women leaders in Washington, suddenly sounded stale. In the process, his attacks on Carter's lack of leadership sounded empty and even malicious.

Contrast, for a moment, the way the two men announced their candidacies. Kennedy picked Boston for a rah-rah rally that included many of the relics of the JFK days.

Carter, on the other hand, took a

EDWARD KENNEDY
. . . jumped the gun?

"reluctant" few moments out of his crisis schedule to make his candidacy for re-election official. "I apologize for having to engage in politics at this sombre time," he seemed to say, "but you know these silly election laws."

With that, a grim-faced president went back into seclusion to deal with the real world problems.

Kennedy, meanwhile, was up to his ears in a controversy over his remarks about the Shah: A hideous tyrant, he called him, who should not be granted asylum in the U.S. The next day, the Washington Post ungraciously carried an old photo of the senator shaking hands with the Shah when he was still occupying The Peacock Throne.

The critics said he was giving solace to the enemy. "Teddy the toast of Tehran!" hollered the front page of a New York daily.

Despite all his promise, and the kill of his image makers and policy advisers, Kennedy hasn't even been able to hold the press with him. Once his promoters, they have become dogs yapping at his heels.

Some of the stuff they are writing about him is downright morbid.

Item: The cover story in this month's Harper's Magazine is entitled "Edward Kennedy and The Romance of Death." Writes Lewis Lapham, the magazine's respected editor: "Every airport, every shopping centre and hotel lobby, every banquet hall through which Senator Kennedy passes on his perilous journey will be suffused in the flat and lurid light of a prospective killing ground."

But that was just an appetizer.

Item: All of Washington is talking about a magazine piece called "Kennedy's woman problem." Deliberately non-anecdotal, so as not to be dismissed as sensational, this study of the senator's private life, based on a wide range of interviews, is a damning piece of journalism.

Kennedy is depicted as a man whose "dates" are carefully selected by staff members. After a brief dalliance, the woman is sent packing so that Kennedy can turn his full attention back on the presidential race.

A phantom

Item: A key part of the Kennedy strategy was to meet the question of Chappaquiddick head-on, get it out of the way early, and move on to substantive matters.

But the incident remains an ever-present phantom after more than a decade. Cartoonists persist in wicked portrayals of Kennedy dripping wet and haggard, trying to talk to a housewife about "leadership."

No one is seriously suggesting at this stage that the Kennedy campaign is dead. New issues will emerge, new strategies will develop, and the polls will probably run up and down the scales several times before next summer.

But for the moment, the senator is on the defensive and it shows in every one of his campaign appearances. Ted Kennedy is in for a fearsome fight.

Prince Albert

I received a copy of the article written by a Ms. Carol Goar taken from your Nov. 17 edition, page 24, the caption being "Dief's ghost haunts Prince Albert byelection." The writer either wasn't present at the luncheon or did not give a factual report.

First, there were not frosty cafe windows; it was a beautiful spring-like day, water running in the streets. My parked car was evidence of that and the prime minister and the candidate arrived at the hotel in business suits, no top coats.

The luncheon room was jammed to overflowing into the packed lobby, wall to wall people everywhere. I inquired from a hotel clerk who told me there were more than 600 people attending.— not 250 subdued but supportive crowd. All 600 people were absolutely elated with fire and enthusiasm and gave our young prime minister and leader standing ovation after standing ovation. It took me the best part of an hour to make my way through that crowded lobby with people so elated with both the candidate and the prime minister. These are the facts. The Liberals knew we meant business this time and will for sure in the next election. I for one believe "in facts" not partisan politics. Don't be so naive to believe that the ghost of John Diefenbaker stalks the streets of P.A. We are firmly behind the Joe Clark government.

Now I know why Prime Minister Clark looks so soft on TV. The media make him appear that way. He is in fact a vigorous strong leader, a forceful speaker and has the potential of becoming a great prime minister.

To my mind in fact, he is a young John Diefenbaker. Our candidate Kris Eggum, besides being a gentleman, will represent Prince Albert well in the next federal election. He will be the man from Prince Albert to watch. — Edith Savard, Prince Albert.

Anti-youth

I read with dismay of Victoria city council's proposal to ban roller-skating and Police Chief Gregory's suggestion to corrugate the sidwalks, forcing wheelchairs, roller-skaters and bicycles onto the roadway.

The Tally-Ho tours create traffic jams all summer long yet there is no proposal to ban them or their droppings. Bicycles and joggers are not banned from downtown. Roller-skating is a healthful, non-polluting, fun way to get around town that I am certain is about to become more than a fad.

I feel that this proposed ban is just the latest in a series of anti-youth actions, undertaken by city council over the last ten years and has contibuted to the present street-kid problem because of a lack of youth activities and meeting places. I hope city council will make up to the results of their actions and discard their unworkable and unenforceable restrictions. — Ken L. Ogden, 755 Daffodil Avenue.

Federal control

In an interview carried recently by a weekly newsmagazine, Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed is reported to have said that "if the provinces own resources, then there can't be a wellhead tax on those resources by the federal government." Very comforting to the provinces but quite untrue according to the constitution.

In the first place, section 91 of the British North America Act, which enumerates the powers of parliament, provides under subsection 3 for "the raising of money by any mode or system of taxation." Could anything be more all-embracing than that? It certainly covers wellhead taxes, or, for that matter, anything else the federal authorities care to dream up.

To show that even natural resources are not necessarily under the control of the provinces, section 92, subsection 10 (c) provides for an exception to the general rule by stating that "Such works as, although wholly situate within the province are before or after their execution declared by the parliament of Canada to be for the general advantage of Canada or for the advantage of two or more of the provinces." So far as I know this drastic power has only been used once, in connection with uranium but it could be just as easily utilized to bring the whole oil industry under federal control should that be thought to be necessary or desirable.

If our constitution means anything, it appears that Peter Lougheed is skating on thin ice indeed. Surely it is time for Joe Clark to act rather than to keep on threatening that he may do so at some time in the future. A recent 7½ hours of bickering with the Alberta premier on a subject under federal authority, appears to be a complete abdication of responsibility on the part of the PM. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Build it here

With unemployment in B.C. at its present level, it makes little sense that provincial government representatives are in Europe searching for a replacement for the Marguerite, when we have the capability of building a replacement ferry right here.

Considering the fact that the Marguerite puts over $8 million per year into the Victoria economy, some criticism must be levelled at those responsible for waiting until the vessel has been "written off" before thinking about a replacement.

It has been known for years that new sewage regulations for vessels operating in U.S. waters would come into effect in 1980 and it has also been known for years that the Marguerite did not meet these regulations.

In spite of this lack of planning I feel that it is still not too late to save the jobs of hundreds of B.C. shipyard workers.

If it could be shown to U.S. authorities that a replacement vessel for the Marguerite was on order in a B.C. shipyard, I'm sure that these U.S. officials would look favorably when a request from the B.C. government to give exemption from these regulations until the new vessel is built.

Considering the service given over the years by the Marguerite, I feel that such an exemption request would get a lot of support from U.S. citizens in the Seattle area, whom I am sure are well aware that the Princess Marguerite operating for one more season without holding tanks is not about to wreak havoc on the U.S. environment.

Let's bring those representatives home from Europe and let's get to work immediately, building not only a replacement for the Princess Marguerite, but at the same time building a future for the B.C. shipbuilding industry. — C. Blair, Alderman, Esquimalt, 939 Reeve Place.

One number

At about 5:30 a.m. Dec. 1 I awakened hearing a crash. Looking out the window from our penthouse I saw a pick-up with a camper hitting three or four times a car parked in front of a driveway across on Fairfield Rd., smashing it badly.

I immediately called 0 for Operator who dialed the police station ringing about 10 to 12 times; no answer. She told me she would try again and after another five rings a slow "Hellooooooo" answered. It took also quite a while for a police car to appear — close to 15 minutes I would say.

I then found the police number and realized it was 384-4111 and the fire 384-1122, ambulance 595-9911. My wife says that in her home town (England) the police phone is 9999. How logical! How can we expect in an emergency to remember such clumsy numbers and to wait such long answers? If it had been a murder or a theft, the bandit would have had time to call for a cab!

Could emergencies number be:

		Police	Fire	Amb.
Vic.	(VIC)	V-1111	V-2222	V-3333
Saan.	(SAA)	S-1111	S-2222	S-3333
Esq.	(ESQ)	E-1111	E-2222	E-3333
O.B.	(OAK)	O-1111	O-2222	O-3333
Col.	(COL)	C-1111	C-2222	C-3333

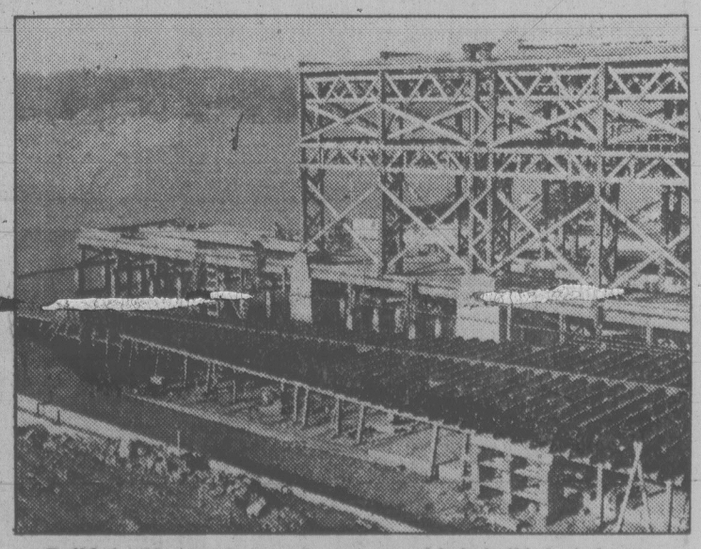

Or one number for all.

If this dialing is technically inacceptable, surely something more simple and quick could be devised by a management consultant and a telephone technician. — Gaston Godbout, 1124 Fairfield Road.

For the record

Recently there have been a number of letters concerning a film entitled "About Sex". The letters claim that this is a film to be shown in the high schools by Planned Parenthood. The film was shown at a Pro-Life meeting. The information presented along with the film was incorrect. It has never been shown by anyone from Planned Parenthood Victoria. As educator for Planned Parenthood I do occasionally show films, passed by the school board, to certain classrooms within the framework of a well planned and prepared program. This film is not one that is used. It was produced by Planned Parenthood New York for their population, it is not suited for ours.

I hope that this information will help clear up the concerns that some parents may have felt on reading those letters. — Pearl M. Denny, Eductor, Planned Parenthood (Victoria).

Build the Marguerite's replacement and help build the industry.

Pot of gold for Hawaii

By TOM PAEGEL

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Along Front Street in this sun-baked Maui tourist town there is a story making the rounds about a marijuana grower over on the Big Island of Hawaii.

Every once in a while, it is said, he grabs a shovel, goes out on his property and starts digging for a peanut butter jar crammed with $30,000 in cash that he buried last year after the harvest. He hasn't located it yet, but he really isn't too concerned because he has found three other jars he buried at the same time and each was filled with about the same amount. And this is only a small portion of the yield he expects from the 3,500 plants he has scattered around the island.

The marijuana business is a growing concern here in paradise. And the scenario that is being played out among the palm trees and mai-tais is one of mystery and intrigue. There are allegations of involvement by local organized crime, episodes of violence and rumors of corruption among law officers charged with stamping out pakalolo, the Hawaiian name for marijuana or "crazy smoke."

A year ago, marijuana was said to be the third leading agricultural crop in the Aloha state. But today, many people, including some government officials, are calling it the No. 1 crop — far surpassing sugar and pineapple, which have dropped sharply in recent years.

Police and federal narcotics officers who participate in "Operation Green Harvest" raids say they confiscate about 10 per cent of the islands' crop each year. Police officials say that anywhere from $300 million to $750 million worth of pakalolo is marketed in the state annually. (By comparison, sugar brought in $280 million and pineapple, $165 million last year.) Pot growers and officials tend to go along with the lower police estimates.

The marijuana money should start flowing this month, as the fall harvest reaches its peak. And it won't be too soon, according to growers like Harry, who has lived on Maui for 15 years and has seen the pakalolo scene change from a cottage industry started by a few hippies in the '60s to the multi-million dollar operation that it is today.

"Legitimate business all over the state has been down this year," says Harry, who has a cover job as a bartender at a big resort hotel. "The United Airlines strike and the DC-10 groundings really cut into the tourist flow," he said. (United accounts for about 30 per cent of the flights to Hawaii.) Then he motioned to the nearly empty bar and continued, "It's the off season now on top of it all and believe me, there are a lot of people, bar owners, shopkeepers, you name them, who are praying it's a good harvest this year because they're hurting."

It is common knowledge here that when the growers get their money, they start spending it — and much of it goes right back into the island economy. "It's a big lift for everyone," Harry said. "They (the growers) start taking the ladies out to dinner and partying around. The kids get new clothes and toys. The old man buys the new 4-wheel drive he's promised himself, and maybe a piece of land and then lumber . . ."

In a place where many people usually have to hold two or even three jobs to get by, it is not surprising to hear that many are growing pot, especially the mainland haoles, a derisive term the Hawaiians use for outsiders. As Harry put it:

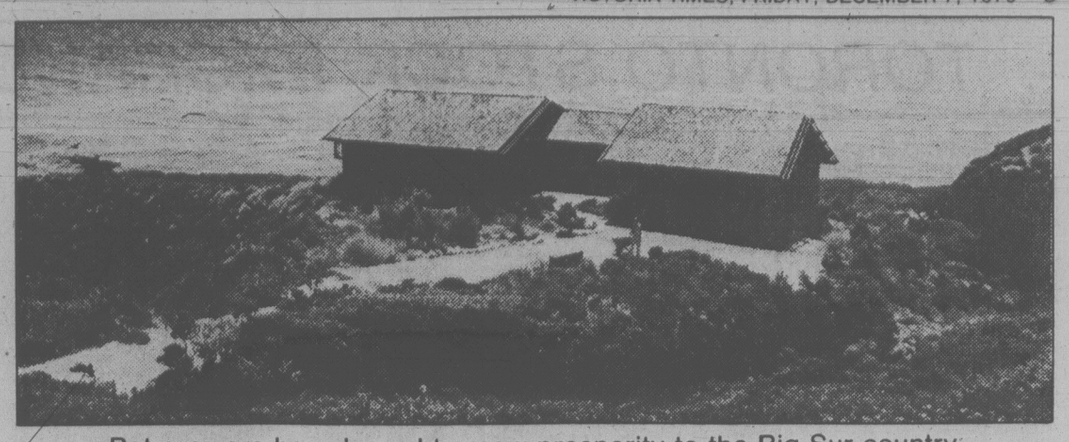

"The money is too tempting (the going price for a pound of sinsemilla — seedless, female marijuana buds — is $2,000) and the risks involved are really so few that it seems kind of stupid not to grow it. When a guy with only 10 plants (the average plant produces about a pound of buds) can make several grand selling it to tourists or friends, why the hell not?" Figure out the potential of the Hawaii grower with 3,500 plants.

Citing pakalolo's impact on Hawaii's shaky economy, many say it should be legalized. It's a matter that comes up every year in the state Legislature and every year it is defeated. Proponents believe it is only a matter of time until such a measure is passed.

The pot growers range from born-again Christians to gay activists. Also taking advantage of the brisk trade are accountants who specialize in laundering the growers' profits, busboys and waitresses who earn $10 an hour helping to prepare buds for sale, attorneys who specialize in pot cases, and others . . .

Pot growers have brought a new prosperity to the Big Sur country

California's richest new crop: marijuana

and PHIL GARLINGTON
The Los Angeles Times

Patrick Cassidy crouches like a slender bearded satyr on the back of a flatbed truck that is parked in a natural amphitheatre facing the sea on the desolate South Coast of Big Sur along the Northern California seashore, just below the Monterey Peninsula. He holds before him a bushy marijuana plant as though it were a Christmas tree that he might take home to decorate.

A huge log lies alongside the truck and in front of the log, six conga drummers and a snare drummer beat out a steady rhythm. Standing silently among the drummer sits a pretty young blonde wearing a long white dress with lace trim.

A crowd of men, women and children, most of them dressed in scruffy dungarees, forms a large circle that fans out from the drummers and encloses a large pile of kerosene-soaked firewood.

Cassidy, the drummers, the woman in white, the crowd are waiting. Now and again someone looks toward a young man wearing a cowboy hat who is standing on the crest of a hill, silhouetted against the western sky.

Finally, the young man lifts his hat and waves it over his head, a signal that the sun has begun to sink into the ocean on the far horizon.

With that signal, Cassidy, wearing a multi-colored stocking cap, jeans and a purple vest over his paisley shirt, walks to the young woman in white and hands her the marijuana plant, places the five-foot long marijuana plant on top of the firewood, someone sets the wood ablaze and the crowd cheers, yowls and claps as the plant begins to smoke, then catches fire.

It is the 12th annual Harvest Party, and this year the marijuana plant that Cassidy offers to the gods in his pagan ritual is probably worth $1,000. Quite possibly more.

Cassidy is only one of a steadily increasing number of farmers who grow one of California's most lucrative crops: marijuana.

Estimates of the size of the annual crop are often based on premises no more substantial than so much pot smoke. But even by the most conservative of calculations, California's underground cultivation industry is a multi-million dollar business producing tons of marijuana in gardens all over the state.

Despite the fact that cultivation of even one marijuana plant is a felony in California, there are literally thousands of farmers growing pot commercially in addition to a multitude of amateurs who grow it in their backyards, patios, windowsills and closets for their own use.

The number of commercial — and amateur — growers is increasing yearly, making California the top marijuana producer in the United States.

The unregulated, largely untaxed industry has had an especially profound effect on the economies of some Northern California counties, and there appear to be few counties in the state that do not produce at least $1 million worth of commercial marijuana annually.

Moonshiners

Most observers compare the phenomenon to Prohibition and to the moonshiners in the South.

"Here's a chance to be a socially acceptable outlaw," explained Cassidy, who said he had been growing marijuana in Big Sur for 20 years. "Society accepts the pot farmers. We're like heroes."

Society also richly rewards the pot farmers, especially since the emergence within the last five years of commercially grown California "sinsemilla" marijuana.

Sinsemilla — Spanish for "without seed" — is a highly potent marijuana. Very simply, sinsemilla marijuana is the result of culling male marijuana plants to prevent the pollination of female plants. Theoretically, if the female plant is pollinated she will use some of her tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) — the intoxicant in marijuana — to produce seeds. So, the theory goes, if the female is deprived of the male's pollen, she will not be able to produce seeds and will instead store the surplus THC in super-intoxicating buds.

Potency isn't the only thing that's changed. While the old ounce of pot with its accompanying stems and seeds sold for $10 in the late 1960s, an ounce of manicured sinsemilla buds can bring $125 to $200 on the street this year.

And from the mountainous second-growth pine forests of the northern coastal counties to the brushy high deserts in the south, the increase in cultivation has kept pace with the astonishing prices the potent bud commands among smokers.

"Any place in the state that is remote, sparsely populated and which offers some concealment, you'll find sinsemilla being grown," said Steve Helsley, chief narcotics officer for the state Department of Justice.

Over the years, Mendocino and Humboldt counties in Northern California have gained a well-deserved reputation among smokers and lawmen alike as the state's sinsemilla breadbasket.

Poison spray

Ironically, the demand for domestic marijuana increased throughout the state as the Mexican government attempted to destroy the smuggling trade by spraying paraquat poison on pot fields south of the border. Marijuana continued to flow northward, of course, but an increasing number of California pot smokers feared lung damage from paraquat-tainted pot and turned to the domestically produced product.

The domestic farmers, for their part, were growing an increasingly better product as they gained experience.

California growers now produce between 30 per cent and 35 per cent of the marijuana smoked in the state, according to Gordon Brownell, West Coast director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

In Santa Barbara County, another pot centre, the sheriff's department has placed eradication on hold. "It's a very low priority," a narcotics officer explained. "We're more interested in heroin or cocaine. Besides, these pot gardens are all planted on steep ravines and are hard to get to."

But in Riverside county, where the remote brush-covered hills of the Sage-Anza area have become a pot grower's paradise, the sheriff this year launched a major drive.

In a series of raids during October, Riverside depties seized approximately 11,000 plants from 53 gardens, with 47 arrests.

San Diego and Santa Cruz counties also tried to put the heat on growers this season. In all, a survey of the principle growing counties in the state shows that more than 60,000 plants were uprooted by lawmen. Thus, using a formula setting the wholesale price of each plant at $1,000, the plants confiscated alone would have a value of $60 million.

Apply the narcotics officer's 10 per cent formula to that and you come up with a $600 million industry that not only outstrips strawberries and almonds but oranges, lettuce and cotton as well. Only milk, cattle and grapes would be larger industries.

But the fallacy in this approach is that many of the plants included in the count would never reach maturity. As any grower will testify, there are many things besides raiding parties and pot poachers that will terminate a plant before it can be harvested. "Gophers, deer and insects all relish the marijuana plant," one Sacramento Valley grower said.

Refugee

Veteran grower Cassidy, who is 43 years old, and a refugee from the Beat Generation days in San Francisco's North Beach, maintains that California sinsemilla was first grown in Big Sur and that he may have been the first farmer to grow it commercially.

There are, of course, many versions of how the lucrative sinsemilla industry began. The migration theory holds that big city refugees who were part of the back-to-the-earth movement about 10 years ago brought their taste for marijuana with them when they migrated to rural northern counties like Mendocino and Humboldt.

According to that theory, the back-to-the-earth folks at first grew marijuana only for their personal use. But as their cultivation techniques became more sophisticated and the quality of their crops increased, a commercial market was established.

STRAY FEATHERS
Harold Hosford

Birding and driving don't mix!

It was a near thing! Picture a red Datsun with a yellow Volkswagen bug for a hood ornament. That's how near it was.

I was tooling along, somewhere in the wilds of Burnaby, with nothing much on my mind except catching a ferry and getting home. There was traffic all around me, but I was only slightly conscious of it. The yellow Volkswagen was well in front of me, and I was only vaguely conscious of it.

I'd just checked the time and assured myself there was no need to panic, I'd make the four o'clock ferry all right, when four black birds with flashing white patches on their wings rose from the centre strip and dashed across the road in front of me.

In the moment it took those birds to cross, and me to follow them with my eyes, the Volkswagen almost became part of my Datsun. A red light had intervened and the Volkswagen had stopped, and I almost paid the price of birdwatching and driving.

Anyway, the panic was over almost as quickly as it had developed and I was able to glance around and find the birds that had caused the trouble. They had joined a dozen or so others of a similar ilk on the wires over the road.

Now, with the luxury of a long stop, I was able to look them over at leisure and confirm what I'd thought at first — they were Crested Mynas, the first I'd seen in Vancouver for a couple of years.

Not that Crested Mynas are scarce in Vancouver, it's just that I never seemed to be where the mynas are. These starling-like birds — they also go under the name of Japanese Starling — have been a part of Vancouver's birding scene for more than 80 years. Their original homeland was northern Pakistan and India and southeast Asia, including southern China. It was from China, through the unintentional efforts of emigrants, that the mynas are believed to have got their start in North America.

Fortunately, unlike their European cousins, Common Starlings — who got their start in North America about the same time — the Crested Mynas have not "inherited the earth." Today, Vancouver — and its environs — is still the only place in North America where one can see Crested Mynas in the wild.

I remember the first Crested Mynas I ever saw were in downtown Vancouver, about 10 years ago. I haven't seen them downtown lately. Maybe the environmental changes wrought by man in the past decade have been too much for them. Whatever the reason, I've found that the mynas have moved out into the residential suburbs and agricultural areas — and who can blame them?

Even where they are relatively common they never seem to have become the plague their European cousins are. Their habits are much like those of the Common Starling — they nest in cavities, holes in trees and buildings, and roost under bridges and such — but being far outnumbered, their depredations go unnoticed.

The little gang at rest on the wires showed no evidence of the prominent white patches on their wings that are a sure mark of their breed. They looked much like any other starling — mostly black — but a curious shape to their heads and their somewhat shorter yellow beaks gave them away.

That curious shape is what gives the Crested Mynas their name. It is a "ruff" of feathers that starts at the base of the beak and proceeds back over the head to give the birds a high "forehead" and a prominent "round" head.

Like any other starling, the birds in the little gang on the wires were jockeying for position, each one seeming to want the prime seat next to the cross-bar on the telephone pole.

It was while considering this little game of one-upmanship that I became aware of the traffic situation again. I was now suddenly alone on the road, the yellow Volkswagen gone, alone that is except for a Greyhound bus with an air-horn right behind me.

No siree. Birding and driving do not mix.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were slightly lower in light trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday.

The short end of the market fell 10 cents. Mid-,long-term and corporate issues lost one-eighth of a point. Provincial issues were down one-quarter.

Day-to-day money was available at 14 per cent.

The Canadian bond market entered a holding pattern Thursday, arresting the trend of sharp gains that have been posted in recent days. Participants found themselves under the influence of the one-quarter point retreat in the New York market, which followed the disclosure that U.S. producer prices rose at a 15-per-cent annual rate in November, a rise somewhat above expectations, analysts at Greenshields Inc. said.

They say the feeling in some quarters is that any additional easing in prices would reattract buying interest.

More broadly, Canadian investors appear serene that next Tuesday's budget will not contain any shocks. Prospects of continued heavy cash requirements and adverse inflationary implications from oil price increases are already adequately discounted, in the opinion of many, dealers said.

The Bank of Canada is still exercising a tempering influence in investor sentiment, although not active in the market. The bank is, nonetheless, keeping the banking system exceptionally tight.

Captain fill-ins banned, cancelled ferries likely

B.C. Ferry Corp. chief officers have been ordered by their union to refuse to substitute for captains or face disciplinary action, union officials said Thursday.

Corporation spokesman Bill Bouchard said the new policy could cause disruptions in ferry sailing schedules.

"If the case was that we could not find a relief master, then we could not sail. It is possible it could result in canceled sailings."

The new union policy, which prohibits what has been a long-standing corporation policy, was taken following a union poll of deck officers, Shirley Mathieson, president of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union, said in a memo.

"Results of a ballot conducted by deck officers shows a substantial majority in favor of refusing substitution to master of major vessels for chief officer-master salary," her memo said.

"Accordingly, you are hereby informed that it is now union policy to refuse substitution to master major vessels."

Chief officers are often used as relief masters on major vessels.

"What we are talking about is employees with holidays, days off coming to them or sick days," Bouchard said. "It (substitution) is frequent."

Substituting chief officers, who now earn approximately $24,000 a year, receive a bonus when substituting for masters that is supposed to bring their salary up to the $28,000 a year earned by chief engineers, Bouchard said.

A ferry captain, who wished to be anonymous, said most chief officers refuse to substitute as masters because they only get eight per cent above their own wage.

Bouchard said a recent change in company policy increases that bonus to about 14 per cent, but union members said it is still not enough.

Masters of major vessels, now excluded from the union contract, are paid on a performance-rated basis. With a base salary of $22,000 a year, the company can pay them up to 35 per cent more, depending on their performance.

Mathieson's memo said violators of the new union policy can be disciplined.

"Should the company ask you to substitute, inform them you can not contravene union policy," she said in a memo to chief officers.

The union is dissatisfied with pay scales for relief masters who they say earn less than chief engineers.

Oceanographer warns of seabed mining risks

By AB KENT

Nodule mining on the ocean floor — a potentially valuable resource industry — has environmental implications not yet understood, a University of B.C. oceanographer has warned.

Stephen E. Calvert, head of UBC's department of oceanography, spoke at a seminar on oceanic mining at the Institute of Ocean Sciences, Patricia Bay.

Calvert said the way in which the ocean bottom and surface layers of water would be disturbed probably will not be known until the start of mining operations to recover ferromanganese, copper and nickel.

Research thus far on the mysterious metallic objects — sometimes the size and shape of cannonballs, sometimes like hamburgers — has failed to define how the nodules are formed.

Calvert said the deposits have been discovered in various parts of the Pacific, from the deepest oceanic trenches to the tops of submarine ridges and in coastal areas such as Jervis Inlet.

They also occur in freshwater lakes, he said.

In the Pacific, the heaviest concentrations lie in two parallel east-west belts, one south of Hawaii, the other west of Peru and Ecuador.

On the face of it, Calvert said, the nodules appear to be very valuable.

Calvert said mining, because of the recovery process, will disturb the ocean sediment and affect the surface layers of the sea.

This will also have some disturbing effect on bottom life and on the physical characteristics of surface waters, enriching the upper layers with nutrients not normally found there.

He said researchers are looking at these questions in an effort to establish some parameters within which exploitation might take place.

Education levy bumped $1.8M

The basic education levy proposed Monday by Education Minister Brian Smith for 1980 will cost taxpayers in Greater Victoria School District $1.8 million more than this year, the teachers' association estimates.

Trevor Calkins, president of Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, noted that protests last year succeeded in having the proposed levy cut by .68 of a mill to 41 mills.

But according to Smith the levy for 1980 will rise to 43.5 mills, translating into $32.6 million to be raised locally for basic education which the district estimates will cost $45 million next year.

Under the previous levy taxpayers would have paid $30.78 million of the total.

GVTA based its calculation on an assumed increase in the value of one mill, $750,000 compared with $700,000 this year. That would drop the provincial share of education costs from 31.76 per cent this year to 27.6 per cent in 1980, Calkins said.

And if property assessments rise 10 per cent, taxpayers will be paying $2.7 million more than would have under the 41-mill levy, dropping the provincial government's share to less than 26 per cent. Two years ago this share was 35.2 per cent.

The homeowner grant covers much of the education tax, and this year the average homeowner paid only $8 additional for education. An owner of a $55,000 house would pay nothing for education, Calkins said.

New rails, ties here for E & N

New rails and ties for track maintenance between Victoria and Duncan were dispatched today by the E & N Railway for use in coming weeks.

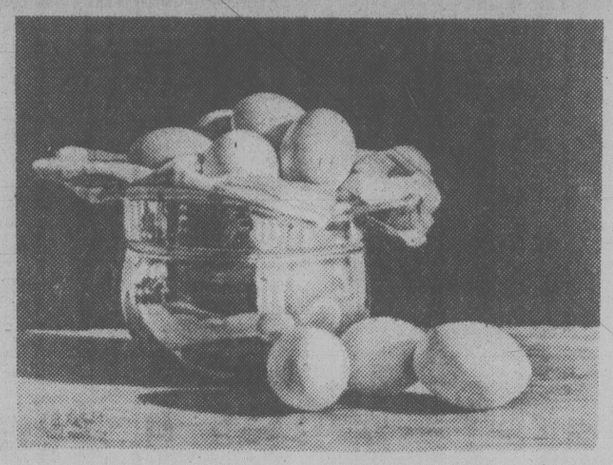

A work train left Victoria this morning, following last week's charges by the E & N Steering Committee that the right-of-way is unsafe for the kind of traffic being carried.

Committee chairman John Cooper thought the arrival of new materials was coincidental as preparations for maintenance usually require advance planning.

But he noted there had been three freight derailments on the northern section and one in the Duncan area in the last two months.

The steering committee, whose main concern has been the preservation and improvement of rail passenger service, expressed its concern for the safety of train crews and for the general condition of trackage which had been allowed to deteriorate.

U.S. helped Iranian coup: Shah

LONDON (UPI) — A U.S. air force general went to Tehran unannounced earlier this year and persuaded the Iranian military to stand idly by while their commander — the shah of Iran — was overthrown, the deposed shah said today in the first installment of his memoirs.

Now! — a weekly British news magazine — said it obtained exclusive rights in Britain to the memoirs of Mohammed Reza Pahlevi because the shah wanted to tell his story "in his own way and in the context of what he had done for his country."

The memoirs are due to be published in book form soon, but there have been reports the shah wanted them withheld because of his criticism of the United States, which granted him a temporary visa last month to undergo medical treatment.

In an article under the headline, "How the Americans Overthrew Me," the shah said Gen. Robert Huyser, deputy commander of the American air command in Europe, came to Tehran unannounced last January amid rumors of an imminent military coup.

"My officers were bound by their oath of allegiance to the crown and the constitution (to support the government)," the shah said. "As long as the constitution was respected, they would not falter.

"But the intelligence services of NATO and the CIA may have had good reason for thinking that the constitution would be abused. It was, therefore, necessary to neutralize the Iranian army. That was clearly the purpose which brought Gen. Huyser to Tehran."

The shah said Huyser made the "surprising" request that Gen. Ghara-Baghi, Iran's chief of staff, meet with Mehdi Bazargan, the head of the Iran Liberation Movement who later was appointed prime minister under the shah's successor, Ayatollah Khomeini.

"Gen. Ghara-Baghi told me of this, but only Gen. Huyser and Mr. Bazargan can say what decisions were taken," the shah said. "I know only that Gen. Ghara-Baghi used his authority to persuade the generals under his command to play no part in the events about to take place.

"I saw Gen. Huyser on a single occasion during his visit. He accompanied Ambassador Sullivan of the United States on one of the last interviews I had with him.

The shah said the commander-in-chief of his air force later summed up the situation at a trial before an Islamic court after the shah had left the country.

"Gen. Huyser threw the emperor out of the country like a dead mouse," the shah quoted the air force general as saying before he was executed.

Khomeini, the shah said, had long caused problems in Iran, including his part in a month of riots that followed announcement of a new law to limit individual ownership of agricultural land in 1963.

"The man behind the riots, pillaging and fires turned out to be someone practically unknown," the shah said. "He was an obscure agitator, the Ayatollah Khomeini, who was opposed to agrarian reform, to emancipation of women, to the principles of the White Revolution.

O type needed

Both positive and negative O type blood is in short supply and a special appeal is being made to donors of this category.

In the past year, supplies of blood have met demand but there have been intermittent shortages in specific groups and the clinic foresees the possibility of an impending problem with O type blood.

Clinics will be held: Monday at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 2:30 to 8 p.m.

Tuesday at the James Bay Community Centre, 140 Oswego from 2 to 8 p.m.

Wednesday at the CFB Esquimalt gym (Naden) from 2 to 8 p.m.

Thursday, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Newcombe Auditorium, Provincial Museum and again at Newcombe Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Two auto fires

Two unrelated fires caused $2,200 damage to vehicles in Fairfield Thursday night.

A Victoria fire department spokesman said a van owned by Victoria Carpet and Lino Ltd. caught fire at 1915 Fairfield about 6:30 p.m. when a fuel line ruptured. About $1,100 damage was done to its engine and cab.

At 11:18 firemen were sent to Cook and McClure where a Volkswagen camper van was burning. The $1,000 estimated damage was attributed to a gasoline heater.

Foreign sales push?

WASHINGTON (CP) — Michael Wilson, international trade minister for Canada, said Thursday that the Canadian government is considering tax incentives to encourage more export trade, but they won't be in next Tuesday's federal budget.

Speaking after a one-day meeting with representatives of the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank, Wilson said Ottawa wants domestic manufacturers to pursue foreign sales more aggressively in order to improve Canadian trade performance.

Canada is a member of both the World Bank and Inter-American Development Bank, which is an aid organization for Latin America. The banks have a wealth of market information available but Canadian businessmen aren't using it, Wilson suggested.

"It's a question of pushing away at them to take advantage of the opportunities that are there," he said of Canadian manufacturers.

Loot recovered

Sidney RCMP recovered $80 cash and about $1,500 worth of goods including two television sets.

A 17-year-old will appear in provincial court and his 15-year-old companion will go before juvenile authorities.

By Jove! That wind's really blowing hard!

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — A torrid wind in the solar system, blowing at speeds of up to 5.3 million kilometres an hour (3.3 million mph) from the environs of Jupiter, has been discovered by Johns Hopkins University scientists.

Dr. S. M. Krimigis of the university's applied physics laboratory said the Jovian wind extends at least 21 million kilometres (13 million miles) from the side of the planet which is away from the sun.

The discovery, reported Wednesday to the American Geophysical Union, was made by instruments aboard the Voyager 2 spacecraft which flew past Jupiter in July.

Saanich studies smaller Broadmead centre plan

A scaled-down Broadmead shopping centre proposal was submitted Thursday to Saanich by Broadmead Farms Ltd. and The Bay.

The new plan calls for a development of 174,000 square feet, replacing one of 229,000 square feet withdrawn several months ago.

Broadmead has changed its rezoning application from a request for a regional shopping centre to a district shopping centre.

Regional shopping centres — defined this summer by the Capital Region District and Saanich as exceeding 175,000 square feet — now require CRD approval.

Before the regional plan was revised a loophole allowed Saanich to independently approve a large shopping centre on the Tillicum Outdoor Theatre site.

Saanich agreed to the new definition when the CRD threatened legal action over the Tillicum project.

Broadmead Farms vice-president Merv Mawson said in a release Thursday the proposal was changed after the public criticized the application for the larger centre.

The new centre, called Broadmead Village, is proposed for 32 acres at the southeast section of Royal Oak Drive and Pat Bay Highway.

Mawson said the centre will be as unlike conventional centres as Broadmead is unlike conventional subdivisions.

He said the centre will not be "one great sprawling building."

Instead store shapes will be varied, giving the centre a "residential quality" designed to attract small compatible specialty shops. The centre will also include The Bay department store and a supermarket.

Construction of the first phase — a 40,000 square foot food store and 76,000 square feet of retail space — will begin as soon as the centre is approved.

Cost for the first stage is estimated at $4.5 million.

About 150 full-time staff will be employed when the first phase is completed and annual tax revenue to Saanich should be $117,000, the news release states.

The second phase is tentatively scheduled for 1983 and will include a specialty-oriented department store.

Foul cry goes up on appointments

A property owners' association in North Saanich has been accused of using its clout to influence two key council appointments.

The Northwest Mount Newton District Property Owners' Association is under fire from Ald. James Cumming whose supporters say was finessed out of both appointments — Capital Regional Board director and Saanich Peninsula Water Commission representative.

Former alderman Bob Thompson called Cumming's defeat "the dirtiest thing I ever saw; he was the only man who knew anything about water."

He said he had investigated the situation and discovered the voting for the two appointments was 'manipulated and influenced" by the property owners' group.

Criticism also has come from a freshman alderman and a former alderman.

The association wants to prevent Sooke Lakes water from being piped to the exclusive Ardmore district, fearing the move would affect zoning and raise taxes. The group's stand, however, isn't popular with all Ardmore residents, many of whom complain there is a shortage of water some months.

Cumming lost the votes by 4-3 margins in secret council balloting.

Many considered him the most qualified candidate and Cumming himself, upset by what happened, said he was the only one of the nominees who had ever attended a regional board or water commission meeting.

The CRD directorship went to Ald. Harold Parrott, a former president of the property owners' group, and the water commission job previously held by Cumming went to Ald. Alan Cornford, a director of the ratepayers' association.

Ald. Dermid Bingham, another freshman alderman, is also a director of the association.

The group's president, former North Saanich mayor Trevor Davis, is reported to be a Cumming rival.

Davis denied his association manipulated the vote but conceded the aldermen probaly talked to each other.

Ald. Julian Rangel, another newcomer to council, says he was approached by Davis who tried to "fill me in" on the Ardmore water situation.

Rangel, who nominated Cumming for the CRD director's post, said he is disillusioned with the manoeuvrings.

"I thought we were going to get away from cliques and preconceived arrangements."

Liquor licence hang-up

Rana and Gisele Nicolai have run into trouble trying to get a liquor licence for Le Provencal Restaurant which they opened Nov. 6 in Sangster, a district of Colwood.

An application was made to the Liquor Licensing Board and referred to Capital Regional District health officials for approval.

Senior public health inspector Mike Knapik says the septic tank system serving the building at 385 Lagoon Road is minimal and he is unable to recommend an extension to the building. He considers a liquor licence an extension.

The Nicolais, former owners of the Coq au Vin in Bastion Square, say their restaurant, formerly the Lagoon Pizza, is only open 3½ hours a day compared with the eight-hour day of the pizza parlor.

Knapik says the pizza parlor also had applied for a liquor licence and his department had taken the same stand.

He said the health department is only a reporting agency and it is up to the liquor licensing branch to make the final decision.

Carpark fund idea vetoed

Victoria city council's finance committee Thursday rejected a proposal by the city's parking commission to earmark surpluses from parkade revenue to buy property at Government and Pandora for a new carpark.

But the decision does not kill the proposal. The surplus of $294,043 simply remains in the commission's bank account until council decides to go ahead with the project. The plan is backed by the advisory planning commission and described as essential for the Chinatown revitalization scheme.

Ald. Robin Blencoe questioned the basic city policy of building municipally-owned parkades in the downtown area. He suggested that with the energy crisis and growing movement against the automobile it wouldn't be wise "for us to get into a willy-nilly program of building more parkades downtown."

"Maybe we should be building more barns for horses," finance committee chairman Ald. Frank Carson said with a touch of sarcasm.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said a detailed transportation study presented to council earlier this year forecast no slackening in automobile traffic.

Parking commissioner D.R. Abbott also informed the committee in a letter that the new Broughton Street parkade in the basement of the new Alfred Waddington provincial government building has produced $47,044 in revenue for the city in its first 14 months.

Royal in the red

The municipally-owned Royal Theatre is operating at a deficit but Ald. Ron McKenzie said Thursday it may break even by the end of the year.

City council's cultural development committee, chaired by McKenzie, was told that up to Oct. 31 the Royal was $11,560 in the red.

McKenzie said the theatre lost revenue because it had to close for renovations, according to a long-term plan to make the theatre a civic centre for the performing arts.

Revenue was budgeted at $48,000 for the year but to Oct. 31 only $22,898 in building rentals had been taken in.

Chase wrecks 3 cars

A driver arrested after three cars were demolished in a crash at a police roadblock Thursday night faces charges in Duncan provincial court.

Colwood RCMP said the motorist was one of four occupants of a car believed stolen in the Goldstream area.

The auto was chased by police over the Malahat to Koksilah, just south of Duncan, where two police cars had been set up to block traffic.

CLUES ACROSS

7. TRAINER not trailer. "TRAINER" fits more naturally into the context given. The employee would be out doing some job involving the trailer (e.g., transporting a horse) rather than simply "out with" — as if accompanying — a trailer.
10. RIDER not river. Aptly, a RIDER has a specific location at any given moment. On the other hand it is, rather, some point on the river, or some stretch of river, that may happen to be near a highway.
13. CUP not cap. It is "unfortunate" to find a wasp in the CUP you want to drink out of, but it hardly matters in the case of a cap.
15. TUNE not June. One can hardly feel a notably "uplifting" effect for 30 consecutive days.
16. DRAW not drag. If he isn't sorry to enter, he doesn't need people to drag him in, as by great effort; he is easy to DRAW in.
18. SLIM not slip. The clue calls for a descriptive word, an adjective rather than a noun.
21. SAWING not saving. If feeling the effort of saving, when evidently you want to save, the natural thing is to save less. In the case of SAWING, it is natural to "stop" for a rest, at least.
22. CLEAVER not cleaner. Since a cleaner may be hardly capable of doing real damage, CLEAVER is the stronger answer.
23. STORE not storm or story. Since a "novelist's description," as such, would be in a story anyway, it seems pointless to add "in a story." Whereas working "colleagues cope with difficulties in" a STORE, as they might arise, one would regard crew-mates rather as coping with a storm — in itself an obvious cause of difficulty.

CLUES DOWN

1. STARTED not starred. Their prime objective was getting STARTED, with perhaps hopes of eventually achieving stardom, rather then "getting starred."
2. FIXED not fired. A charge already FIXED and wired for detonation would not require any special expertise to fire with safety.
6. STRIPE not strips. It would require a narrow brush to paint a very narrow STRIPE on a surface. However, strips (e.g., of wood) could be painted with a brush wider than they are.
11. BUYS not buns. The open and general nature of the clue suits BUYS, rather than buns specifically.
12. KEY not keg. Since such a bulky thing as a keg would be hard to conceal from even inexpert searchers, specifying "expert," in the clue, favors KEY.
14. CANDLES not candies. It is CANDLES, rather than candies, that serve practical purposes.
17. FINGER not singer. There is little reason to imagine that a bad singer has the talent and the willingness to learn necessary to "soon" show improvement.
19. MICE not mace. The clue's emphatic phrasing suits MICE more aptly. Why should a woman be so anxious to be able to disclaim having the spice mace?

Indians' $20M claim 'too high'

Indians in B.C. have not paid anywhere near the $20 million they claim to have paid in illegal sales tax on electricity and gas purchased from B.C. Hydro and its predecessor B.C. Electric, a government spokesman said Thursday.

George Manuel, president of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, said his group will take the provincial government to court if they don't get back the money which he estimates was more than $20 million.

The B.C. Court of Appeal ruled earlier this week that Indians living on reserves are exempt from paying provincial sales tax on electricity and gas.

The government spokesman, who did not want to be identified, said the most the government collected in sales tax on electricity and gas from Indians on reserves in any one year was $90,000, "and that was when the sales tax was seven per cent."

He noted that the sales tax was three per cent from 1948 to 1954 when it was increased to five per cent. It was increased to seven per cent in 1976, reduced to five per cent in 1978 and four per cent earlier this year.

"Obviously it's nowhere near what George Manuel says it is."

He said Manuel's estimate that 60,000 Indians are affected is not correct "because there are only 34,000 Indians who live on reserves, and not all of them receive electricity, and they are all crammed into 6,000 or 7,000 houses."

Manuel said his group will claim for the "illegal tax dollars collected over the years by the provincial government on behalf of all Indians because all of them have lived on a reserve at one time or another."

The case revolved around Haida Indian Lillian Brown, who challenged a $4.38 sales tax charge on a Hydro bill to her Queen Charlotte Islands home.

Reforestation plea

The provincial government should make a long-term commitment to provide funding for reforestation, says the co-chairman of the forest land use liason committee of B.C.

At least $300 million is needed just to reforest some two million acres of backlog areas, and continuous funding will be needed to reforest areas to be logged in the future, Jack Toovery said.

"We're looking at the province as one giant publicly-owned tree farm," Toovey said.

Liasion committee representatives presented their case Wednesday to the economic development committee of cabinet.

Members of the liason committee include the B.C. Wildlife Federation, the Council of Forest Industries of B.C., the Federation of B.C. Naturalists, the Federation of Mountain Clubs of B.C., International Woodworkers of America, Sierra Club, Society for Pollution and Environmental Control and Western Guides and Outfitters.

Straight-talking Kierans unloads on Bank of Canada

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

KIERANS
. . . compelling testimony

OTTAWA — Eric Kierans, flipping with disconcerting ease among his former identities as a cabinet minister, a business tycoon and a troublemaking nationalist, vented 15 years worth of anger at the Bank of Canada Thursday.

It was a compelling performance. By the end of 90 minutes of testimony before the Commons finance committee, the blunt talking 65-year-old economist had his former Liberal colleagues twitching uneasily in their chairs, the half-dozen Conservatives in the room buzzing around in whispered strategy talks and the two New Democrats grinning broadly. The tension in the committee room was like static electricity in the air.

Kierans' basic message was that somebody has to make the Bank of Canada understand that Parliament — not the bank — is supposed to set the country's economic priorities.

The McGill professor told the committee: "The Bank of Canada is calling the shots and forcing the rest of the economy to adjust whether it likes it or not. Somebody has got to make them understand over there (the Bank of Canada is three blocks west of Parliament Hill) that they're subject to the political authority of Parliament.

This would mean several fundamental shifts in policy, Kierans said.

First and most important, the idea that it is somehow shameful or dangerous to allow the dollar to fall below the 85-cent level would have to be abandoned.

"I don't mind, as a Canadian, having our dollar at 75 cents. As a businessman, I'd pretty quickly get off my duff and do something to get it up to 78 cents, but I can't do that until I have a legitimate starting point, until I know what the dollar is actually worth in the first place."

The only way to find out, Kierans said, is to stop enticing foreigners to invest their money here with artificially high interest rates.

He advocated an immediate drop of at least two percentage points in the Bank of Canada's lending rate.

"If an 85- or 68-cent dollar can only be sustained by bribing people to tide us over our short-term economic problems, then I say an 85-cent dollar is overvalued. Obviously there's something wrong with the way we're managing our economy.

Kierans' second major recommendation was that large corporations be forced to pay interest on all the taxes the federal government has permitted them to defer for the last 15 years — a sum estimated at $15 billion.

His plan also calls for the government to cancel many of its special tax exemptions and depletion allowances to huge corporations. Kierans figures this privileged group of companies — those with assets of more than $25 million — pay an effective tax rate of 27 per cent, compared with 34 per cent for medium-sized Canadian firms.

If the government agreed to end its favored treatment of giant corporations as well as adopting Kierans' proposed two-per-cent drop in interest rates, he is convinced the country's small and medium-sized firms would charge up out of their economic doldrums and provide vigorous new competition. As a side-benefit, the finance department would be able to reduce its trouble-some annual deficit by between $3 billion and $4 billion.

"My recommendations hit mainly at the group of supercorporations and signify a major shift in economic policy," he acknowledged, then added: "But the old policy has failed completely."

Toronto Conservative MP Ron Ritchie, who came to Parliament from a $100,000-a-year executive job at Imperial Oil Ltd., reacted to Kierans' proposal with outraged disbelief.

"I find Mr. Kierans' perception of the business world surprisingly uninformed for a man of his experience," said the white-haired MP, in a tone of obvious sarcasm.

He called Kierans' claim that there are $15 billion in deferred corporation taxes just waiting to be collected "appallingly misleading" and said anyone remotely familiar with corporate financing is aware that deferred taxes are a perfectly legitimate accountant's tool for reducing a company's tax payments.

The government never had any intention of collecting these funds, nor does it now, Ritchie said.

The exchange took on something of a cozy, but nasty boardroom squabble as the two men — lapsing into first-name familiarity from Kierans' stock exchange days — argued about loopholes, well-known to both, in income tax law.

A totally different atmosphere — more like that of a smoke-filled political backroom — developed when the witness was under questioning from Liberal MPs, especially the party's finance critic, Herb Gray.

Kierans made it bitingly clear he blames the Liberals for allowing the Bank of Canada to acquire its stranglehold on economic policy. He accused the Liberals of failing to define the role of the central bank in economic policy and said the new government should appoint a commission of inquiry immediately to look into the matter. The Liberals listened uncomfortably but offered little defence.

In the final phase of rollercoaster session of mood changes, Kierans and NDP finance critic Bob Rae transformed the committee room briefly into a university lecture hall, with an eager 31-year-old socialist pushing a respected, but slightly eccentric professor for his latest thoughts on the free enterprise system.

Kierans was only too pleased to oblige.

Balance of trade deficit trimmed

OTTAWA (UPC) — Canada shaved its balance of payments deficit to $4.088 billion for the first nine months of the year — a decrease of $311 million because of increased exports of automotive products and petroleum.

Statistics Canada said Thursday Canada's balance of payments deficit — the difference between money spent for imports and money earned through exports — was $1.165 billion from July through September, down considerably from the first two quarters.

Greater exports of automotive products, natural gas, grains, forest products, crude petroleum, agricultural machinery, copper and nickel was the main factor behind the improved trade figures.

Finance Minister John Crosbie had forecast when he assumed office that Canada faced a $7 billion deficit in its transactions with the rest of the world.

Last July, Crosbie predicted in a mid-summer state of the economy address that the current account deficit was well on the way to the $7 billion mark — considerably larger than a $5.3 billion deficit recorded in 1978.

However, since then federal officials discovered an $800 million error in its trade figures by the New Brunswick-based Irving Oil Co. Ltd., which failed to report sales of petroleum products to Statistics Canada.

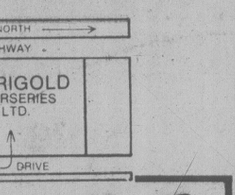

U.S. jobless rate down below 6%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. unemployment rate dropped to 5.8 per cent from six per cent in November, a sign that the economy remains healthier than most forecasters have expected, the government reports.

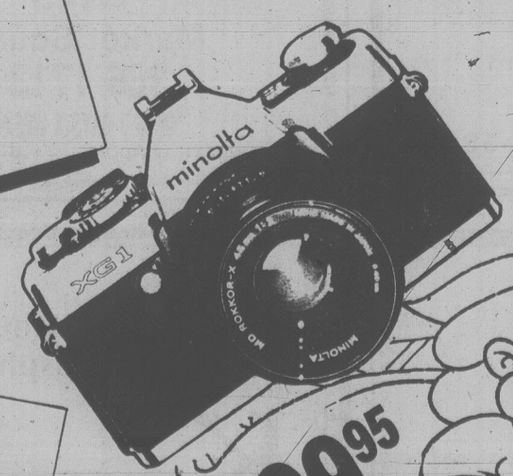

The labor department said total employment rose by 350,000 jobs during the month, while the number of jobless persons fell by 140,000 to just over six million.

During the last five months, the jobless rate has moved like a yo-yo, rising from 5.7 per cent in July to six per cent in August, back down to 5.8 per cent in September, up to six per cent again in October and back to 5.8 per cent.

All ages groups spellbound by McPherson performance

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Generation gaps weren't visible in the McPherson Playhouse audience that attended opening night of the Famous People Players' performance.

The near-sellout crowd contained a good proportion of children among the young, middle-aged and older adults but all were equally spellbound.

It was a night of spells, illusion and magic, greeted by the youngest observers with comments such as: "Where'd they go, Mummy?" when two colorful creatures evaporated in mid-air; and "They're in love" — the latter as two large affectionate kangaroos kissed and a valentine heart bloomed above their heads.

The black light puppet troupe opens its show (repeated tonight and Saturday including matinee and evening performances) with Saint-Saens Carnival of Animals, a composition perfectly suited to the imaginative talents of Diane Dupuy and her cast of 13.

As Jack McAndrew narrates the rib-tickling Ogden Nash verses a unique menagerie erupts on the stage, all in glowing brilliant color like animated bizarre paintings on black velvet. For the Danse Macabre portion of the suite, a wonderful dinosaur skeleton bumps its bones to the infectious rhythm.

Equally well chosen for these skillful puppeteers and their fantastical black light imagery is the main work in the second half of the program — Paul Dukas' The Sorcerer's Apprentice. The story of the apprentice, who in his master's absence, takes over his magic-making and is overwhelmed by it, is carried out in a brilliant combination of humor, charm, vitality and invention.

The show concludes with excerpts from its original concept of representing famous performers in large puppet form — Elvis Presley, Barbra Streisand and Liberace, complete with piano. These are cleverly devised and effective in combination with recorded actual performances.

An extra pleasure was the appearance of James MacDonald, the producer of many Disney production sound effects and the "voice of Micky Mouse" who, somewhat diffidently, demonstrated his invention of feuding bears (an oil lamp chimney) and a rolling wheel detached from an automobile — shot inside an inflated balloon held close to a mike.

A curtain call introduced the entire black-clad company, most of them handicapped, who had so effectively enchanted us.

Accidents: Don't blame the weather

If your car skids on an icy road or fails to make a curve in a heavy downpour, don't blame the weather, says Capital Region Safety council manager Ken Wyatt.

"The weather is never to blame for accidents — it's the drivers who are at fault," he says.

Wyatt said accidents increase during the winter months mainly because drivers don't adjust their driving to weather conditions, such as slowing down during a heavy downpour or stopping and parking on the shoulder of the road until visibility improves.

He offered these winter driving tips:

-Check anti-freeze in windshield wiper fluid and carry a windshield scraper.

-Check the battery.

-Use snow tires or chains on icy or snow covered roads.

-Carry a shovel and a bag of sand.

"The main thing is to adjust your speed to the weather conditions," he said.

"Follow another car at a safe distance. Remember it takes three to 12 times more distance to stop on snow and ice."

Wyatt said drivers should pay particular attention to their tires during the winter months.

Tires should be properly inflated.

'All the fat taken out' says public service boss

OTTAWA (CP) — The chief man responsible for hiring and firing public servants says all the fat has been taken out of the system and further staff reductions will force the government to decrease services.

That statement today by Edgar Gallant, public service commission chairman, appeared to fly in the face of a Progressive Conservative election promise to eliminate 60,000 government jobs over three years.

"We have taken out all the fat from the system," Gallant told a Commons committee.

During the dying months of the previous Liberal government, about 5,000 jobs were eliminated. The Conservatives want to reduce the government payroll even more to save taxpayers' money.

"The fat has been used up . . . and the productivity of public servants has increased considerably over the past few years and any further reductions would result in a reduction of services and quality,," Gallant said emphatically.

John Gamble (PC — York North) did not appear impressed.

The Toronto MP said there would be "jubilation in the streets" of his hometown if more were axed.

Quoting from the last auditor-general's report, Gamble said the public service is often hamstrung by an overabundance of "marginally competent" employees.

Hal Herbert (L — Vaudreuil) noted that in 1978 only .007 per cent of public servants were fired for incompetence.

Anita Szlazak, public service commissioner, said the so-called marginally competent employees were being weeded out because of the government's austerity measures and the resulting reduction in staff.

But Jean-Robert Gauthier (L — Ottawa Vanier), an MP who relies upon the votes of public servants to be re-elected, said highly-qualified government employees with 30 or more years service are being laid off because of the austerity measures.

Jail death

NORWAY HOUSE, Man. (CP) — RCMP are investigating the jail cell death of Russell Gordon Isbister, 26, of Norway House.

He was arrested Wednesday and found dead six hours later.

Carbon monoxide fumes fell 15 employees

OTTAWA (CP) — Carbon monoxide poisoning is blamed for sending 15 employees of a downtown department store and six ambulance drivers to hospital Thursday.

John Graham, a gas company official, said carbon monoxide and other combustion products escaped into the Metropolitan Store after a maintenance worker took a door panel off a boiler in the basement.

Graham said that removing the door created a partial vacuum in the boiler room, pulling the fumes into the rest of the building.

Canada's dollar holds high promise: Stevens

NEW YORK (CP) — Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens says the Canadian dollar deserves more attention as a real storehouse of value because it's a commodity-oriented currency.

In interviews and private talks to the Conference Board and the Canada Forum on Thursday, Stevens spread the message that Canada is on the threshold of a bountfil decade in the 1980s.

"Canada is unique among the industrialized nations in that we, in relation to our industrial output, our population, have a resource base that other industrial nations just don't have," Stevens said.

This is an age where people place their confidence in commodities, particularly precious metals, rather than inflated paper, Stevens noted.

But the Canadian dollar deserves better.

"If we link our industrial base to our resources in mining and energy, you see quickly Canada's strength," Stevens said.

"People are racing to own commodities, not money. When one realizes that the Canadian dollar is really a commodity dollar, one can see the impact increasing world demand for commodities will have on the value of the Canadian dollar."

The Canadian currency has shown surprising strength in recent weeks rather than being dragged down by a weaker U.S. dollar, moving into the 86-cent U.S. range.

Helping the surge of the Canadian dollar was the announcement by Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn of approval of large natural-gas imports to the United States, and a third-quarter reduction in Canada's balance-of-payments deficit.

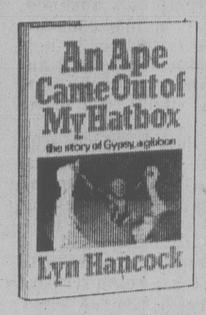

Stevens made clear that he not only is a dispenser of theories supporting private enterprise but a disciple strongly committed to the dogma of getting the government out of business, allowing the private sector to thrive without hindrance to create new wealth for Canadians.

Ont. jail guards back on job

TORONTO (CP) — Sean O'Flynn, president of the Ontario Public Service Employees union, was released from custody Thursday after being granted leave to appeal shortly after starting a sentence of 35 days for contempt of court for counselling jail guards to strike in defiance of a Supreme Court injunction.

Meanwhile, the province's 3,000 guards went back to work Thursday morning at 61 jails and correctional institutions, ending the illegal but peaceful three-day strike after they accepted an agreement with the government to submit their dispute to final and binding arbitration.

Although the guards' wage contract with the government does not expire until Dec. 31, they went ahead with the strike to win the right to bargain as a unit separate from the 6,000 other union members who work as ambulance drivers, mental health counsellors and psychiatric workers.

The government was granted an injunction by the Supreme Court of Ontario Saturday forbidding the strike.

In sentencing O'Flynn, 44, Mr. Justice Douglas Carruthers said the union leader seemed determined to rise above the law and take 3,000 law-abiding citizens with him.

Carruthers told O'Flynn that he had openly defied the courts and had been irresponsible to his family, friends, students, the union rank-and-file, and to himself.

Brinks pair on trial in $3M nab

MONTREAL (CP) — Two former Brink's Canada Ltd. employees plotted to rob one of the company's armored trucks outside a downtown bank in 1975, an unindicted co-conspirator told a Superior Court trial Thursday.

Real Boisvert, a 40-year-old construction foreman, said he formulated plans in September, 1975, for a $3 million robbery from a Royal Bank of Canada branch with Brink's employees Gilles Lachapelle and Roland Brunette, and two other men.

Lachapelle, 49, and Brunette, 39, have pleaded not guilty.

Plans to rob a Brink's truck outside the co-operative were scrapped indefinitely after two police cars were seen in a nearby parking lot the day the incident was to have taken place, Boisvert said.

CANADIAN TRANSPORT COMMISSION
NOTICE OF PRE-HEARING CONFERENCE

The Railway Transport Committee of the Canadian Transport Commission will hold a pre-hearing conference in Hull, Quebec, December 14, 1979 on the following matter:

— A review of the uniform classification of accounts prescribed by the Railway Transport Committee for use by the railway companies under Section 328 of the Railway Act to plan procedures to be followed and to define what is to be considered at the public hearing.

Section 328 of the Railway Act states that the commission shall prescribe for the Canadian National Railway Company and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company a uniform classification and system of accounts and returns of their assets, liabilities, revenues and working expenditure that relate to railway operations.

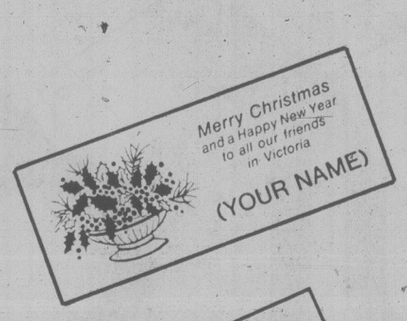

The pre-hearing conference will start at 10:00 a.m. Friday December 14, 1979 at the Conference Centre, Outaouais Room, Main Floor, 140 Promenade Du Portage, Hull, Quebec.

All persons attending the pre-hearing conference may make submissions and expect to be able to follow the proceedings in the official language of their choice.

It is expected that the date for the hearing in this matter will be announced at the pre-hearing conference.

Wider vets' benefits introduced

By Bob Douglas

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation that would extend veterans pension benefits to more persons was introduced in the Commons Thursday by Veterans Affairs Minister Allan McKinnon.

The legislation would also amend the War Veterans Allowance Act to permit more First World War veterans to qualify for allowances.

The bill would make a number of other changes to the Pension Act, the Former Prisoners of War Act, War Veterans Allowance Act and Civilian War Pensions and Allowances Act.

The changes follow strong pressure from veterans organizations and opposition spokesmen such as New Democratic MP Stanley Knowles, MP for Winnipeg North Centre, and party spokesman on pension issues.

The bill wouldmake more widows and dependent children of disabled veterans eligible for pension benefits when the veterans die.

At present, widows of veterans who receive 47 percent disability pensions or less get no benefits when their husbands die.

But the new legislation would gradually drop this restriction over a seven-year period. For example, widows and dependent children of veterans with disabilities ranging between 38 per cent and 47 per cent would qualify for benefits in the first year.

The government did not include in the legislation a proposal to tie disability pensions to a composite salary of five categories of unskilled public servants. Knowles has said this should be done so that disability pensions rise automatically when the pu lic service salaries climb.

More than 134,000 war veterans get disability pensions.

Under the new legislation, the newly eligible widows of disability pensioners would get 50 per cent of the pension or war allowance paid to the veteran at the time of his death. There would be no change in benefits for widows of veterans receiving disability pensions of 48 per cent or higher.

First World War veterans now will be able to qualify for war allowances whatever their period of service in Britain. The War Veterans Allowance Act now says First War veterans do not qualify if they have served for less than one year in Britain only.

Under an other change, pensioners will be allowed to receive $100 a year in interest income—up from $50—without affecting the benefits they receive.

The bill also proposes a number of other technical and administrative changes.

Knowles said he is disappointed the government didn't drop the 48-per-cent disability ceiling all at once rather than doing it in stages. And he said the changes should take effect immediately rather than April 1 next year.

The fact disability pensions are not legally tied to the public service composite salary is a "serious shortcoming," Knowles said.

Another rebuff on holiday

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be no Heritage Day holiday in 1980 — again.

Stanley Knowles, NDP house leader, cited a telegram from 100,000 railway workers Thursday in the Commons in a bid to get the government to to declare the third Monday in Febraury a statutory holiday.

However, Progressive Conservative House leader Walter Baker replied simply the government is not contemplating any legislation on the subject.

Epp alters reply in Yukon dispute

OTTAWA (CP) — The justice department gave Northern Affairs Minister Jake Epp the green light in October to push the Yukon territory closer to provincehood without consulting Parliament, the minister said Thursday.

Epp told a Commons committee the justice department reviewed a draft letter reducing the powers of Ione Christensen, the Yukon commissioner who later resigned over the matter, before it was sent out.

"The position was quite clear," Epp told Liberal MP Ian Watson (Chateauguay) at the Indian affairs committee. "In their opinion the letter did not violate the Yukon Act."

"I do not intend to reconsider the position."

Epp then committed a faux-pas by saying that he did not intend to recommend to Justice Minister Jacques Flynn that he take the matter to the Supreme Court of Canada as the Council for Yukon Indians had asked earlier Thursday.

The council alleged that Epp's actions were unconstitutional.

Epp, realizing that he could not approach Flynn because of the obvious conflict of interest, quickly recanted.

Epp, in a second reply to Watson, said Flynn would make an independent decision.

"I have not contacted him nor do I intend to do so."

The council have asked Flynn to refer Epp's action to the Supreme Court. Flynn told the Senate Thursday he had not seen the request but would consider it.

In a letter to Flynn, council lawyer Don Rosenbloom says: "My clients take the position that this action is both unconstitutional and in violation of the Yukon Act."

Grits battle job chop

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals are putting up a strong fight to halt the government's plan to drop the Canada Works job-creation program this spring.

But they're facing strong resistance from Employment Minister Ron Atkey who says the program is a waste of money and had become a source for members of Parliament to "dispense patronage in their constituencies."

The Liberal battle reached a peak Thursday in the Commons during debate on an opposition day motion condemning the government for creating no jobs since taking office six months ago.

The motion singled out "the inhumane cutbacks in the Canada Works program that have eliminated (from the program) hundreds of communities across Canada that have been suffering from high levels of unemployment."

The motion was proposed by Francis Fox, Liberal employment critic MP for Blainville Deux Montagnes and one of many MPs in his party who say if the current Canada Works cuts are harmful, the end to the program will be devastating.

Canada Works grants go to community groups.

New tax rate set for athletes

OTTAWA (CP) — Two pieces of legislation, including one sanctioning new tax rates for many types of small business, was given royal assent Thursday and became law.

One act increases the income tax rate to 33.3 per cent for small businessmen, such as athletes and professionals, who have incorporated themselves. The previous rate was 25 per cent.

The former Liberal government had proposed that such people be made to pay the full rate of between 46 and 51 per cent.

The other bill given assent amends customs tariffs and makes changes in trade agreements which Canada has with Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

Sask. workers talking to conciliator

REGINA (CP) — Conciliator Sid Walter and both sides in the three-week-old provincial employees' strike met Thursday night and will resume talks today.

He declined to comment on the progress of the talks other than that "they have been beneficial."

The 11,000-member Saskatchewan Government Employees Association went on strike Nov. 16 to back contract demands for an 18-per-cent pay increase and a one-year contract.

The Public Service Commission offered a two-year contract with increases of eight per cent in the first year and 7.5 per cent in the second.

Before the judge

A 22-year-old man charged with a credit union holdup Wednesday in Central Saanich made a brief appearance in Victoria provincial court Thursday morning.

Marcel Vitor Poupart, 2065 Goldsmith, was charged with armed robbery and use of a firearm during a holdup.

He was remanded until today for possible election of trial method and bail hearing by Judge William Ostler.

The Saanich Peninsula Savings and Credit Union, 7103 West Saanich, was robbed of $6,193 by a rifle-toting man shortly after noon Wednesday. The gunman lost half his loot before getting out the front door when the shopping bag holding the money broke. Saanich police arrested a suspect in a vehicle in front of Cordova Bay elementary school.

A 19-year-old who received a six-month sentence from Judge Frederick Melvin in Victoria county court Nov. 20 got concurrent, nine-month sentences Thursday from Ostler.

Gregory Robert Twyman, 2632 Shelbourne, changed pleas to guilty on charges of possession of a key suitable for breaking into coin-operated machines, possession of stolen property, and possession of marijuana.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said a search warrant was executed July 22 at Twyman's residence following the discovery of marijuana plants in the window. Police found the key, which opens vending machines, and some coin banks, watches, a lighter, and rings which were taken in a July 15 break-in at 2520 Forbes.

Twyman had three previous convictions for assault causing bodily harm and a Nov. 10, 1977, conviction for breaking and entering for which he received a three-month jail term and two years probation. Smith noted that Twyman was still under that probation order when the three offences were committed.

Defence lawyer Trudi Brown said her client was a heroin and "speed" user until May of this year when he contracted hepatitis. She said Twyman will seek psychiatric help when released.

Three persons charged with a June 18 Central Saanich break-in at Fay's Brentwood One-Hour Cleaning, 7183 West Saanich, were not committed for higher court trial as reported here Nov. 23.

A 33-year-old man who has had a criminal record since the age of 17 was given concurrent sentences of two years, one year, and one month after pleading guilty to impersonation, driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08, and possession of a stolen truck.

Court was informed Dennis David Bristo was seen by a legislative security officer at 7 a.m. Nov. 18 spinning the wheels of a truck on a Michigan Street lawn after hitting a parking sign.

Bristo gave police identification in the name of Wayne David Webster. After giving breath test readings of .18 and .16 Bristo was released on an appearance notice. Police found out later the truck was stolen from Saunders and Hitchman's body shop three days earlier.

Bristo failed to show up in court Nov. 28 but was spotted by a policeman the next evening at the Douglas Hotel beer parlor where he gave identification in the name of Gerald Wayne Brewster.

Police checked at the address given and the real Brewster said the identification was stolen from him at a party.

Duty legal aid lawyer Barry Mah Ming said Bristo met a person at a bar, wanted a ride to a party, and was given the keys to the stolen truck.

"It's difficult not to regard this man with sorrow," Ostler said. "He seems to be intelligent and healthy, and there seems to be no reason in the world why he can't behave. But he's a persistent, unrepentent, dishonest man."

Ostler handed out the two-year term for the possession of the stolen truck, one year for the impersonation, and one month for the drinking-driving offence.

Jury urges backup warnings

Audible warning devices should be installed on all vehicles having restricted rear vision, a coroner's jury recommended Wednesday at Sidney.

The inquest was into the death of Wilhelmina Alice Mattick, 71, of 5273 Cordova Bay, who was killed by a truck backing up on Sidney wharf about 1 p.m. Nov. 2. It was driven by Kim Hayward, 2296 Henry.

Death was accidental, the jury found, but any vehicle having restricted rear vision should be equipped with an audible signal to warn of its approach in reverse, the jury reported to coroner John Davidge.

Milfoil weed battle lost in two lakes - Rogers

The provincial government has given up any hope of eliminating the Eurasian milfoil weed from Skaha and Okanagan Lakes, Environment Minister Steve Rogers says.

Rogers said the only way to combat the weed is to use chemicals, such as 2,4-D, but those chemicals are no longer effective in the two lakes.

"It would appear chemical treatment is out of the question for Lake Okanagan. We can cut it down with mechanical harvesters and clean the beaches off, but as far as eradicating the milfoil, five or six years ago, or even as little as four years ago perhaps we could have turned the tide on it, but now it's not possible."

Rogers said the government will turn over its harvesters to the municipalities of Kelowna and Penticton and will continue to fund projects to combat the weed on a cost-sharing basis.

He said chemical treatment will continue in Wood and Kalamalka Lakes, and any other lakes in the Okanagan water system where the weed takes root.

Environmentalists have protested the use of 2,4-D saying it causes cancer and birth defects.

Avoid smallpox vaccination: Mair

Health Minister Rafe Mair has warned British Columbians not to be vaccinated against smallpox unless they plan to visit countries which require vaccination certificates.

About 35 countries still insist that visitors be vaccinated even though the World Health Organization says the disease officially no longer exists.

Mair said there is a recognized medical risk associated with smallpox vaccine and people should not be vaccinated unless it is required by the country they plan to visit.

"I'd go so far as to advise people to refuse vaccination unless they plan to visit those countries that still demand it — without medical grounds, I might add," the minister said.

He said people planning overseas trips should check with their local public health office.

Execution try: defence stick to issue: Crown

The jury in the B.C. Supreme Court trial of Thomas Young Lackey was urged Thursday to throw out the charges because of false testimony — and to ignore this allegation as irrelevant and to stick to the issue.

The contrasting appeals were given by defence counsel David Gibbons of Vancouver and Crown counsel Robert Mulligan in their closing arguments in the ninth day of the trial.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan was to address the jury today, after which it will start its deliberation on the nine charges in the indictment.

Lackey, 36, is accused of attempted murder of Matsqui Penitentiary guard Alexander Smith, 55, by stabbing him, intentionally wounding Smith by stabbing him, escape while being escorted to a hospital in Matsqui municipality and theft of a citizen's car, all on Nov. 3, 1978.

He is also accused, in Saanich on Nov. 8, 1978, of attempting to murder Sgt. William Hillcoat of Saanich police by shooting him with a shotgun, intentionally wounding Hillcoat by discharging a shotgun, possession of a shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace, theft of a private citizen's car while armed with a shotgun (robbery), and using a shotgun during flight after committing an indictable offence.

Gibbons urged the jury not to be confused with technicalities because the law is not a fool and does not convict on technicalities.

He said police officers lied to the court "and I think you know that" and courts have said that if the Crown case is so tainted with lies, especially from the police, the case can be thrown out and the accused found not guilty.

The police would have the jury believe that Lackey was shot accidentally, he said.

He said Lackey couldn't have been shot accidentally because Constable Robert Love, if his evidence was accepted, was holding Lackey's hair from behind with his left hand and his gun was in his right hand.

Lackey was shot through the left temple at a range of less than three inches according to a neurosurgeon called by the defence, said Gibbons.

"It's absolutely disgraceful, I was overwhelmed at the disgrace. This was an attempted execution. It is horrific to think it could have been you or I," he said.

Gibbons said Hillcoat testified he didn't know who shot the bullet and Love testified he would not agree it was his gun which caused the wound to Lackey's head.

"Of course it wasn't," said Gibbons. "It was Hillcoat who came round and shot Lackey in the head. I don't think there is any doubt about that. If they lied like that, their whole case is tainted."

Gibbons also charged that Love "fiddled with his bullets" because the single spent bullet was not the same as the others in his revolver.

Gibbons said police testified Hillcoat shot four times and Love once but he counted six shots — in Lackey's left leg, right leg, wallet, heel, head and in the car door.

When Lackey was shot in the left side of his head, losing his eye, "the state has taken its pound of flesh."

Mulligan said the trial was a solemn inquiry into whether Lackey committed any of the nine offences he is charged with and Gibbons didn't deal with the issue facing the jury.

The jury does not have to decide whether a police officer deliberately shot Lackey, he said. No one was charged with shooting Lackey and if that happened, it will be dealt with another day by another jury.

Prison conditions and solitary confinement were not an issue the jury has to solve.

What the jury has to decide, he said, is whether or not Lackey committed any of the offences charged in the indictment.

Several other people had been put on trial to some extent, such as the police accused of purposefully shooting Lackey, stealing his money and falsifying evidence, prison officials accused of atrocities, a lawyer in Prince George called incompetent.

Mulligan said they had been criticized and villified and not all were present to defend themselves.

But all of that, he said, is not what the jury has to decide.

Even if everything the police said was disregarded, he said there is still a case established against Lackey.

Mulligan said if a policeman wanted to execute Lackey, he would not shoot in the side of the head at an upwards angle missing the brain.

There was absolutely no doubt who fired the first shot which was admitted by Lackey. The first shot which struck Hillcoat amounted to the offence of attempted murder or wounding with intent. The offence was complete when he fired the first shot, said Mulligan.

What happened after that didn't change the fact that Lackey fired the first shot.

"The facts are clear, he is guilty," said Mulligan.

One of the last defence witnesses, Prof. Michael Jackson of UBC law school, was qualified as an expert in penal institutions and the nature and effect of solitary confinement and discipline on people.

He said solitary confinement leaves an indelible mark on people including a burning hatred of authority.

It amounted to an assault on the human spirit and quoted Charles Dickens writing in 1844 of the agony and dreadful punishment of solitary confinement which, said Dickens, no man has the right to inflict on others and worse than torture of the body.

Jackson said that, in animals, solitary confinement without escape induces violence and insanity.

The most horrifying effect, he said, is that when one inmate goes over the edge and attempts or commits suicide, other prisoners in the same block experience the man's death because they all know how close they are to killing themselves.

In cross-examination, Jackson agreed it is becoming more and more true that a very small number of people end up in places like B.C. Penitentiary and that there are medium and minimum-security penitentiaries with recreational and education programs.

He also agreed that few prisoners spend time in solitary confinement. When asked if just the most difficult ones serve in solitary, he replied "that is the theory. My experience belies that."

He did agree there are occasions when it is necessary to "dissociate" a prisoner from others, including inmates inciting a riot, planning an escape or attacking another inmate.

Jackson said there is a "very different day-to-day regime" in Matsqui Penitentiry compared with B.C. Penitentiary.

(Lackey was transferred to Matsqui from the Pen in 1977. He testified Matsqui is pretty good "for an institution" but he left because he thought "I was going crazy in there, I couldn't take the pressure in there.")

Jackson said he can well imagine that some victims of crime never get over the trauma and said "certainly" when asked if policemen have a high tension, difficult job.

Fire victim identified

A man who died in a fire Monday has been identified as Wilfred Gerald Sutherland, 54, of 521 Simcoe.

His name had been withheld pending notification of next-of-kin but efforts by police to locate any relatives failed.

A coroner's inquiry will be held.

Hearing set for American

An immigration hearing will be held Monday for a man who turned himself in to Victoria police in connection with a shooting in Lacey, Wash.

The man was identified as Gary Parker, 28, of Olympia, Wash., who is alleged to have entered Canada under false pretences.

Det. Barney McClanahan of the Lacey police department said a warrant charging first-degree assault will be served on Parker.

Police said a man with a 12-gauge shotgun entered McNamara's orthopedic clinic and shot him in the face. He is in serious condition.

"We don't really have a motive," McClanahan said.

UVic student awarded clerkship

He is one of only 10 Canadians to win the honor.

Farley, active as a student member of the UVic senate, will graduate from law school in May.

Autoplan rate hike likely out of the auto insurance field unless they are prepared to give the customer the same kind of deal as ICBC is offering.

The FAIR program is designed to eliminate age, sex, marital status and geographical location as criteria for calculating premiums. Starting in 1980 premiums will be calculated on the driver's safety record.

"The underlying problem the private companies have to face is that ICBC returns 93 cents on the dollar to the consumer. It's very difficult for the private companies to do that. In fact the average is somewhere in the 65 to 70 per cent arena," Sherrell said.

He said if they can't meet the competition from ICBC "the shareholders of their companies won't permit them to stay if they have continuing losses."

At the same time, Sherrell served notice that ICBC plans to expand its general insurance operation.

He said at a time when the private companies are talking about the need for rate increases, ICBC made $2 million profit in six months on the limited amount of general insurance it now sells — about $26 million worth a year.

Sherrell said ICBC officials are going into B.C.'s communities, surveying the insurance needs of families, homeowners and businessmen.

"If those needs are not being fully served, we'll jump in and we'll offer the product."

Sherrell said, however, that wiping out ICBC's competition is not his goal.

"We don't look to what the competition is doing. We look to what we're doing in keeping up with the need of the consumer. That's the only way you can keep a monopoly clean and wholesome," he said.

"My goal is to be sure ICBC never again sees the kind of days that it's had in the past," Sherrell said.

"You can quote me on that and watch me, year in and year out, to see if I'm successful."

Did that statement have political overtones?

"No, no, no," Sherrell replied.

Death toll 19 in rail smash

LAS FRANQUESES DEL VALLES, Spain (UPI) — A team of firemen using tracking dogs has discovered the body of the last victim of the crash of a runaway train into a passenger train, raising the death toll to 19.

Blast rends ship aground

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — A thunderous explosion shook this historic city and flames, shooting almost two kilometres high, lit up the night sky as the grounded Romanian oil tanker Independenta continued to burn early today.

The 88,000-ton tanker has been burning since Nov. 15 when it exploded and ran aground after a collision with the Greek freighter Evrialy killing 40 seamen.

The ship ran aground about 600 metres from the Asian shore of this bustling city of 4.5 million people and halted shipping for most of the day in the Bosporus Straits, connecting the Sea of Marmara and the Black Sea.

Rodeo cheers behind him

An old hothead cools it

By PAT DUFOUR

At 46, Scotty MacDonald looks like many a man who's hit hard times but there is a difference — he can cling to memories of the years he bathed in the adulation of cheering crowds.

Remnants of his past remain in his saddle-molded stance, easy drawl, the weathered cowboy hat and boots.

"The Deuce brothers bet me $100 apiece that I wouldn't ride any horse and not touch leather. By luck I did do this and I became a bronc rider."

He never looked back, earning good purses around the rodeo circuit until he was almost 19.

During the first year, he says, he was earning $3,000 a week.

"I was 18 when I got broken up in Dallas, Texas. I got trampled by the horse I rode, a big roan called Sloufa. I rode him the 10 seconds. The harness went and I hung on to the saddle to wait for the pickup riders.

He'd like to teach youngster the tricks of his trade

"It was four or five seconds and I couldn't take the jarring any longer."

After he hit the ground, the horse kicked him twice until Lash Laroo, a whip expert, drove him off.

He spent 18 months in hospital with a broken back. Like most riders he belonged to the Cowboys Protection Association.

"I paid $150 a year. If you got killed they paid all funeral expenses. I got $90 a month and they paid for all medical expenses, special nurses and doctors."

The day he was released he went to a rodeo, knowing it would mean serious re-injury if he ever rode a bronc again. He resisted the temptation.

"I rode around the ring on a good riding horse. They (his fellow riders) had thought they were carrying a dead man out the day I broke my back. But this day they tossed off their hats and were whooping and hollering . . . it makes you feel pretty proud to be alive and associated with such a great thing."

From then on he tried his hand at a number of things. He drove a truck but it was too hard on his spine. He made furniture for a time, and then ice at a community rink.

"I'd be working ranches in the summertime. A cowboy is a hothead. He's got his own mind, he's got his own way. I'd be hankering to get back to the horses and cattle again.

"You'd be in a slump and you'd get so fed up in the spring, you'd take a look outside and see the leaves on the trees and the grass green, you'd have to go."

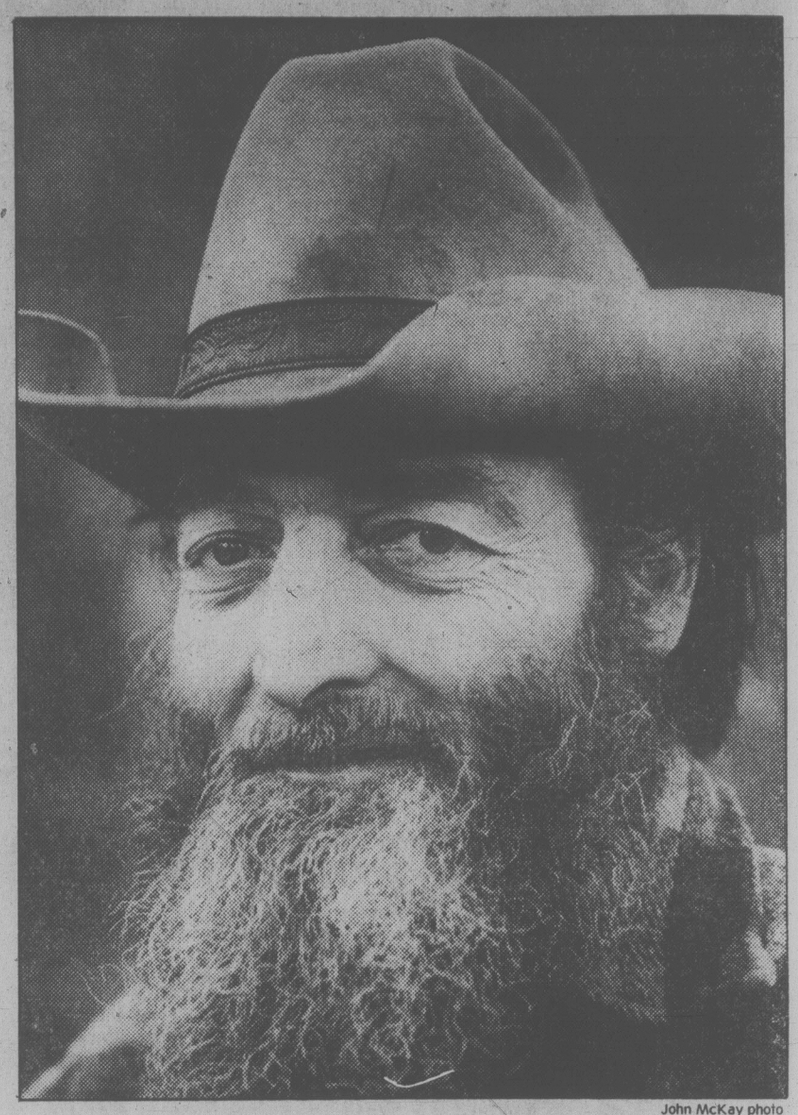

He made his way to Victoria, mostly because of the good weather. Unable to get a job, he still has dreams . . . of teaching some youngster the tricks of his trade.

"Maybe he can go further than me and this is country where you could start a rodeo school. It's just not ranch boys go into rodeo any more, it's city boys too."

He dreams of helping such a youngster make his way to the Oklahoma City King Cowboy Trophy "which is number one in the world."

With his dreams he also faces reality.

"I'm just a broken-down cowboy trying to find in his last days of good work a half decent job where they don't mind me wearing my riding hat and cowboy boots on the job."

TOWN TALK

Labor takes care of its own, right? Well . . .

It was only this week that the Victoria Labor Council got around to taking care of secretary Larry Ryan's salary increase for 1979.

The council's financial situation isn't that healthy apparently but the hope is that things will pick up early next year.

Ryan was given an eight-per-cent increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, on an annual salary of $15,700.

Wooden headboards with evil images in them apparently aren't all that rare.

Mrs. Leo Guigueno called Town Talk to say she too had a headboard like the one recently sold by Mrs. Norma Harris, who got rid of it because the image looked too much like the devil.

Mrs. Guigueno says her husband eventually used their headboard to make doors for a stereo unit.

But it was still pretty scary looking, she says.

Rounding up 18 bibles for the swearing in of Capital Regional District board members this week posed a challenge for the staff.

It also turned up some interesting inscriptions.

Board chairman Jim Campbell, for example, swore his oath on a bible that had the inscription: "To Violet, from Dad and Mom."

Still at the regional level, Ald. Bob Wright lived up to his name when board members voted on the first ballot to elect a chairman.

He predicted the three candidates, Campbell, Shirley Dowell and Howard Sturrock would each get six votes.

Wright was right on.

Campbell won by two votes on the second ballot.

Salt Spring Island may pride itself on its homespun, back-to-nature qualities but there are still a few pockets where new social standards haven't broken through.

Last month the Driftwood reported that almost a third of the eating establishments on the island have a policy against mothers nursing their babies on the premises.

"How dare any establishment or individual dictate how a baby be nourished!" says Gill May of Ganges. "Would proprietors and patrons prefer a screaming infant to a satisfied suckling one?"

On the other hand, Victoria is a model of progressiveness. May and a friend recently ate at the Princess Mary restaurant.

"My friend breast-fed her baby for one hour and not once did she receive an admonition or request to leave the restaurant."

If Santa Claus were a seafaring man, his ship would probably be propelled by eight seahorses and a red-nosed snapper.

And to kids in the Gulf and San Juan islands, Santa comes by sea, aided not by fish but by Jaycees from Victoria and Bellingham.

The big visit this year is the weekend of Dec. 14-16. Victoria Jaycees head south to visit kids on the San Juan Islands, while Bellingham Jaycees go north to the Gulf Islands, usually landing at Ganges on Saturday night and hitting the Outer Islands Sunday.

School trustee John Young thinks the education ministry should readily endorse plans for capital improvements to district schools because two thirds of them are broken down or worn out.

Fellow trustee Win Mott concurred that buildings show their age.

"But I would not agree that our buildings are a lot of junk. I prefer to think of them as pre-heritage."

If you're a new boat skipper and don't yet know your nautical ropes, perhaps what you need is an "experienced boat."

We noticed such craft are being offered in the Times classified section by Thunderbird Yacht Sales out in Sidney. Obviously they're better than mere "used boats."

Perhaps the ferry skippers wouldn't have any gripes if all those fishermen in Active Pass were operating intelligent boats.

Victoria artist and sculptor Carmen Rudd wants to see a display of dancing waters along the Belleville Street side of the Inner Harbor and sent Town Talk a snapshot with an inked-in fountain jetting water up to 40 feet in the air in front of the Welcome to Victoria floral sign.

Rudd would light the fountain at night to add movement, light and sound to a sombre atmosphere.

He went to the provincial government with the idea and former tourism minister Grace McCarthy was enthusiastic.

It got as far as the talking stage with government architects and engineers who calculated a rough figure of $100,000 for the project.

By JAKE BANKY

The provincial government has made an offer for part of the collection of 27 Emily Carr paintings being sold by Vancouver industrialist George Clark.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe said today the offer went in Thursday but he would give no details.

"I'd rather not say any more at this stage. I don't want to prejudice the negotiations," he said. "An offer has been made, we think it's a good offer and we're just waiting for a reply.

However, he said the offer is contingent on the participation of an anonymous Victoria woman who is offering to donate $700,000 toward the purchase if she gets to keep one of the paintings.

Wolfe would not say what portion of the collection the province would like to acquire, but he says it is a "substantial portion."

Asked when the Keenlyside Gallery, which is handling the sale, is expected to respond, he said:

"They want to consider it and I assume they want a couple of days, anyway."

Asked why the province wants only part of the collection the minister replied:

"Naturally in any selection of art work of this kind, some pieces are far more interesting than others."

He also said the province now has about 500 Emily Carr works, some in the Vancouver Art Gallery, some in the Victoria Art Gallery and others in the Provincial Archives.

In Vancouver, gallery owner Karen Keenlyside said the province wants to buy only 19 of the 27 paintings. The eight it is not interested in are from Emily Carr's early period when she painted Indian totems and villages, of which the province already has a fair number in its collection housed in the archives.

"I presented the offer to the owner and he made a counter offer and they made another offer," said Keenlyside. "Now we're just sitting and waiting."

In the meantime, she said she is considering three other Canadian offers for the whole collection from private individuals. Bids from outside Canada had been made, she said, but they are not in the running.

'Angels' flew with him

A civilian American pilot discovered Thursday the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt has a friendly escort service.

Floyd Saltz was flying from Prince Rupert to Port Hardy in his single-engine Piper Supercub when he decided to switch fuel tanks. During the transfer 40 gallons were lost.

"He was pretty twitchy," a centre spokesman said today.

He said Saltz decided to head back to Prince Rupert — an hour's run — after estimating he had enough fuel for 58 minutes.

A Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox's 442 Squadron and a Canadian Coast Guard helicopter from Prince Rupert were despatched. The helicopter escorted Saltz to Prince Rupert.

The spokesman said Saltz landed just as the engine cut out.

"He was one happy boy," the spokesman said.

Supervisor apologizes but workers still off job

About 70 Langford and Colwood sign shop and yard employees of the provincial highways ministry remained off the job today in a wildcat walkout sparked by a cancelled doctor's appointment.

The walkout began at noon Thursday and the employees voted this morning to stay off the job despite an apology from their supervisor.

The workers are upset with supervisor Arnie Davis because he phoned the doctor of employee John Whittaker regarding Whittaker's 1:30 p.m. appointment for last Wednesday.

As a result of that phone call — a highways ministry spokesman today blamed it on a nurse's error — Whittaker's appointment was cancelled.

Whittaker had been injured earlier and was visiting the doctor as part of a follow-up program on his Workers Compensation Board claim.

The ministry spokesman said Davies was calling only to see if it was possible to have the appointment scheduled for some time after 3 p.m., Whittaker's quitting time.

He said there have been a number of such appointments made by the employees during their working hours and it makes it difficult to keep up the assembly-line style work at the sign shop.

Somehow Davies' inquiry was interpreted by the doctor's nurse as a request for cancellation, he said.

However, Don Burns, spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union, said today the workers' collective agreement allows the employees to take up to two hours in a shift for a doctor's appointment.

"The phone call shouldn't have been made," Burns said.

He said the employees voted this morning to stay off the job despite Davies' apology because the latest incident is only a symptom of a deeper labor relations problem at the Jacklin Road highways ministry site.

Davies was involved in a dispute several months ago which resulted in a one-day walkout.

November dip precedes Christmas rebound

By AL FORREST

The Victoria economy took a sharp dip during the first two weeks of November, shattering merchants' hopes they could go directly from the tourist season to Christmas without a letdown.

Retail sales were lower than expected during the first half of the month and unemployment was on the increase, according to a survey by the Canada Employment Centre.

But things have rebounded and the Christmas outlook is good.

"Victoria needs something special in the first two weeks of November to carry us through," local CEC manager Wally Pickering said today.

"This is something the Victoria Chamber of Commerce task force on tourism might want to look at."

Task force chairman John Ansell said Pickering's suggestion would be considered.

Pickering said only 565 new jobs became available through the CEC office during November, down 19 per cent from 695 the previous November.

But to keep it in perspective, Pickering said, October had been very strong and when the jobs created in the two months are added together the 1979 totals are about the same as last year.

What happened, he said, is the autumn downturn has been shortened from more than a month to just over two weeks but it is still quite pronounced.

The number of job-seekers in November totalled 8,855, up 12 per cent from 7,924 in October, but less than the 8,988 in November, 1978.

The 8,855 job-hunters included about 2,000 newcomers to the list. Of this 2,000 total, 743 were from out of town.

"Some construction workers who went to Alberta during good weather are returning to the city now, adding to our unemployment," Pickering said.

The new job-hunters included 172 people from Alberta, 344 from B.C. regions outside the Victoria area, 116 from Ontario, 25 from Quebec, 24 from Saskatchewan, 23 from Manitoba, 14 from Nova Scotia, 10 from the Northwest Territories, seven from the Yukon, five from New Brunswick and three from Prince Edward Island.

Since mid-November, Pickering said, the economy has recovered strongly. Retail sales have been brisk from mid-November to today and the outlook is for increased Christmas spending.

A survey by CEC information officer Dan Bowes showed Victoria restaurants and hotels had a 10 per cent increase in revenues during November compared with the same month one year ago.

Lumber production continues to be strong but there is weakness in plywood markets. The Christmas closure will be short in sawmills but longer than usual in plywood plants.

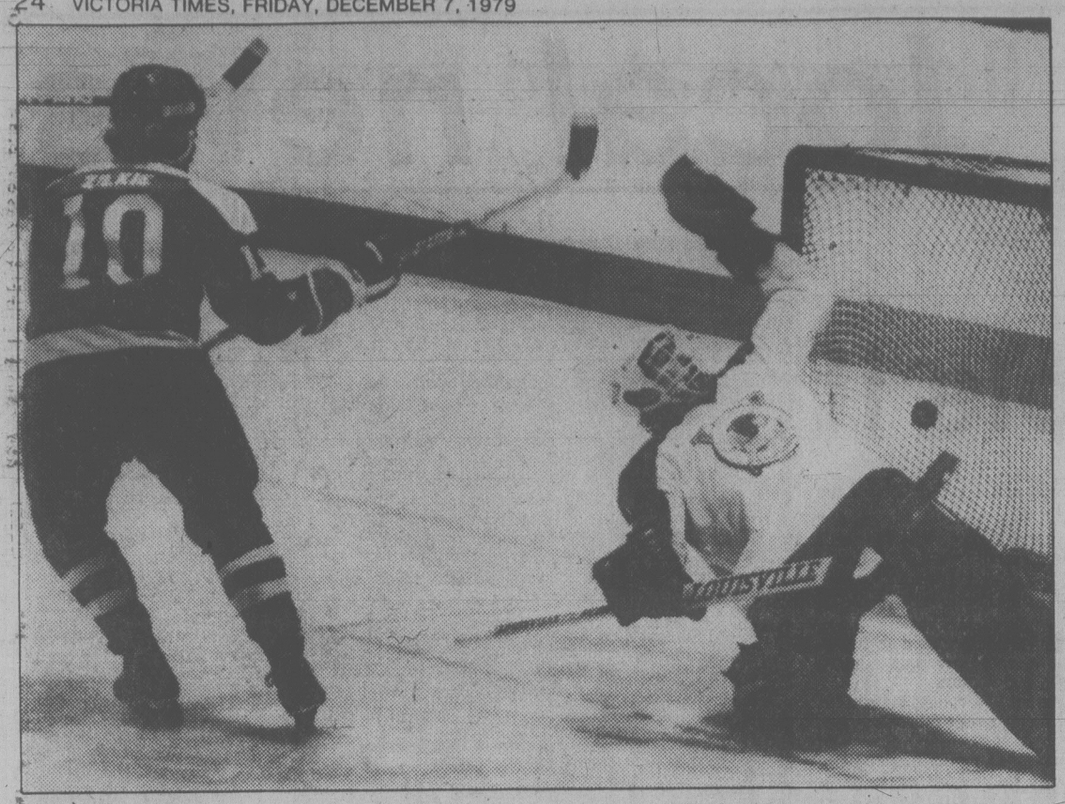

Employment at Burrard Yarrows Corporation shipyard totalled 470 in November, down from 550 in October. The November level will be sustained into the new year when it is expected to increase.

There were 109 agriculture jobs filled through the CEC's farm labor pool, up 20 per cent from last November.

Construction unemployment remains at about 25 per cent.

Real estate sales totalled $13.9 million during November, despite high interest rates. This is up from $10 million last November.

There were 223 units sold, up from 172. Listings were reduced to 409, compared to 545 last November.

IN COLD, Billings' Jeff Zilkie (10) scores Billings' third goal on Victoria Cougars' Kevin Eastman. Another Billings goal moments later led to early exit by Eastman. Cougars rebounded, however, to score 7-4 Western Hockey League victory Thursday at Memorial Arena. (Alex Barta photo).

Adams first man to stress defence

By ERNIE FEDORUK

There is much ado about the offensive contribution of Barry Pederson and Greg Adams but the senior member of the Victoria Cougar scoring firm is anxious to continue paying attention to defence.

Adams, the 19-year-old winger under contract to Philadelphia Flyers, cut loose for four goals Thursday night in Victoria's 7-4 Western Hockey League conquest of Billings Bighorns before 2,417 fans at Memorial Arena. When all was done, however, the Duncan product was quick to express satisfaction with his performance on defence.

"I've been concentrating on checking," said the winger who now has produced 25 goals in 24 games.

"Now I wouldn't mind improving my assist total. People look at your goal total and if it's greater than the assists, they say you're a puck hog . . . that you don't ever pass."

It may have looked like that. In Adams' first 20 games, he scored 19 goals and only seven assists. In three games prior to Thursday's, Adams more than doubled his playmaking total with eight. Now he's 25-15, and feeling better about it.

But Pederson, whose one-goal, five-assist performance gave him an imposing total of 16 points in the last three games, is quick to defend Adams against the no-pass rap.

"Not true," said the 18-year-old Pederson, who continues to look like the most complete centre in the WHL. "He was getting the puck to me (in the early-season going) but I wasn't doing anything."

The Pederson-Adams outburst tends to make rookie Bud McCarthy, the third member of the line, a forgotten man. But both Pederson and Adams join Cougar assistant coach Dave Andrews in praising McCarthy for "doing the job" on the right flank.

"McCarthy has been checking very well," said Andrews. "It was his play that set up our sixth goal."

In out-shooting Billings 49-23, the Cougars really didn't have any problems on attack although netminder Andy Moog's heroics kept the Bighorns in the game for two periods.

The Bighorns scored their four goals on only 11 shots at Victoria's Kevin Eastman, prompting Cougar coach Jack Shupe to make a mid-game change in netminding for the first time this season.

Eastman gave way to Grant Fuhr after allowing Jim McTaggart to score Billings' fourth goal from a sharp angle at the 7:13 mark in the second period. In came Fuhr, and that was the end for Billings.

Fuhr blanked Billings for the remaining 32 minutes, 47 seconds.

Conceding that "Kevin did not have a good game," Shupe said he now must reassess his habit of alternating netminders every game. Eastman played well earlier in the campaign but, suggests Shupe, "now seems to be fighting himself as he did at times last year."

The game was Victoria's last league stand at home until Dec. 27. The Cougars face Moscow Spartak in an exhibition at Memorial Arena on Saturday, then head to the Prairies for a 10-game swing through the Eastern Division.

In other action Thursday, John Neeld scored two goals as Seattle Breakers skated to a 5-3 victory over New Westminster Bruins while in Brandon, third-period goals by Mike Winther and Dave Chartier carried the Wheat Kings to a 3-1 victory over Lethbridge Broncos.

Baseball stays but Mussels out

The Mussels may be no more, but professional baseball will definitely remain in Victoria with a promising major league affiliation in the offing.

The Northwest League team, represented at this week's major league meetings in Toronto by Robert Peden and Lorne Barnswell, called a late-morning press conference today.

Among the announcements expected to made by Peden and Barnswell, who head a new group that purchased the franchise from former owners Jim and Lynn Chapman:

The club has recieved two firm commitments for the stocking of players. One is from Van Schley, who provided the Mussels with manager Bill Bryck and last year's roster. Another offer has been made by a former Los Angeles Dodger player. Still in the Dodger organization as an executive, he has promised a minimum of six to a possible maximum of 19 players as well as a manager and coach.

It also has been learned the new owners have acquired promise of sponsorship that may lead to a change of the team's nickname.

Flyer coach threatens to bring in vigilantes

By The Canadian Press

Coach Bob Berry of Los Angeles Kings says his team has a problem holding a lead after the first period. Pat Quinn, Philadelphia Flyers' coach, wouldn't disagree.

After jumping to a 3-0 lead, the Kings dropped a 9-4 decision Thursday night to the Flyers which extended Philadelphia's undefeated streak to 23 games — tying a club record and moving to within five of the National Hockey League record held by Montreal Canadiens.

Philadelphia has won 17 and tied six during its streak.

"We had a breakdown defensively after the first period," Berry said. "We seem to have a problem holding a lead on the road."

Flyers struck for six unanswered goals in the second period, including a pair by Reggie Leach, who added a third goal midway through the final period.

"They forechecked us like demons in the second period, really buzzed us," Berry said. "We were badly outplayed in the second period."

Quinn was more concerned about what he considered an attack on his team by the Kings in the third period. A brawl started when King Randy Holt appeared to punch Flyers' Ken Linseman in the back of the head in the corner. Four players were ejected from the game.

"If the officials don't want to live by the rules, I guess there will have to be vigilante hockey," said Quinn. "Teams have been taking pot shots at some of our players and the officials seem hesitant to call them.

"When that happens you have to take things in your own hands. If you allow things like that to happen, you will get run out of the league. If teams try that against us, they better bring their lunch because they're going to be here a long time. I better not say anything else or I'll be in big trouble."

In the only other games, New York Islanders edged Boston Bruins 4-3 and Quebec Nordiques beat St. Louis Blues 5-2.

Goals by Doug Halward, Steve Jensen and Charlie Simmer game the Kings the lead but Leach sparked the Flyers comeback with two goal within 20 seconds — a team record — early in the second period. Linseman tied the game at 7:25 and Philaelphia was off and running.

Dennis Ververgaert, Bill Barber and Jim Watson gave Philadelphia a 6-3 lead by the end of the period.

At Quebec, Blair Stewart scored twice — his first goals of the season — to pace Nordiques over St. Louis.

"We had a meeting Wednesday afternoon, and the team as a whole decided to try and give it a little more effort," said Quebec coach Jacques Demers.

The Islanders handed Boston its fourth defeat in the Bruins' last five games. Bob Bourne gave New York a 1-0 first-period lead. Terry O'Reilly tied the game early in the second but Mike Bossy and Bryan Trottier gave the Islanders the lead. John Wesniuk cut the margin but Trottier got his 16th goal of the season for the winner. Peter McNab scored Boston's last goal during the last minute of play.

Gottlieb dies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eddie Gottlieb, former coach and owner of the old Philadelphia Warriors and a member of the National Basketball Association Hall of Fame, has died in hospital.

Skillings splits at world tourney

EDMONTON — The Steve Skillings rink of Victoria lost its first game but won its second in the 64-rink curling tournament of champions here Thursday.

David Raivio of Red Deer defeated Skillings 6-4 in the first round and Skillings defeated Ernie Hilton of Edmonton 10-4 in his second game.

It was bad day for Canadians

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Austria's Peter Wirnsberger won the season's first World Cup downhill Ski race today, 3-10ths of a second ahead of Italy's Herbert Plank.

The top-seeded American and Canadian skiers fared badly on the difficult 3.5-kilometre course, despite brilliant sunshine and good snow conditions.

Wirnsberger, 21, completed the course in an unofficial time of 2:01.83, followed by Plank in 2:02.13.

Third was Norway's Eric Haaker in 2:02.37.

Two other Austrians, low-seeded Harti Weirather, fifth with 2:03.16, and Josef Walcher, sixth in 2:03.26, gave the Austrian team four of the top six places.

Other unofficial placings were:

7. Sepp Ferstl, Germany, 2:03.44
8. Tony Burgler, Switzerland, 2:03.60
9. David Murray, Abbotsford, B.C., 2:03.76
10. Walter Vesti, Switzerland, 2?03.84

The two top-seeded Canadians, Steve Podborski of Toronto and Ken Read of Calgary fell on an icy patch half way down the course and failed to finish. Murray said "it is quite rough and icy in parts."

David Irwin of Calgary finished 14th in 2:03.96 while fellow Canadians Chris Kent, Mike Irwin, Craig Podborski finished down the list.

Kent was 27th in 2:05.48, Calgary's Irwin was 51st in 2:07.54 and Craig Podborski of Toronto 60th in 2:08.58.

Podborski and Read were not injured ip their falls. Podborski, who had recorded the fastest practice time on Thursday, lost a ski on a turn near the top of the course. Read had a spectacular spill, going through a restraining net.

Three other Canadians — Rob McLeish of Ottawa, Bob Styan of Vancouver and Tim Gilhooly of Kelowna, B.C. — also fell and did not finish.

Canadian girl jockey shocks Britons

TAUNTON, England (Reuter) — Canadian Michelle Sherren was under siege by British owners today after becoming the first Canadian girl jockey to win a race in Britain.

"I don't think it's ever happened before," said trainer Ian Wardle.

Merchants, A's win

Juan de Fuca Merchants used a well-balanced attack to drop PPCLI Pats 5-2 and Victoria Athletics came up with two goals in the third period to down Western Homes Buckaroos 4-2 in South Island Big Six Hockey League games Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Five players — Daryl Ball, Terry Van Ember, Phil Gauthier, Mike Adamek and Cam Kring — scored for Merchants while Jim Ethier and Brian Turnbull replied for Pats.

Goaltenders Ralph Wilson and Dave Harvey blocked 27 shots for Pats, who trailed by period scores of 4-1 and 5-2. Bob Adamek made 27 saves for Merchants.

Ross Swanton, Graham Browne, Ron Trafford and Dale Ewasiuk scored for Athletics and Jerome Lidster scored both goals for Bucks.

Dan Porteous blocked 30 shots on the Athletics' goal and Ron Toffey made 19 saves for Buckaroos.

DiMaggio to become an Oriole? Attempt made to re-sign Palmer?

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles owner Edward Bennett Williams has confirmed that former New York Yankee great Joe DiMaggio would probably be given a spot on the Orioles' new board of directors.

Williams, in Toronto for the baseball winter meetings, said: "If Joe doesn't have a conflict as a result of his Yankees ties, I'll put him on."

Williams also hinted the Orioles might try to re-sign pitcher Jim Palmer now that trade prospects for the veteran seem slim.

Williams said re-signing Palmer was "not out of the realm of possibility."

Canada's two gymnastic teams off to Moscow

Women get Olympic trip too

FORT WORTH, Tex. (CP) — The Canadian women's team accomplished on Thursday what the men's team did the day before at the 20th world gymnastics championships, giving Canada full representation at next summer's Olympic Games.

Elfie Schlegel, Ellen Stewart, Diane Carnegie, Shannon Fleming, all of Toronto, Monica Goermann of Winnipeg and Carmen Allé of Montreal combined to put Canada in 10th spot in over-all team standings.

The men's team had come in 11th. The top 12 teams in each of the women's and men's divisions go to Moscow.

Romania took the women's team gold medal despite the absence of Nadia Comaneci in three of the four optional exercises.

The Soviet Union took the silver and the East Germans the bronze.

Comaneci performed on only the balance beam but received a near perfect 9.95. She took the spotlight six hours after being released from a hospital where she is being treated for an infection.

She was back in her hospital bed soon after the medals ceremony.

Comaneci wore a five inch long gauze bandage around her wrist when she performed.

The crowd wildly cheered and applauded when she made her first appearance on the floor but it was only to touch the uneven bars, which is a formality required for anyone not competing in an event.

At a news conference immediately after the medals ceremony, Comaneci was asked whether she was in pain during her routine.

"Of course," she replied. "I tried to give my best and with the rest of the team we were successful."

She then left for the hospital.

The Romanian team score was 389.550. The Soviets took the silver with 388.925 and the East Germans scored 388.075. Canada's total was 375.100.

The Chinese, competing for the first time in 18 years in any world-wide gymnastic tournament came in a strong fourth with 384.600. It will be the first time China will have entry to the Olympics in more than 30 years, with their last appearance in the 1938 Games in London.

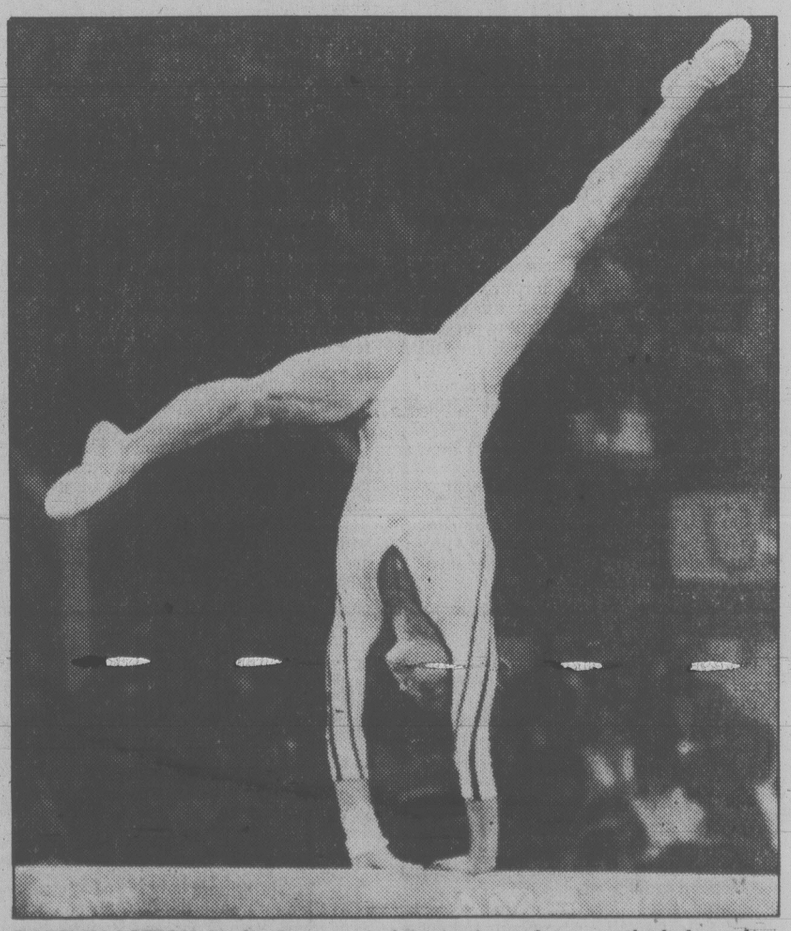

It will also be the first time the Chinese will have ever competed in gymnastics in an Olympiad.

Russia's Neli Kim won top individual honors. The score for Kim's fiery, sexy routine to disco music during her floor routine was increased from 9.75 to 9.8 following a successful protest. Her total after Thursday's optionals was 78.50

Second over-all high scorer was Maxi Gnauck of East Germany with 78.35. In third spot was Maria Filatova of the Soviet Union at 78.30.

Schlegel stood 28th when the scores from her compulsory program earlier in the week and her optional routines Thursday were compiled. Her total was 76.150.

Stewart was second-best Canadian with a 74.50 aggregate, good for 47th position over-all. Next came Carnegie, 55th with 74.50, Goermann 61st with 74.250, Fleming 62nd with 74.20 and Alie 75th with 73.50.

BACK IN ACTION, Nadia Comaneci of Romania performs on the balance bar with her left hand in a bandage at the XXth World Gymnastics Championships in Fort Worth, Texas, on Thursday night. Comanici only competed on the bar, six hours after being released from a hospital where she was being treated for an infection, but received a near-perfect score of 9.95 to help Romania to the women's team gold medal. After the awards ceremony, she returned to her hospital bed. (AP Wirephoto).

Environment minister off to excellent start

We can't help but admire rookie Environment Minister Stephen Rogers, especially his stand over the mud slide fiasco in the Rennell Sound area of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

He's put his ministry in direct opposition to the forests ministry on the question of exactly how much damage has been done to the valuable salmon-spawning potential of Riley Creek.

It's something we're paying him to do, but our provincial government representatives often fail to appreciate the fact that they, too, are accountable to the people.

Rogers' stand, however, leaves this writer wondering exactly when Premier Bill and his cabinet buddies are going to shorten the leash.

Mt. Washington, the newest ski area on Vancouver Island, won't open this weekend as expected.

The operators feel they need at least one more good snowfall but will begin operations for sure Dec. 15 — if not sooner.

The other three areas — Green Mountain, Mt. Arrowsmith and Forbidden Plateau — are also shooting for a Dec. 15 opening.

We might learn something from China and India about generation of energy from waste materials.

Both countries are experimenting with biogas, a common term for methane, which is produced by decaying human, animal or plant wastes.

Biogas can be used for refrigeration, for running internal combustion engines, as a substitute for diesel fuel in electrical generators, in burners and in gas lamps. It isn't as efficient a fuel as either propane or natural gas, but we'll never run out of raw materials for generating it.

China currently has approximately one million biogas plants in operation and India, which has pioneered the technology over 30 years ago, has 80,000.

The residue from biogas plants is an ideal fertilizer, rich in both nitrogen and phosphorous.

It's impressive and all-inclusive.

The Bantam Great Outdoors Guide to the United States and Canada is a reference book par excellence for anyone interested in wilderness travel. It costs $12.95 — a cheap price for the wealth of information it contains.

But a word of caution. Like many other broad-spectrum guides, the inevitable error manages to creep in undetected among the mass of data. The section on Vancouver Island, for instance, refers to Stella Falls (instead of Della) as the highest in Canada and manages to shrink the length of the Cowichan River to a mere three miles.

Bauer likes what he sees in pair of Burnaby wingers

By GRANT KERR

VANCOUVER (CP) — A twinkle comes to Father David Bauer's eyes when he mentions Glenn Anderson and Ken Berry of the national amateur hockey team that will represent Canada at the 1980 Winter Olympics.

"They come the closest to the Russian style of players than anyone I've ever seen in Canada," says Bauer, who probably knows more about hockey in the Soviet Union than anyone in Canada.

"I couldn't believe it when I first saw these boys play. They were just 18 years old, yet they skated just like the Russians. They could stop on a dime and start so fast, I just had to take a deep breath and make sure I wasn't seeing things."

Anderson and Berry are similar in many ways. They're from nearby Burnaby, both are 19 and they're left wingers who have considerable scoring potential for the Calgary-based team.

Bauer, managing director of the team, and manager Rick Noonan were here Wednesday to promote a Jan. 5 game in Vancouver between the national team and a combined university squad.

Marshall Johnston, who played for Canada in two Olympics when Bauer was coach, told Bauer last winter about the skills of Anderson and Berry, who were playing for Johnston at the University of Denver.

"I had asked Marshall to scout the college ranks in the States for us and he called one night and said Anderson and Berry would both make our national team," said Bauer. "He said that if I didn't believe him, I should take a look for myself.

"A short time later I had the opportunity to see these boys play and they were eveything that their coach had predicted."

Anderson and Berry are being counted on for much-needed scoring punch Canada will require in its medal quest in February at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Bauer said the current national team is more mobile than Olympic teams he had in 1964 and 1968. The only drawbacks are youth (average age 21.5 years) and a lack of an experienced goalkeeper.

He said the team has plenty of spirit and enthusiasm which will help compensate for shortcomings in other areas.

"These players will be well prepared for the Olympics because they are thinking about hockey every day," said Bauer. "They're on the ice for 2 1-2 hours each day and get another 2 1-2 hours of dryland training.

Cosmos, Aztecs barter players

NEW YORK (AP) — Cosmos of the North American Soccer League traded winger Gary Etherington, defender Santiago Formoso and their first-round 1980 draft choice to Los Angeles Aztecs for forward Angelo DiBernardo and midfielder Larry Hulcer, the 1979 NASL rookie-of-the-year, the club announced Wednesday.

Trade action picks up

TORONTO (CP) — With the minutes ticking away, baseball's major league brass, slow to act most of the week, talked feverishly today in an attempt to beat the interleague trading deadline at midnight tonight in the windup of the annual winter meetings.

After just two deals in the first three days, the tempo picked up Thursday with four trades involving 15 players. Three of the agreements were reached during the evening dinner hour.

Slugging outfielder Jeff Burroughs, the American League's most valuable player in 1974, right-handed pitcher Doyle Alexander and outfielders Al Cowens and Willie Mays Aikens were the top figures in club exchanges.

Atlanta Braves, determined to escape the National League West cellar in 1980, were No. 1 in the wheeling and dealing as the curtain lowered on what has been, so far, one of the dullest winter meetings on record.

The Braves, who earlier had signed Al Hrabosky as a free agent and acquired Chris Chambliss and Bill Nahorodny in trades, went at it again Thursday, reaching agreement on a five-player transaction with Texas Rangers.

However, there was one big catch in the deal, in whichBurroughs and Alexander were the key players. It was subject to approval by Burroughs, who was traded to Atlanta two years after winning the MVP award with Texas. As a 10-year veteran, Burroughs had the option of rejecting a move.

Early today, Braves general manager John Mullen said he had been unsuccessful in trying to reach Burroughs.

In the deal, right-hander Adrian Devine, traded with Burroughs to Atlanta four years ago, and infielder Pepe Frias were scheduled to move to Texas. The Rangers also threw in light-hitting reserve infielder Larvell Blanks.

In another major trade, California Angels shipped Aikens and shortstop Rance Mulliniks to Kansas City Royals for outfielder Al Cowens and shortstop Todd Cruz.

Other developments saw:

—Cleveland Indians send third baseman-outfielder Ted Cox, a top prospect with the Red Sox a couple of years ago, to Seattle Mariners for two minor league pitchers — Rafael Vasquez and Rob Pietroburgo — and a player to be named later.

—Baltimore Orioles deal minor league pitcher John Flinn to Milwaukee Brewers for infielder Lenn Sakata, who spent almost the entire 1979 season in the Pacific Coast League.

—American League club owners vote 12-2 in favor of a proposal that will guarantee visiting teams at least $10,000 a game. The proposal was turned over to the board of directors for implementation, possibly to be averaged for a series or even the entire season.

Rams go out quickly

Rutledge shares lead

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Jim Rutledge of Victoria, with a sizzling 63, and Don Pooley of Tucson, Ariz., moved into a tie for the lead in Thursday's third round of the $54,000 NGA Open golf tournament.

They were 13-under 200 on the 6,960-yard, par-71 Pima Country Club course. Pooley shot a 66 Thursday.

Templeton of Vancouver made short work of defending-champion Mt. Douglas Rams, eliminating the Victoria club 56-47 in the opening round of the annual Centennial high school boys' basketball tournament Thursday at Victoria High.

In the other game, host Victoria Totems dropped Neah Bay Red Devils of Washington State, 103-84.

Dave Cherry led the Templeton offence with 12 points while Mario Bigiolli and Ian Lang each fired 18 points for Rams.

Ryan Campbell scored 21 points for Totems while Paul Russell and Darren Alexander counted 20 each. Jerry King topped Devils with 18 points and Matt Kolloppa added 16.

Vic High and Templeton clash in the final tonight at 9 while Mt. Doug and Neah Bay meet to decide third and fourth places at 7:30.

Elsewhere, Spectrum of Victoria dropped a 89-63 decision to New Westminster Hyacks in the Carson Graham tourney at North Vancouver.

Bob Manderville led Hyacks with 28 points while Mark Domay counted 20 for Spectrum, which was scheduled to meet Sutherland earlier today.

Meanwhile, some of the top teams in the province have entered the annual Braves tournament starting today at Belmont.

Nanaimo Islanders, ranked second in the province behind Richmond Colts, were to play Parkland Panthers in the opener at 3.

Chilliwack, ranked seventh, faces Port Alberni Chieftans at 4:45, Courtenay Towhees play Cowichan Thunderbirds at 6:30 and Braves, ranked ninth, meet Burnaby North Vikings at 8:15.

Play resumes at 10 a.m. Saturday and continues through to 8:30.

U.S. moves closer to Olympic berth

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (Reuter) — The United States soccer team moved one step closer to the Moscow Olympics on Thursday night, routing Bermuda 5-0 to complete a sweep of their two-game series.

The Americans advanced to a three-country competition with Costa Rica and the Caribbean champion, to be held sometime before April. Two of the three countries will qualify for the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Vikette game off

University of Victoria Vikettes won't have to put their unbeaten record on the line after all.

The exhibition women's basketball game against Seattle of the Amateur Athletic Union scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday at UVic has been cancelled.

Olympic sale 70%

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian allotment of tickets and hotel rooms for the 1980 Moscow Olympics is about 70 per cent sold out, a travel agency spokesman said Thursday.

While an earlier announcement said about 8,000 tickets for Moscow events would be available to Canadians, Oleg Volochkov of Simpsons Travel Service Ltd., said Thursday there will be no more than about 2,000 tour packages sold.

Books a benefit for cruisers

On a wet, cool December evening a good picker-upper is a good book in front of a crackling fire and dreams of cruising in the summer months to come.

Two new books, both written by Pacific Yachting contributors, are sure to whet the cruising type's appetite.

One is Frieda Van der Ree's Exploring the Coast By Boat which gives all kinds of information and tips on cruising Puget Sound, the San Juan Islands, Gulf Islands, Desolation Sound, the upper Strait of Georgia and the Vancouver area.

Frieda, her husband and three children have been cruising these waters for 10 years and, apart from down-to-earth information, she's managed to get little snippets in, such as legends of lost gold.

I was intrigued with Sidney, as seen through her eyes. She sees it as a pleasant place to stop for crumpets and Earl Grey tea, pick up a gallon can of maple syrup and muse over the antique bottles and Indian artifacts in the museum.

Her description of Tod Inlet as a good place for clamming, however, leads me to believe she hasn't been there since it was declared polluted. She'll probably remedy this in the second cruising book she's writing.

A second book, John Chappell's Cruising Beyond Desolation Sound, has a wealth of information on the area between the sound and the northern end of Vancouver Island. John got a lot of information on currents, tides, rapids, wind patterns, supply centres and anchorages the hard way when he set off for the north in a Crown 18 in 1973.

Two years later he went back in a folkboat, this time armed with electronic aids and 60 charts and every hydrographic publication he could lay his hands on.

He's spent seven months over the past three summers cruising the areas described in his book and any boater who hopes to visit those waters some day would find the book a valuable addition to his boat's library.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, held its annual prizegiving Sunday and it was no surprise to hear that the Prosser Trophy for club participation went to Tommy Tucker. There has hardly been a single squadron event over many years to which Tommy hasn't lent a hand.

Paul Jensen's Dania won the Fred Douglas Award for best over-all sailing performance and the inter-club trophy for team racing in Sailerettes went to the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Glen Shippam had the dubious honor of receiving the Shifting Rock Trophy in recognition of his grounding of the Sailerette Golden Gull in Enterprise Channel.

Rod Newman's Aine won a 5.9-miler for cruising class boats on Sunday. Runners-up were Bill Sargent's Southern Comfort and Fred Douglas' Vertu. There will be another race this Sunday, starting in Esquimalt Harbor at 1 p.m.

Good southwesterlies of between 10 and 15 knots held for the RVYC's 15-mile long-distance race on Sunday. Steve Merriman's Country Style was first in the division for the larger International Offshore Rule boats. After her came Moondance, which belongs to Peter Dennis and Bob Buffam; Ross Mathewson's Kotuku, Jack Miller's Serimshander and Eric Dowell's Shelca.

Alan Dickinson's Stirling Shamrock was over-all winner of the smaller IOR boats, being followed by Ken Brown's Razzmatazz and Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian.

Bruce Kenning's Arkle was over-all winner in competition for Division II of boats with Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings.

In Division III the fleet was led by Doug Taylor-Lee's Helios. Behind her came Gary Jacobi's Salty Dream, Gerry Porter's Lickety Split, Denny Robinson's Coco II and Dick Readshaw's Massilia II.

The club's cruising class boats will have two around-the-buoys races at Cadboro Bay on Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1: 30 p.m. There will be series racing for dinghy sailors on Saturday, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The six Hobie Cat 18s that took part in Saturday's Commodore's Classic from Esquimalt Lagoon to Willows Beach had the ride of their lives. There was rain and a little wind when they started but by the time they reached Trial Island the wind had piped up and crews were hiking way out to keep the boats upright in seven-foot seas.

Brian McLeod, who was in second place until he blew his jib, said the boats were averaging 25 knots on a broad reach on the final leg from Trial Island to Willows Beach.

Keith Muir will act as leader on Sunday for a sortie around Ladysmith harbor by members of the Victoria Canoe Club. Members will be meeting at the Helmcken Road parking area at 9 a.m. and travelling to Ladysmith's Transfer Park.

They will get waterborne at 10:30 a.m. to explore the shell beaches, sandstone cliffs and other features of the area.

A System by Design

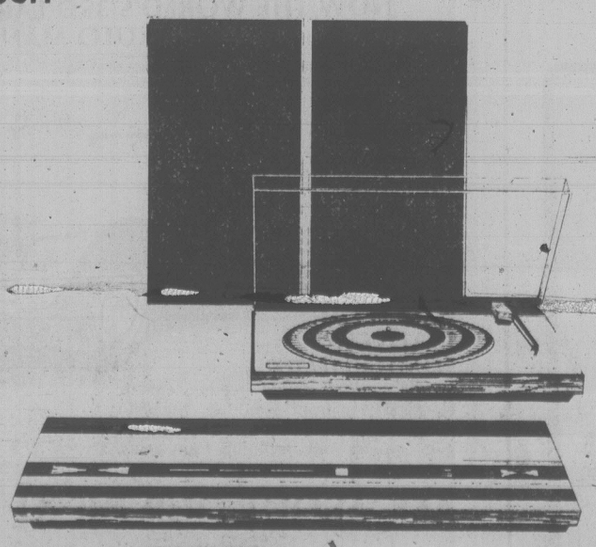

By design. A totally integrated system, the Beosystem 1900 from Bang & Olufsen. The effort of development teams — mathematicians, audio engineers, industrial designers — men pre-eminent in their fields working closely together, solving problems together, and creating a complete audio system in perfect balance. Their work so refined that taken singly, each component still gathers critical acclaim.

The Beomaster 1900 receiver. Music at your fingertips. Touch sensitive controls united with highly sophisticated circuitry. Music without flaw or complication.

The Beogram 2400 turntable. A turntable of classic design. One touch gives you music. Speed control, cueing, anti-skating, and tonearm return are all automatic.

Phase-Link loudspeakers. A mirror to the original performance. Eliminate phase distortion to give music of breathtaking purity. For the especially demanding listener.

Contract Bridge — B. Jay Becker

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠AQ83 ♡A6 ♢J2 ♣KJ743
2. ♠KQ92 ♡Q3 ♢A6 ♣AQ532
3. ♠KJ84 ♡5 ♢A7 ♣AKQ653
4. ♠AQJ75 ♡8 ♢4 ♣KQ8743
5. ♠KJ96 ♡KQ7 ♢A ♣KJ985

1. Pass. Partner usually has 8 or 9 points and a balanced hand in this sequence. Game prospects are consequently poor and the only real problem is to choose the best part score contract. There is no good reason to think that a suit contract will fare better than notrump, so the proper thing to do is to pass.

2. Two notrump. If partner has his normal quota of 8 or 9 points, you can probably make game. At the same time, it is well to recognize that partner may have rebid one notrump with only 7 points, and you cater to this possibility by bidding only two notrump, which shows 17 or 18 points.

3. Three notrump. It would be wrong to bid three clubs, which would merely urge partner to bid again without forcing him to do so. North will occasionally pass three clubs, and you should be unwilling to run this risk with a hand so promising for game.

4. Two spades. Partner had no way of knowing up to this point that the previous spade bid was based on a five-card suit. He probably assumed a holding of four spades and either four, five or six clubs.

The spade rebid guarantees five spades, since it woud obviously be foolish to rebid an unsupported suit with only four of them. Furthermore, it guarantees either five or six clubs, since an opening club bid with five spades and four clubs is almost inconceivable.

5. Three hearts. This is a picture bid that describes your distribution and high-card values at the same time. The diamond shortage is clearly implied, since by now you have bid three suits, and the extra high-card values become identified by bidding three hearts instead of two.

Change the king of hearts to the deuce and you would have a proper two heart bid. The distributional picture would reman the same, but the high-card content would now be in the 13-to-15 point range.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, December 8, 1979
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Answers come from within; emotional response can serve as reliable guide. Cancer, Capricorn natives figure in scenario. Accent on change, travel, variety, relationships with children. Imprint style, apply personal touch. Relationship becomes "interesting."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What you own may be worth more than originally anticipated. Improve property, eliminate safety hazards. Remain on familiar ground—important call or message could be on the way. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Consolidate forces; be versatile, but don't spread efforts too thin. Relatives, short trips, special publications are featured. Be specific in outlining needs, aspirations. Aid is due from unorthodox source.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Review assets, count your change and blessings. If you ask questions, you can locate what had been misplaced or stolen. Financial picture is brighter than you might imagine. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in your personal scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are successful in making major domestic change, adjustment. Harmony can be restored at home base. Judgment, intuition are on target. Know it and take initiative. Puzzle pieces fall into place. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Overcome tendency to brood; define terms, see events, people as they actually exist. Means push aside haze of wishful thinking. Open lines of communication with one confined to home, hospital. Know that being alone is not same as being lonely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on emotional responses, friendship and intensified relationship. You have more responsibility and greater chance for rewards, financial and otherwise. Cancer, Capricorn persons play significant roles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are capable now of seeing picture as a whole. Superior will make room for you at more elevated position. Know that there is plenty of room at top—it is only crowded at bottom. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Break new ground. Pioneer a project. Potential is tremendous—know it and act as if aware of it. Long-distance communication could provide reason for celebration. You get news of a possible reunion. Pursue educational and publishing endeavors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Know when to draw line in connection with emotional, financial complications not rightly your own. Cancer native and another Capricorn figure prominently. Unusual agreement results in brighter financial outlook.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Diversify, examine various offers, opportunities. Don't be rushed into making premature decisions. Accent on contacts, contracts partnerships and marital status. Gemini, Leo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Wait, listen and observe.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Read Aquarius message for valid hint. Be thorough, check details, study fine print. Accent on employment, nutrition and ability to make intelligent concessions. One who shares interests pays meaningful compliment.

IF DECEMBER 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are capable of transforming philosophy into direct action. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. June could be your most memorable month of 1980. The new start you made in September will pay dividends.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Martin turned down the radio. "I've got two wines I'd like you to try," he said. "Let's enjoy them in peace."

"Burgundies, eh?" Stan picked up one of the bottles. "What year?"

"Post-war, but you can figure them out without looking," Martin replied. "One is thirteen years [illegible] than the other, and there's thirty-nine difference between the sums of the squares of their respective digits."

Cheers!

Injured fighter refused flight

LONDON (AP) — Dick Ecklund, a welterweight boxer from Lowell, Mass., was prevented from flying home Thursday and sent to a hospital instead.

Ecklund arrived at Heathrow Airport with his face cut and bruised after being outpointed by Briton Dave Green in a 10-round fight Tuesday night.

Trans World Airlines refused to let Ecklund aboard the flight, fearing he might not be able to breathe properly in the pressurized cabin atmosphere of a Boeing 747 jet.

Hendersons hike basketball lead

Henderson Realty Squires boosted their lead to four points by downing Western Equipment Juniors 137-92 in one of two Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League games Thursday.

Tom Jones was the top gun for Athletics with 19 points and Brian Sutherland-Brown sank 30 points in a losing cause for Ivy's.

Six enjoy second all-American term

By The Associated Press

Charles White of Southern California, who led the U.S. in rushing and all-purpose rushing en route to becoming the second leading ground-gainer in college football history, was named the The Associated Press all-America team for the second year in a row along with six other repeaters from 1978.

Joining White, the 1979 Heisman Trophy winner, on The AP all-America team for the second year in a row were Oklahoma running back Billy Sims, the 1978 Heisman winner and 1979 runner-up, and North Carolina State centre Jim Ritcher, winner of the 1979 Outland Trophy as the nation's best interior lineman.

The other repeaters from 1978 were defensive end Hugh Green of Pittsburgh and defensive backs Kenny Easley of UCLA and Johnnie Johnson of Texas. In addition, Oklahoma linebacker George Cumby, a first-team selection in 1977 but an also-ran last year, made the first team again.

Green and Easley are juniors and have a shot at becoming three-time first-team all-America selections next year.

Joining White and Sims in the offensive backfield were Marc Wilson, Brigham Young's record-setting quarterback, and George Rogers of South Carolina, the No. 2 rusher in the nation.

Junior Miller of Nebraska was the tight end while Ken Margerum of Stanford was the wide receiver. The interior line consisted of Ritcher, tackles Jim Bunch of Alabama and Greg Kolenda of Arkansas and guards Brad Budde of Southern Cal and Ken Fritz of Ohio State.

The rest of the defensive unit consisted of end Jacob Green of Texas A and M, tackles Steve McMichael of Texas and Jim Stuckey of Clemson, middle guard Ron Simmons of Florida State, linebackers Ron Simpkins of Michigan and Mike Singletary of Baylor and deep back Mark Haynes of Colorado.

Miller and Kolenda were third-teamers a year ago.

Besides Hugh Green and Easley, other juniors are Margerum, Rogers, Simmons and Singletary. The others all are seniors.

White, who missed one entire game and half of another with a shoulder injury, carried 293 times for 1,803 yards — his per-game average of 180.3 was a Pacific-10 Conference record — and scored 18 touchdowns.

Rogers was the runner-up with 1,548 yards on 286 carries for a 140.7 per-game average while Sims finished fourth with 1,506 yards on 224 rushes and led the colleges in scoring with 22 touchdowns.

Wilson, one of a handful of collegians to pass for 7,000 career yards, completed 250 of 427 attempts this season for 3,720 yards and 29 touchdowns. He lost 140 yards rushing but still was the national total offence leader with 3,580 yards.

Margerum caught 41 passes — he missed one game — for 733 yards and 10 touchdowns while Miller, an outstanding blocker, caught 21 passes for a 409 yards and seven touchdowns in Nebraska's ground-oriented attack.

DOROTHY KRIMMER

Wienberger's 954, Krimmer's 878 tops

Wally Weinberger rolled his way to the top of the men's fivepin division during the ninth week of competition in the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest with a rocket-like start to his three-game series.

Weinberger started off with a blistering 414 and added games of 253 and 287 for a powerful 954 series in the Wednesday Majors League.

Dorothy Krimmer captured the women's award with a solid 228-315-335 — 878 series in the Monday Niters League.

Both winning series were rolled at Town and Country Lanes.

B.C. Lions sign offensive guard

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions continued to concentrate their recruiting in the free-agent field Thursday with the signing of offensive guard Donnie Hickman to a Canadian Football League contract.

The six-foot-two, 260-pounder is a product of the powerful University of Southern California Trojans and was a fifth-round draft choice of Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League in 1977.

Hickman, 24, also has been on the rosters of Washington Redskins and Detroit Lions in the NFL. He was released by Detroit earlier this year.

Coach Vic Rapp of the Lions said last week that B.C. woud concentrate on free agents in recruiting for the 1980 season because the financial structure of the club would not allow the CFL team to compete with NFL clubs for high-priced U. S. college players.

Hickman is the second offensive lineman signed by the Lions since the end of the 1979 season. Import tackle Terry Humphrey, formerly with Calgary Stampeders, signed with B.C. last week.

One of the prime areas of concern for the Lions last season was the play of offensive tackles Larry Watkins and Jim Lohmann. A club spokesman said Thursday that Hickman, a guard in college, will be tried as a tackle by the Lions in the 1980 training camp.

City skaters lead western division

COQUITLAM (CP) — Bonnie Epp 13, and Leonard Austman, 11, received first-place votes from four of five judges to vin the novice pairs event Thursday night at the Western Canada figure skating championships.

The British Columbia champions from North Vancouver beat six other couples and finished comfortably ahead of Lynda and John Ivanich of Vancouver.

As expected, B.C. skaters took the lead in every category except one in the opening events of the three-day championship.

Heather Anlerson, 18, of North Vancouver, the current B.C. champion, took the women's lead after completion of the school figures, with her younger sister Yvonne, 16, in fourth place, sandwiching two Edmonton girls — Kathy Osterberg, 14, and Cathie MacFarlane, 19.

In the two-entry men's division, Henri April, 21, of Coquitlam, took the lead over former Canadian and world junior champion Dennis Coi, 18, of Vancouver, in the figures section.

In the junior championships, Neil Giroday, 18, of Powell River took a narrow lead in the men's event over North Vancouver clubmate Leonard Warkentin, 18, and Troy Ruptash, 14, of Calgary.

Susan Heatherington, 17, of Victoria, took an even narrower lead in the junior women's competition over Andrea Hall, 16, of nearby Surrey. Each girl picked up eight ordinals and Hall actually outdistanced Heatherington 22.84 to 22.04 in points. But the Victoria girl got the temporary nod, with three first-place votes from the five judges.

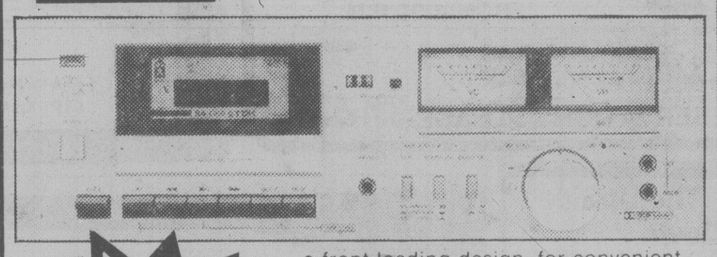

In the compulsory short program of the junior pairs event, Vanessa Howe, 16, and Jeff Male, 18, of Victoria took a healthy lead over their only rivals, Corrie Jo Petrunik of Lethbridge and Bill O'Neill of North Vancouver.

United Press International

Space, the final frontier. Captain's Log, Stardate: Friday, Dec. 7, 1979. Star Trek — The Motion Picture comes to 850 theaters in the United States and Canada.

Will it sell?

Sure will, say promoters. Advance ticket sales sold out.

Will the Trekkies show up?

Sure will, say promoters. They bought tickets, didn't they?

"I've never seen anything travel so far with so little publicity," said Leslie De Manche of Mann Theaters Corp., in Los Angeles.

"I plan on watching the thing until I know it by heart," said Stuart Scoon, a Miami Dade Community College engineering student who saw Star Wars 10 times.

Ed Kalish, vice president of promotion and publicity for Paramount Pictures, which brought the Enterprise out of mothballs, said he expects 3,000 to 6,000 Trekkies at tonight's opening in Washington, D.C.

Captain Kirk will be there. And Mr. Spock, Bones, Scotty, Sulu, Uhura and Chekov. Mostly, the old crew: William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, James Doohan, George Takei, Nichelle Nichols and Walter Koenig.

Some differences:

Is that a toupee on Kirk?

Scotty with a mustache?

Governor named to run Rhodesia

LONDON (AP) — Despite a threat by Patriotic Front guerrillas to "tear up" the new accord for a Zimbabwe Rhodesian ceasefire, the British government today announced the name of its governor for the war-torn colony and published the bill that will give the African country independence next year.

Guerrilla leaders said Thursday they will not abide by the ceasefire unless Zimbabwe Rhodesian forces are forced to withdraw to the same type and number of camps as those set up for guerrilla soldiers. British officials took a calm view of the latest snag and said it would be discussed today.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government also announced it has selected Lord Soames as governor to take full control of the former British colony during a transition period leading to new elections. He is to arrive in Salisbury next week.

Soames, son-in-law of the late Sir Winston Churchill, is a member of Mrs. Thatcher's cabinet and leader of the House of Lords. The U.S. Senate voted Thursday 90 to 0 to lift economic sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia as soon as the governor takes over.

SOAMES
. . . full command

The Zimbabwe bill is expected to get emergency passage through Britain's Parliament by next Wednesday.

It includes an amnesty for guerrillas and for the whites who declared unilateral independence from Britain in 1965 in a bid to forestall black-majority rule. Their action led to United Nations sanctions and a seven-year war with the Patriotic Front guerrillas led by Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe. The war is estimated to have cost 20,000 lives.

Muzorewa replaced white prime minister Ian Smith earlier this year, but whites retain 28 seats in the 100-seat parliament under terms of a new constitution. The guerrillas boycotted the election.

Under the chairmanship of British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, a "basic agreement" was hammered out Wednesday at the 13-week constitutional conference on a ceasefire between the Patriotic Front and Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's army.

Refugee pullout draws strong outcry

Canadian Press

Reaction was overwhelmingly negative to the federal government's decision announced Wednesday to let private groups sponsor the bulk of Indochinese refugees coming into Canada.

Jacques Couture, Quebec immigration minister, said he deplored the way the government decided to change its sponsorship program, leaving most of its 50,000 quota to private sponsors.

"I am shocked that this decision came unilaterally," Couture said. "This is not a normal procedure and I deplore it."

Church and community leaders involved in resettlement of the refugees across Canada are sick over the government's decision, Patricia Fritz-Turner, Toronto regional director of Operation Lifeline, said Thursday.

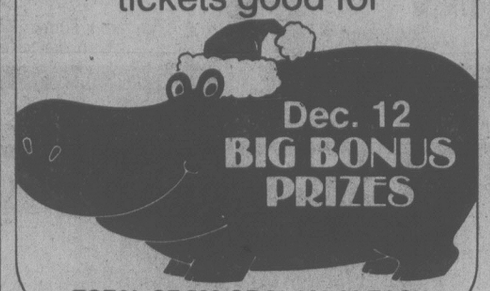

A Toronto co-ordinator of Operation Lifeline said she was bitterly disappointed by the decision to send the money originally earmarked for the refugees to Cambodia.

Wendy Schelew said the government is opting out of a commitment made three months ago.

"The feeling was unanimous among all the private organizations and church groups that met with Ron Atkey (federal immigration minister) and Flora MacDonald (external affairs minister) yesterday that (the groups) will go belly up without financial backup," she said.

Rev. Dennis Murphy of Ottawa, general-secretary of the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, described the policy shift as a breach of faith.

Closer ties with Europe seen vital

By SAM BUFALINI

TORONTO (CP) — Canada must place renewed emphasis on maintaining close ties with the expanding European Economic Community, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said Thursday.

The Canadian government, in the process of re-examining foreign policy, has placed its foreign affairs emphasis on continuity in adhering to Canada's obligations to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and in confirming and extending detente as the framework within which East-West relations be pursued, Miss MacDonald said in a low-key address to the Canadian Institute of International Affairs and the Centre for International Studies.

With the European Economic Community on the verge of admitting new members and showing signs of increased unity, she said it now is more important than ever that Canadian interests be adequately represented.

"This is a movement full of hope for the future, which Canadians applaud," she said. "But it does carry the risk for us that some of our closest friends will increasingly be working out common positions on major questions among themselves, positions which without our consultation we will be urged to accept or support."

This is particularly true in economic matters, she said.

Citing energy as an example, she said Europe is looking more to Canada as a source of energy. She noted that France and Germany have invested heavily in uranium exploration in Canada, and that much of the recent technology which is helping Canada develop its resources has come from European sources.

"In short," she said, "energy developments in the next generation may produce new and extensive links between Canada and Europe. But in this and other areas, our task is to ensure that the exchange benefits are long-term development and bring significant advantage to the Canadian people."

In the area of international security, Miss MacDonald said it was vital that Western countries maintain their strong negotiating position by ensuring that NATO strength be kept in balance with Eastern-bloc countries.

She said that three principles should be kept in mind when discussing Canada's contribution to NATO.

"First, our contribution must be relevant to the needs of NATO as perceived by our allies, as well as by ourselves," she said.

"Second, it must be compatible with our over-all perception of our needs in defence policy and third, it must be an effective reminder that the security and economic fields are intertwined."

Ol' Blue Eyes didn't even know he had a Moscow fan club — but somebody there likes his decadant, capitalistic Western music. The official TASS news agency has requested press credentials to cover Frank Sinatra's Dec. 12 black tie birthday bash at Caesars Palace.

For their wedding, Rose Medina, 22, and John Randall, 23, accompanied by the Rev. Francis Geddes, were married as they jogged 10 miles from the San Francisco waterfront, over the Golden Gate Bridge and along the Sausalito Bridgeway.

A Sidewinder missile is fitted to the 48,000-horsepower rocket vehicle driven by film stuntman Stan Barrett to give him more power to try to become the first man to break the sound barrier on land. The needle-nosed rocket vehicle later made a test run across the Rogers Lake, Calif., dry lakebed at a speed of between 560 and 640 km/h.

If there's one thing Eastern Airlines' pilot Larry Kinsey can't abide, it's grown-ups who squabble like children — so he booted them off his airplane at Baltimore. It began when a militant non-smoker invaded the smoking section — despite vacancies in non-smoking — and proclaimed, "I know my rights. I'm not going to smoke and I don't want anyone else around me to." Says Eastern spokesman Marty Barry, "The passengers were causing such a ruckus that the pilot just had enough of it and said in so many words that if you folks can't act like mature adults, I'm going to land." So 177 passengers were delayed an hour getting to New York.

Religion is alive and well at the University of California — but it's not what it used to be. Some "denominations" listed by students on their religious preference cards: the Polyester Pagoda of the Palpitating Pulpit, the Cosmic Yo-Yo Church of Evolutionary Oneness and The Holy Order of Our Lady of Perpetual Motion. Rev. Gustav Schultz, pastor of the University Lutheran Church, said other categories included Blue Oyster Cult, Born-Again Atheist, Fat Worship of the High Cholesterol Order, Southern Pedestrian and Church of God the Totally Indifferent. "People still have a sense of humor," said Schultz, "and that is a positive sign."

Dear Abby:

Our son is a 16-year-old high school student who is very mature for his age. He's been steadily dating a 17-year-old senior for about a year. We've always had an excellent rapport with our son and have openly discussed sex, reproduction and contraception.

Last week his girlfriend happily informed him that she is six months pregnant, and she's delighted! She had already told her family, who she says are excited and happy and have given her baby gifts and almost completely furnished her nursery! She and her parents have talked with a school counsellor and today she starts classes at an alternative school for school-aged mothers and mothers-to-be. She told all her friends at school before telling our son and he is now being approached with all sorts of questions and comments from his teachers and classmates.

The girl states she is happy about it and just hopes our son will be a good "Daddy." She's even asked him to participate in natural childbirth classes with her.

Our son is bewildered and dumbfounded about all this. He says he feels an obligation to her, but at his age marriage is out of the question. We agree, but how can we help him through this? All articles and programs are greared to help unwed mothers, but what about an unwed father? We want him to get on with a normal life without suffering any psychological scars. Are there groups or agencies to help boys in this predicament? Where can we turn?

Parents

Dear Parents:

There are excellent counselling services in your area. Contact them — and see a lawyer about the obligations, rights and responsibilities of an unwed father.

Dear Abby:

I see that many of our public figures are now getting hit in the face with pies and accepting it good naturedly. Have you ever had a pie in the face, Abby?

Curious

Dear Curious:

No. But if I ever do, I hope it's pecan. It might hurt a little more, but it will taste better.

Dear Abby:

Please help me. I don't know who else to talk to about this embarrassing problem. I am a 30-year-old woman who is going bald! It's on my mind (no pun intended) constantly, and I'm really depressed. A dermatologist said it's hereditary.

Going Bald

Dear Going:

See another dermatologist and get his opinion. In the meantime, let me assure you that you are not alone. Get a pretty wig and some good-looking hats, and don't despair.

Yule reality, conflict for kids

By AL FORREST

"Daddy didn't come through."

That's the way psychologists describe the inevitable letdown of Christmas; a season when hopes and expectations always exceed the reality of the event.

And the disappointment is becoming more and more accentuated due to the influence of television and department store hype which produce gift expectations beyond the financial capabilities of most people.

Psychologists say it has always been human nature to want to get as much as possible.

In recent years, this vague desire has become more pronounced and the new generation not only wants everything, it expects to get it.

Some children are asking for gifts that cost $300, far more than most families can afford.

Padre Tony Roberts, the Anglican chaplain at the Royal Jubilee's Memorial Pavilion, says these facts can make Christmas the worst time of year for some parents.

"They may develop terrible feelings of guilt because their children are asking for things they can't afford to buy."

The padre said most parents face two unpleasant choices: running further into debt than they should or disappointing their children.

Roberts suggested parents should act now to take defensive measures.

"It is better to level with children and tell them the family simply can't afford to buy everything they are asking for.

"If the children realize this in advance, they won't be so disappointed."

He said it was much better to lay it on the line now because there is an opportunity to talk. Explanations can be given and disappointments eased.

On Christmas Day, with everything happening so fast, there is no time for explanations and discussions and the sense of hurt is far stronger.

Ideally, he said, parents should hold a family council meeting to discuss the whole Christmas syndrome, including the spiritual significance of the event. Family traditions should be stressed and material considerations should be downplayed as much as possible.

"Quite simply, parents should not let themselves be pushed around. They are under great pressure from merchants, from advertising and from their children.

"They have to fight back. And a family discussion is the best way to do it."

But parents also have to realize the problems their children face.

"Many of their friends will be getting expensive gifts on Christmas morning and they will be doing without. The children will have to be strong enough to deal with this."

Roberts said the Christmas season can be a time of joy if reasonable compromises are reached. The important thing is to avoid misunderstandings.

Everyone should know in general terms what to expect on the festive day.

But inevitably, despite the best will in the world, there will be some letdown, he said.

No event can reasonably be expected to match up to the dream. This disappointment is made infinitely harder to deal with if it is accompanied by guilt.

Parents and children should strive for a guilt-free holiday.

Parents should realize their children will not match up to the level of behavior expected of them. On the other side, the youngsters should realize they can't have everything they want.

Roberts estimated that only about 20 per cent of Victoria families have what could be called a Christian Christmas.

But the other 80 per cent can also have a more joyful Christmas if they let spiritual values and family traditions take precedence over materialism.

Sugar plums cheap in face of options

By RON ALEXANDER
New York Times

It might be more accurate if Christmas, sometimes symbolized by stuffed stockings, were represented by jammed mailboxes. For if sugarplums still dance in the heads of children, the minds of their elders must be littered with thoughts of those astonishing gifts that appear in the constantly arriving holiday catalogues.

There is, for example, an $8,000 needlepoint set — scissors and thimble — of 18-karat gold and platinum, bejeweled with rubies and diamonds, in the current Cartier catalogue. Or how about the sheared mink jogging suit sporting red racing stripes and a $10,000 price tag that Bloomingdale's is offering in its holiday booklet? Another Bloomingdale's gift is a Victorian Evening in February, when recipients will be costumed in "lavish velvet and lace accoutrements" and driven by carriage to Lincoln Center to take part as on-stage patrons in Henry Purcell's "Fairy Queen." The cost of this gift night: $333.

The stars at night are not the only big and bright things in Texas, where Sakowitz, in Houston, is offering a 734-square-foot swimming pool in the shape of Texas, its 30,687-gallon capacity to be filled with Perrier water. The price somehow comes to $127,174.32 and there are no deposits on Perrier bottles. Sticking to its Ultimate Gifts of Health theme, the store will also air-freight and hand-deliver "one delicious red apple" each and every day of the new year. The cost for all of this attention is $20,000, but Sakowitz is quick to remind customers that "1980 is a leap year."

And in Dallas, Neiman-Marcus is offering, for $3,000 plus travel expenses, a professional chimney cleaning. But wait, there's more. After Master Sweeps Dee and David (wearing, of course, the traditional top hat, red scarf and tails) finish with the flue and chimney, from roof to hearth, they will sing and dance their way out of the chimney of your choice with appropriate selections from "Mary Poppins," "Oliver" and "My Fair Lady."

If there's no one on your list with a dirty chimney, how about someone with a sweet tooth? At Neiman-Marcus there are hefty pieces of solid chocolate, for $10, molded into the shape of a molar.

Vitamin A derivative battling acne

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

My 14-year-old daughter has a terrible case of acne. She has been taking antibiotics and is using creams and lotions on her face. We are satisfied that her skin doctor is doing the best he can. Someone told me that there is a new treatment method.

Mrs. B.B.

Dear Mrs. B:

A new derivative of vitamin A seems to hold great promise for the treatment of difficult cases of acne. This substance is known as 13-cis-retinoic acid.

A recent report in the Medical Tribune, a prestigious magazine for doctors, indicates that there is ongoing research of this substance for the control of the cystic form of acne. At a recent convention of dermatologists there was a firm belief that eventually this drug will play a significant role in the control of acne.

The drug is still in experimental stages. Only a few centers in America are conducting these studies. Even the most enthusiastic dermatologists and scientists working on this problem believe that it will take a few years before the studies are complete. If results are as fine as they hope them to be, the drug will then be available for general use.

So overwhelming has been the demand that new patients simply cannot be accommodated, even in the centers where it is being tried. Until such time, persistent treatment by your own dermatologist, with the routine methods that are now available, can reduce the severity of your daughter's acne.

Dear Doctor:

I was shocked when I found out that my daughter has been buying and using water pills to lose weight. She says that other girls in her class are doing the same thing. Shouldn't there be a law against this?

Mrs. F.E.

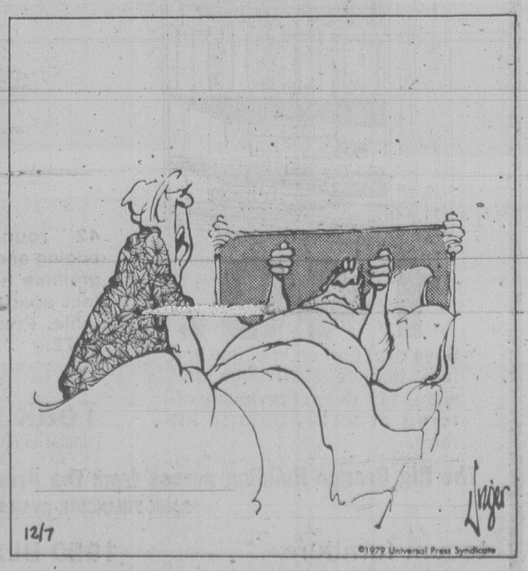

Dear Mrs. E.:

There are laws in many states that forbid the sale of diuretics, or water pills, without a doctor's prescription. Nevertheless, these pills somehow can fall into the hands of young people who are irresponsible enough to use them without permission.

Taking water pills for weight reduction is just another way to sidetrack sensible eating habits for this purpose.

When diuretics are prescribed by doctors, patients are under their supervision. Any unusual reaction is quickly observed; then the drug can be stopped immediately. Young people taking these diuretics are exposing themselves to possible trouble. The immediate loss of water, and with it the loss of weight, is at best only temporary. It is not worth the risk of severe loss of potassium and other minerals essential to good health.

Dear Ms. Vichert: I'm a 15-year-old girl and was wondering if you could help me with a very confusing problem. This summer I went to camp for a month and I met a guy whom I'd really liked since the beginning. He didn't feel the same about me until four days before camp was over. We spent those days together and on the last night he told me he loved me and I told him I loved him too. He lives very far from me but he told me to write him and said he'd call me a lot.

Well, we do keep in touch and his latters tell me how much he loves and misses me. It's so hard for me, because this is the hardest thing I've ever had to face. There's no one who understands how I feel and I cry a lot whenever I think about him.

He told me I can go out with other guys, but he said he won't go out with any other girls. I get upset and fear we'll drift apart.

We're going to see each other this winter, but I'm scared it's not going to be the same. Will it? I try to forget about him, but I can't. Do you think it's worth it to keep a long distance relationship. Will I ever stop hurting? What should I do, I'm so confused.

Answer: You spent four special days with someone who is now special to you. It sounds like a wonderful four days, and I hope you will always remember that time as a good memory, and a good summer.

When you meet this winter the chances are it may not be exactly the same, but you may still like each other a lot. Be prepared to find that things are different, but that can be exciting too and make your winter meeting special in a different way.

Summer vacation is a unique time and the experiences that happen to us in the summer cannot be duplicated. Time passes, we change, and we have different wonderful experiences. Of course you should keep writing to him because he is important to you. I think you should take his advice and date other boys, and I don't believe that would be disloyal to him. You know he has a place in your life that won't be duplicated, so dating other people won't take that away.

Dear Dr. Cotter : I am 17 years old and I really like this guy who goes to the same school. He is one year younger than I am. We are really good friends, and have known each other for three years. The problem is that I like him more than as a friend. I've told him about how I feel and he told me he likes me a lot, and that he could see himself loving me.

He told me though, that he likes his next door neighbor better. He has known her since she was a baby. I know her too, and I also like her, but I'm dying inside because I wish that I could be his girl.

Answer: You think you can't live without him, but you can't be his Number 1 girl either, so you will have to live with his friendship in what quantities you can get. Enjoy that friendship and relish your own devotion to him; it is good to be friends and very good to be devoted.

In matters of love we have to accept that it is not always that two people fall in love with each other at the same time. That causes heartache, but it is also one of the risks and thrills of that kind of love.

Dear Dr. Powell: Three years ago, I weighed over 200 pounds. I managed to get down to 165 by eating a lot of tuna and counting calories (1,200-day). But within six months, I had nibbled my way back up to 185 pounds. I have stayed at this weight for the last three years, except for my annual summer dip down to 170 pounds.

This spring, I joined Weight Watchers. I learned good nutrition. Together with the program and my annual dip, I was down to 169 — 15 pounds from my doctor's goal for me. I was happy and proud.

Then, it happened. I began to eat and eat and eat. I haven't stopped. At last glance last month, I was at 185.

Is there any place that you could suggest for counselling, preferably with an ex-fatty, who would understand my predicament?

Answer: You have answered your own question. Weight Watchers and many other groups include men and women who have lost weight and kept it off, who act as counsellors or facilitators in workshops. You have found it easier to lose weight than to keep it off. You have tried all the diets and know what you should eat. So get back into a group and take off the weight again.

Dear Mike: My 1977 Datsun wagon with automatic has one of those early-morning wakeup problems. I start it and let it warm up for about two minutes. Then, when I shift into reverse, it kicks like a mule and dies. On the third or fourth try, it's finally okay. I've had the car back to the dealer seven times but still have the same trouble. Should I give up! — Mule

Dear Mule: Not yet. Even though you're letting the engine warm up a bit, your choke detent is still at fast idle. But your choke must be slightly open by the time you shift to reverse. This - perhaps combined with a weak accelerator pump inside your carburetor — is causing what you describe.

Dear Mike: I notice that some of the car magazines are now giving engine-output figures in kilowatts instead of horsepower. Why is this? And how do I convert kilowatts to horses? — Confused

Dear Confused: Kilowatts are coming just as surely as the metric system. Europeans have been measuring horsepower in kilowatts for years. To convert to SAB horsepower, multiply the kilowatt figure by 1.34. Or to convert horsepower to kilowatts, multiply by 0.75.

Dear Mike: The automatic trans in my 1974 Volkswagen 412 seems to have lost second gear. It accelerates fine in first gear, then spins freely as though someone threw in the clutch. It finally slips directly into high (third). There's no clutch, of course, because it's an automatic. The transmission shops won't say what's wrong until they've opened up the gearbox. — Skipping Second

Dear Skip: Has anyone checked out the transmission's external adjustments? It's something in the adjustments or the servos that make intermediate gear apply. I wish I could be more specific.

soap opera scene

Soaps status defended

By JOHN GOUDAS

From her experiences, Marcia McCabe, the diligent Sunny McClure on Search for Tomorrow, believes that those who strongly resent or object to soaps are "theatre people." They just don't think of soap operas as serious acting.

"Granted the scripts may not be by Tennessee Williams," says Marcia, "but it's acting, and in fact may even be more difficult because the better a script is, the easier it is to perform it."

Marcia concedes the writers are only human and can't always turn out award-winning scripts week after week. Jokingly, the actors sometimes refer to themselves as Rumpelstiltskins — trying to spin straw into gold.

But all things considered, Marcia feels that Search writers do an incredible job, particularly with her character Sunny McClure.

Marcia finds it fun playing Sunny because she is the kind of character who butts into everyone's storyline. Having been a waitress at the Inn, and her stints as an investigative reporter and television commentator, Marcia has had scenes with almost every cast member on the show. She's also proud of the way viewers have been able to relate to Sunny for what she is, an intelligent young woman. However, the attractive actress teasingly adds that some interesting things have been planned for Sunny that may not necessarily be in character.

As for her own future, Marcia says: "It's not my ultimate goal to see myself on the silver screen, but if it happens, it happens and that would be wonderful, but right now I'm happy where I am and will continue to do Search for Tomorrow for as long as the producers will have me."

Channel Chatter: Don Stewart (Mike Bauer on Guiding Light) is still busier than ever. He'll finish up his run of Music Man in Darien, Conn., on December 15 and then on the 17th joins two members of the Metropolitan Opera in a production of Handel's Messiah in Engelwood, N.J.

Chris Lowe, who played Eric, the son of Cathy and Scott Phillips, on Search for Tomorrow, will be coming back for a few guest shots this year. He grew up on the show, having started at age five.

New Views: A new story comes to Llanview on One Life to Live, adding a western touch to the popular soap.

First was Clint Ritchie who plays the confident newspaper editor, Clint Buchanan. Clint appeared in several movies. On the show he wears western boots, a stetson hat, and is continuously going on about hot Texas chili.

Kristen Meadows is Mimi King, the young pretty girl. Kristen recently appeared in Pippin at the Westbury Music Fair.

And finally Jeremy Slate, who plays Chuck Wilson, business manager of the record company. Diehard TV viewers may recall Jeremy from his 1960 CBS prime-time series The Aquanauts.

Plot Portents: Having revealed his plans to take over Anderson Manufacturing, Alex Marshall becomes the ace villain on Days of Our Lives. Sister Marie is next on the Marshall list, a key figure in his plotting.

With Leslie wandering around New York in a daze, Lance and Lorie take in Brook on The Young and the Restless. Derek appears to have second thoughts about Jill while Lucas sees more of Casey, hoping to ease her sexual fears.

Mike tells Adam he wants to exhume Roger's body on Guiding Light. Roger himself puts his plan into action concerning Christina and Hope makes a startling announcement.

The Ryan household is rocked by a tragic event on Ryan's Hope. Delia is determined to strenghten her relationship with Roger.

Myra goes on a dangerous mission on All My Children. A depressed Erica finds her life is crumbling around her and Phoebe is annoyed with Langley.

Edwina has a new beau on One Life to Live. Brad makes plans that don't include Jenny and Mary, while Clint warns Vicky about Asa's intentions.

Deborah gets some good news on Edge of Night, and the predictable Elliot is on the prowl again.

MARCIA McCABE basks in the pleasure of playing Sunny McClure on Search for Tomorrow and defends the status of soap operas in her spare time.

Family breakup feared

MRS. SONIA JOHNSON appears outside her Sterling, Virginia, home Wednesday afternoon after receiving word of her excommunication from the Mormon Church for what she says are her supportive activities aimed at ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment in the U.S. The church is against passage of the ERA because it fears it will undermine the family. She says she will continue her campaign for passage of the amendment.

By DAVID BRISCOE

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church boasts that predominantly Mormon Utah gave women the vote 50 years before the 19th amendment to the U.S. constitution granted the franchise to women elsewhere in the United States.

But its stand against another amendment — that proposing equal rights for women — has embroiled the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in controversy, culminating Wednesday with the excommunication of Sonia Johnson, who campaigned for the ERA.

The church opposes the proposed equal rights amendment, saying it would destroy family structure, and for years has used its influence against the ERA across the country.

— The Utah legislature — 70 per cent controlled by Mormons — rejected the ERA in 1975. This year it voted to ban reconsideration forever.

— In Montana earlier this year, busloads of people led by Patrick Sherrill of Orem, Utah, — dubbed "the Mormon from Orem" — rallied in support of efforts to nullify the state's earlier ERA ratification.

— In Mrs. Johnson's home state of Virginia, a citizens coalition was organized against the amendment, claiming 16,000 members.

— The most open Mormon anti-ERA activity came this year in a document opposing extension of the ratification deadline, submitted to a congressional committee. The church maintained the extension would divide the U.S., harm women's interests, damage the constitution and be "deeply offensive to any sense of fairness."

The women's issue has created more dissent — both within the tight-knit Mormon community and against it — than any issue since polygamy, abandoned by the church in 1890, and the church's now-abandoned denial of priesthood to blacks.

Mildred Jeffrey, chairman of the National Women's Political Caucus, says the church is "one of the leading proponents of sex discrimination in the country."

The 4.5-million-member church says it has a "very deep and everlastng commitment to the preservation and strengthening of the family." It views the ERA as a threat to the family and to women.

Mrs. Johnson, who is head of Mormons for ERA, learned of her excommunication at her Sterling, Va., home via registered letter from her bishop, Jeff Willis. In the letter, Willis said that her offence was not in supporting the ERA but in how she did it.

"Your testimony and public speeches evidence in spirit that you are not in harmony with church doctrine concerning the nature of God and the manner in which he directs his church on earth," Willis wrote.

Mrs. Johnson said Wednesday that at her three-hour church trial last Saturday night she had denied two conclusions Willis reached: that she had urged people to keep Mormon missionaries out of their homes and that she had described church leaders as women haters, or misogynists.

She acknowledged one charge, however, that she has taught that the church is dedicated to imposing its moral directives on Americans.

"The church is trying to get every legislature either to rescind or kill the ERA," said Mrs. Johnson.

Priests quit

ROME (Reuter) — More than 23,000 Roman Catholic priests gave up holy orders in the seven-year period between 1971 and 1977, say church figures published recently.

The exodus, attributed by many to the strains of celibacy, contributed to a reduction in the number of Roman Catholic priests in the world to 406,717 at the end of 1977 from 435,848 in 1971.

The problem prompted Pope John Paul to issue a letter to priests reminding them that they made their vows of celibacy and service to the church for life. The pope also stressed his determination to retain mandatory celibacy for the clergy.

Heathen haven label for B.C.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — British Columbia is the Canadian haven for atheists and agnostics, says a study by a University of Western Ontario professor.

The report by Jean Veevers, in conjunction with D. F. Cousineau of Simon Fraser University, also says heathens are three times more common than Jews in Canada.

The study, to be published in the Pacific Sociological Review, says Canada's 930,000 non-believers are more numerous than the combined total of Jehovah's Witnesses, The Salvation Army, Mennonites, Hutterites and Pentecosts.

Veevers says agnosticism increases as one travels from east to west in Canada and that 7.2 per cent of the population of Alberta, often called Canada's Bible belt, is agnostic or atheist.

But B.C., at almost 14 per cent, leads the country in heathens, the study says.

"Perhaps B.C. serves as Canada's answer to California and attracts a disproportionate number of innovative and non-conforming persons who then continue to be innovative and non-conforming in their religious practices," the report says.

Alder Kittens
This new series of studies was sculpted especially for Royal Worcester by James Alder. The six available are remarkably life-like as to their colouring and breed.

Victorian Violets
This original Hammersley pattern has been in continuous production since the 1870s. The type of decoration is as popular today as when first produced. Available in both teaware and dinnerware.

Minuet/Howard Spray
This Hammersley pattern was produced in the 1930s under the guidance of Mr. F. Howard, then Hammersley's art director. He was especially renowned for his sensitive interpretation of sprays and bouquets of flowers.

School math centre is out of the real world

PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Plastic fruit, telephone books, movie tickets, cans of latex paint, and other "real world" items are being used successfully in an experimental math centre for kids who hate fractions and such.

There also are real doughnuts and rolls, baked very slowly for hours to make them super-hard — and then coated with plastic so they don't mildew or rot. The bakery items, you might say, sweeten the arithmetic.

Reports show this practical education experiment is working. In fact, one evaluation showed some boys and girls with hands-on experience at the centre scored a year above grade level!

These achievers are fourth, fifth and sixth grade users of the math center at Rio Vista Elementary School in Bloomfield, N.M. Learning all kinds of computations, some former dullards are turning into computational wizards.

The math centre is an 896-sq.ft. mobile classroom with counters and shelf space on three sides. A blackboard is on the fourth side. Thirty-two swivel chairs, complete with writing arms, fill the center.

The kids run businesses, including a grocery, restaurant, hardware store. Practical experience comes three ways — as customer, as an owner, as an employee.

Businessmen from the community help. A grocer, for an example, came to class with 100 pennies one day.

He showed where each penny he made went in his store's operation. Instruction from the grocer didn't stop there.

He fielded questions. Before he finished, kids knew what to do with produce that doesn't sell, how to handle shoplifters and other insider stuff.

The math centre concept is recommended to other schools, according to a report prepared for delivery at the annual meeting of the National Mathematics Council in Albuquerque, N.M.

Here are some of the practical expercises:

—From the centre's grocery, four students operating the cafe bought real food from a local grocer. Real meat, vegetables and fruit. They sold at a profit.

—Cafe students prepared the food and served a meal paid for with play money by fellow classmates. Waitresses bought change for customers who had to figure a proper amount for a tip.

—Those in the lab grocery store worked up advertisements, mapped sales strategy, and calculated the cost of a product by figuring how much they would need to sell it for to show a profit, after paying all the bills.

—The plastic fruit and vegetables are in bins. Each has a price tag, individual price and the per-dozen price. The same for items in the bakery department. Figuring the price of a dozen at 25 per cent off is one exercise. In the course of this, boys and girls learn 25 percent and one-fourth and one-quarter are the same.

—Figuring costs of long distance calls for a specified amount of time from Bloomfield to several cities across the nations: A student must figure cost three ways: at the weekday full rate, the 35 per cent evening discount rate, and the 60 per cent night and weekend discount rate. This teaches multiplication and percentages. Students also learn long distance calls can be expensive or thrifty.

—Cooking in metrics: Learning to read and measure, using metrics, students work one hour in the centre's kitchen area. They adapt recipe to class size. Everyone gets at least one helping, including cooks.

—Money-making projects range from building birdhouses to baking rolls or popping corn for sale on the playground.

Inventory at the math centre is worth $13,000. Some items, including toys, are tempting. But vandalism is almost nil. The first year under $5 worth of things "walked away."

The real magic at the centre seems to be this: kids not realizing they're mastering complicated practical math — the type that used to turn them off.

Teachers, principals, parents or school board members wanting more information should write to Marvin Cain, Rio Vista Elementary School, P.O. Box 1779, Bloomfield, New Mexico, 87413.

volunteering

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau receives requests from organizations throughout Victoria for volunteers to help with a wide variety of programs. Some are looking for volunteers with previous education or experience, some provide appropriate training, and others require only enthusiasm and a willingness to learn on the job.

With such a wide selection of volunteer positions available, volunteers can choose a job that fits their personal interests and goals. A former teacher might choose to tutor a child in an elementary school. University or college students might volunteer with organizations which can provide them with extra training and experience in their chosen careers.

The following list of volunteer positions illustrates the wide variety of opportunities to use present qualifications or learn new skills.

An organization of women providing support and information to survivors of rape and sexual assault is looking for interested women to join their next training program which starts Jan. 8 and ends Feb. 20. The training is extensive and after training women would become active members of the organization. Registration deadline for the training program is Dec. 15. Child care can be arranged if necessary.

A community family theatre needs volunteer typists who are able to type at least 45 words per minute. The volunteers might also be involved in reception and other office duties. A volunteer who has shorthand skills would be especially welcome. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday and volunteers would be asked to help two half days or one full day per week.

A seniors' activity centre in the downtown area needs a volunteer instructor for a small group who wish to learn silkscreening. The instructor would come once a week for approximately two hours at a mutually convenient time. This position would start in January.

Commencing in the new year, volunteers are needed to introduce educational kits on cancer to teachers in Victoria elementary schools. A commitment of two hours a week during school time would be asked of the volunteers. Training on the kits and the procedure involved will be provided.

A community centre and elementary school need volunteer cafeteria assistants to help with setting and cleaning tables, preparing basic foods, and dishwashing. No special skills are required for this job and volunteers could choose to work Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Thursdays between 2 and 7 p.m. Occasional weekend work is also available.

An organization providing birth control counselling and information needs practical and registered nurses who would be trained to assist doctors, teach birth control, and provide counselling to clients seeking help. The volunteer would work on a weekday evening or afternoon for approximately two hours and could choose a commitment ranging from once a week to once a month. A long term commitment of at least a year is necessary for this position.

A residence for mentally handicapped adults takes a small group of residents shopping downtown on Wednesday evenings and at Hillside on Thursday and Friday evenings. They need some volunteers to meet the group and provide extra individual help with shopping.

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau can help you choose a volunteer job that meets your interests and expectations. For more information call the Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269. The Bureau is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday.

Victorians are pretty good at producing garbage. Statistics show the average family of four churns out about 16 pounds of refuse each day. Every year, we pay about $500 million dollars in Canada to dispose of all that garbage.

The collection and disposal of garbage are just the beginning of that monumental expense. Every soup can, refrigerator or tattered newspaper that ends up on the scrap heap costs us twice . . . first to dispose of it, then to cycle a replacement through the marketplace.

It is also costing us in land. Garbage dumps are taking up areas that could be used for other purposes, even though many garbage dumps are turned into sanitary landfill areas that eventually are recycled into public use. Burning garbage can pollute the air.

'L-Dopa needs replacing'

TORONTO (CP) — More study is needed to find a cure for Parkinson's disease which affects one in 200 Canadians over the age of 40, a Toronto researcher says.

Dr. William Tatton, director of a neurosciences unit at Toronto Western Hospital, where about 10 researchers are working on movement disorders such as Parkinson's disease and cerebral palsy, said Thursday the drug L-Dopa works, but has a time limit.

L-Dopa, heralded a decade ago as a miracle cure for Parkinson's disease, reduces tremors for up to six years in some people, but for only five or six months in others.

Tatton was speaking to the Parkinson Foundation of Canada this week.

Battleship Arizona, Dec.7, 1941

Pearl Harbor: a memorial

HONOLULU (NYT) — She was the first American battleship to be lost in the Second World War, and for years after she sank, the Arizona lay rusting in Pearl Harbor, a reminder of the unexpected assault on Dec. 7, 1941. A group of citizens led by H. Tucker Gratz, then head of Pepsi Cola in Honolulu, raised $500,000, and in 1962 a shelter was dedicated over the part of the wreck still above water. Now it was a national war memorial.

Today a $4.2 million visitors' center is being built onshore, near the Arizona, to accommodate the more than a million people who visit the ship each year. Congress voted the funds at the urging of Hawaii's two senators.

There will be theaters for showing films of the Pearl Harbor attack, parking lots and other amenities — "something like they do at Gettysburg," says an aide in the Honolulu office of Sen. Daniel K. Inouye. Work is expected to be finished next July.

But some things at the site remain the same after 38 years. More than a thousand bodies are entombed in the Arizona. Oil continues to bleed from the lifeless vessel. The emotional reaction of most visitors is constant.

Mood on Iran strikes chord

DALLAS (AP) — For thousands of Japanese-Americans, the bombs that turned Pearl Harbor into a funeral pyre 38 years ago Friday signaled an ugly change in American mood. Some see that mood rising again in the anti-Iranian demonstrations across the United States.

The naval base in Hawaii was obliterated on Dec. 7, 1941, and the United States declared war on Japan.

Within a few days of Pearl Harbor, "people became very aggressive and "a Jap is a Jap is a Jap," recalled Hiroo Fukyuama, who was 20, in 1941.

"Like the Iranian students, suddenly we realized what was happening. It happened so fast. Suddenly we were at war," he said.

Gykuyama and his brother, mother and father, who owned a hardware store in San Pedro, Calif., were among 110,000 Japanese living in the United Sttates who were forced to auction their homes and possessions for relocation at U.S. internment camps. Of them, 60,000 were naturalized or native-born American citizens.

The Fukayamas were sent to the Amache Relocation Centre at Grenada, Colo., in the spring of 1942.

"They didn't call it a concentration camp, but that's what it was. It was a terrifying experience," said Fukuyama, now executive vice-president of U.S. Aerial Inc., a U.S.-Japanese television and filmmaking company.

Why did the Americans react with such prejudice?

"I think it's a fear that they have because the nation was a very young nation" and had no strong, solid culture of its own, Fukuyama said, adding that he believes that fear has returned with the Iranian crisis.

But he said Iranian students should be allowed to stay in the country, and Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi — for whom 50 Americans are being held hostage in Tehran — should be turned over to Iran or to a world court.

"One of the problems of this country is that people can't see in perspective," he said, expaining he meant that Americans cannot seem to grasp the Iranian view that the shah is a criminal.

NATO coaxed on N-arms plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, trying to preserve NATO unity, is trying to persuade the leaders of Norway, the Netherlands and Denmark to accept plans for improving the alliance's nuclear deterrent.

Carter was to meet today with Premiers Odvar Nordli of Norway and Andreas van Agt of the Netherlands. Denmark's foreign minister, Kjeld Olesen, was to meet with State Secretary Vance and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

All three countries have voiced reservations about the U.S.-backed plan for introducing a new generation of nuclear missiles in Europe in the 1980s.

The plan — to be considered by North Atlantic Treaty Organization ministers in Brussels next week — has become a major test of the U.S. ability to lead the alliance in the face of determined Soviet efforts to prevent modernization of the NATO nuclear force.

The Carter administration saw its neutron weapons program blocked last year. Because of this, it has taken great pains to ensure the success of the missile initiative, which would place 572 new long-range Pershing II and Cruise missiles in Western Europe, replacing shorter-range weapons.

The Soviets have expressed alarm over the prospect of nuclear missiles in Germany.

Missile miss

OJAI, Calif. (UPI) — An unarmed cruise missile launched from a B-52 bomber fell 800 miles short of its target and slammed into a hillside in a remote section of the Los Padres National Forest. The 20-foot-long missile, launched Thursday about 400 miles off the Southern California coast, was one of 20 that the Air Force is testing.

Dramatic free replacement offer sweetens General Dynamics bid

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — General Dynamics, worried about criticism of its F-16 fighter aircraft engine, is promising free replacements for some F-16s the Canadian Forces might lose because of engine failure.

This last-minute offer, hedged with several conditions, is part of final manoeuvring by General Dynamics and McDonnell Douglas, both American companies, for Canada's $2.3-billion fighter plane contract. Defence Minister Allan McKinnon still is talking about a final cabinet decision on the winning aircraft by the end of the month.

The General Dynamics proposal to replace some F-16s free of charge is unusual — company officials say it is unique in fighter plane history. But the promise, made jointly with the F-16 engine builder, United Technologies, contains several conditions and might mean replacement of few, if any, aircraft.

General Dynamics would not replace free a lost aircraft unless the F-16 crash rate was higher than the government's projected level for the competing McDonnell Douglas F-18A, sources say. The aircraft engine would also have to be maintained at the engine-builder's standards and the crash would have to be because of engine failure.

The offer is good for 10 years after delivery of the first F-16 to the Canadian Forces.

McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics have also submitted some additional offers of benefits for Canadian industry in final talks with federal officials this week.

The government has demanded substantial business for Canadian industry in exchange for the contract to build 130 to 150 planes.

McDonnell Douglas, whose industrial benefits package has been under question in recent weeks, pledged about $500 million in new business this week to make up for $507 million which the government refused to allow in the competition.

A McDonnell Douglas official said Thursday the company increased its offer in the fields of research and development and high technology during a Monday meeting with Industry Minister Robert de Cotret, McKinnon and other federal officials.

The company now is offering a total of more than $3 billion in business to Canadian industry, he said.

General Dynamics officials said recently their company and United Technologies have promised an additional $490 million in business, raising their industrial benefits program to $2.9 billion.

The $490 million includes a $400-million investment for a new United Technologies engine parts plant operated by its Canadian subsidiary, Pratt and Whitney of Canada. General Dynamics would invest another $90 million in a machining centre at Mirabel, Que., near Montreal.

The two companies are being asked to balance their offers so all regions in Canada get some benefit. Bernard Landry, Quebec's economic development minister, said in Quebec Thursday he is asking Ottawa to give his province 50 per cent of the benefits.

One federal source said the offer is a "dramatic thing and an attention-getter."

United Technologies was so concerned about recent news stories critical of the F-16's engine that it advertised a top U.S. Air Force general's favorable comments in major newspapers across Canada and the U.S. this week.

Robert Hermann, a top defence official in Washington, also reaffirmed the U.S. Air Force's "strong support" of the engine. His statement was apparently prompted by protests from United Technologies about the way news reports interpreted testimony by U.S. Air Force Gen. Alton Slay to the Senate armed services committee last week.

Slay told the committee there had been 755 cases of stalling in the twin-engined F-15 but none so far in the single-engined F-16. The F-16 engine is a newer, modified version of the F-15 engine.

General Dynamics and United Technologies said in a letter to the government this week they understand the federal fighter project team estimates the loss rate of F-16 fighters will be substantially higher than for F-18As.

A third option offered Quebec

By DANIEL DROLET

MONTREAL (CP) — Saying it is his duty as a former cabinet minister to prevent Quebec society from polarizing into two camps around the question of sovereignty-association, Rodrigue Tremblay has launched a new book describing his constitutional "third option."

Tremblay, who resigned from the Parti Quebecois in a huff last September after Premier Rene Levesque dumped him as minister of industry and commerce, has since been trying to promote a Swiss-style confederation for Canada.

He says this "third option" — which lies somewhere in the grey area between the PQ's plans for sovereignty-association and the Quebec Liberal party's idea of renewed federalism — should be included on the ballot in next spring's referendum.

In an attempt to muster public support for his third option, he has run newspaper ads and called for donations.

The book is his latest attempt to marshal public opinion for his cause, and it includes an application for membership in his "National Committee of Quebecers for a True Confederation," along with a call for money.

Speaking to reporters, the former minister said his third option is a "common ground, middle-of-the-road solution" to Canada's constitutional problems.

Multiculturaslism flip-flop laid to Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative government has backed off an election-campaign promise to shift control over most spending on multiculturalism to the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism.

Senator Jacques Flynn, government leader in the Senate, said Multiculturalism Minister Steve Paproski told him the government has reviewed the campaign statement and still will consult the council but won't give it any financial responsibility.

Flynn was responding Wednesday to Liberal Senator Peter Bosa (Ontario) who asked last week when the change, promised in a policy statement issued by Tory party headquarters last May 3, would come into effect.

"It's another flip-flop," Senator Rosa, a former council chairman, said Wednesday.

ONE ONLY Must Go
Our Last Bayliner Saratoga Express

Outfitted for cruising, this boat has a well planned galley, a dinette that makes into a double berth, enclosed head and loads of storage space. The cabin comes with curtains as standard equipment. This large cockpit is ideal for fishing with hardtop and stand-up camper canvas. This model is a fisherman's dream as steering and controls are at hand in the cockpit and there is a large fish box built into the transom. Blue hull and hardtop, white deck. This boat must go before we move. BUY NOW AND SAVE. Stock No. 151.

UN raps Israeli stance

From AP-REUTER

The UN General Assembly, ending its annual Middle East debate, voted 102-to-17 with 20 abstentions Thursday for a resolution that condemns all "separate treaties which violate the recognized rights of the Palestinian people."

Canada joined the United States and other major Western powers in voting against the resolution.

A resolution without that condemnation was approved by the assembly at the end of a 1978 debate by a vote of 100-to-four with 33 abstentions.

Many speakers made clear that they regarded the provision as directed against the Camp David, Md., agreements of September, 1978, and the Washington treaty of March, 1979, under which Egypt and Israel now are negotiating on Palestinian self-rule in Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

Thursday's resolution, like others dating back to 1975, called for Israel's withdrawal from all occupied Arab territories, the Palestinians' attainment of national rights and a comprehensive peace settlement arranged at a Geneva conference with the Palestine Liberation Organization participating — a condition Israel has rejected.

Egyptian Ambassador Esmat Abdel Meguid voted for the resolution with reservations, remarking that the part about separate treaties "should be deleted." He said Egypt would support any move favoring Palestinian rights and described the Camp David agreements as a step in the right direction.

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Blum voted against, calling the proposal an "anti-peace resolution." He said it is such resolutions that has people around the world asking what kind of organization the United Nations is if it objects to two countries "who have been in a state of war concluding peace."

Meanwhile, the Israeli foreign ministry said Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian Presdent Anwar Sadat may conduct a summit meeting, starting on New Year's Day, over three days.

The meeting is likely to focus on the slow-moving Palestinian autonomy talks and normalization of relations between the two countries.

In Jerusalem, Jewish and Arab students, some wielding bicycle chains, clashed on Hebrew University campus in a brawl caused by a demonstration in support of two suspended Arab students.

Summer, fall care vital gardening

hilda beastall

Successful flowering of a few well-loved house plants for the Christmas season depends on conditions during the past summer and fall just as much as on present circumstances.

The cactus which commonly blooms at Christmas (Schlumbergera bridgesii for those who like to be botanically updated) does its growing in early summer. July and August with more warmth and less water are the months to mature the new growths.

By the middle of September the plants are ready to begin four weeks without water. During that one-month period, this cactus plant can be placed in a spot where light reaches but is not direct hot sunlight. By the end of October, this treatment results in a cluster of tiny hairs appearing at the tip of each new growth. These are advance notice that a flower bud will come in the centre of each cluster within a few days.

From the end of October, the plant will do well in either a north window if the light is unrestricted, or in an east window. In an apartment with windows restricted to one direction, give it good light but not direct scorching sun. This is a jungle cactus, remember.

Once the buds are well formed and beginning to color, they sometimes meet with disaster. A few are found to have dropped overnight; this may continue until few are left to open.

There are two or three causes of this bud-dropping. One is wet soil. It should be only moderately damp at this time, with a fair watering once weekly. The amount and timing depends on size of pot and plant.

Another reason for bud-drop is fertilizer given at some time since the summer maturing. The time for fertilizer is during the growth period of early summer and then only if repotting has not been done and the plant is large and old in the same pot for many years.

A further point that may contribute to bud-drop on this Christmas cactus is moving the plant to a new position after buds are formed. Native jungle plants are extremely sensitive to light and change of light. Leave the plant where it is after buds are developed until some have opened. This seems to stabilize the balance of growth and from then on, no more buds should drop unless the plant is overwatered, given fertilizer, or put into a cold or a hot place suddenly.

The Chinese Jade-plant has clusters of small buds showing now at the tip of every shoot. These open to jewel-like starry white flowers each with a tinge of pink.

The end of December is the appropriate time for this to happen and is an event worth celebrating among house plants in our northern homes.

The plant is one of the hundreds of Crassulas, native to South Africa as are most of the succulent tribe. This one is Crassula arborescens (tree-like) showing its form as a stocky well-branched small tree in a pot, or growing to 8 feet outdoors in southern California.

In summer, it likes as warm a temperature as we are likely to get here, exposure to sun that is not scorching, and moderation in watering of the sandy loam in which it grows.

Winter in the home should be spent in a light window on the cool side, and still very seldom watered. Again it depends on the size of the pot and whether the plant is pot bound.

These two lovely plants are well worth a few minutes studying so that they may add their flowering beauty to our homes during December and January.

BAY OF PIGS VICTIM Thomas Willard Ray finally made it back to U.S. soil. Killed by Cuban gunfire during the attempted Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba 17 years ago, his body had been kept in cold storage in Cuba ever since. But family members have been working with diplomats to recover his corpse, and daughter Janet Weininger met the coffin when it arrived in Birmingham, Ala., Thursday.

Prison race riot leaves two dead

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — The pent-up anger of Soledad prison convicts who spent four months locked in their cells after a racial assault exploded in a wave of hatred and two prisoners were killed before guards broke up the melee with clubs and birdshot, officials say.

"It appears to have been a planned assault by blacks on whites and Chicanos and it appears to have been a retaliation for an assault by whites on blacks Aug. 19," said Phil Guthrie, spokesman for the corrections department.

Two white convicts died of multiple stab wounds, prison officials said. Seventeen others were injured Thursday afternoon.

Officials said about 100 guards waded in among 80 shouting, grappling convicts — many wielding handmade knives — to break up the battlers as 220 uninvolved convicts shrank back, keeping clear of the trouble.

A virtual carpet of discarded weapons, rags and debris covered the prison yard after the 35-minute melee.

"The atmosphere at this time is very tense at north facility," said Dan Byrd, a spokesman for the 3,000-convict prison. "The north facility houses a younger, more immature and violent-prone type of inmate than either the central or south facility."

Said Guthrie: "We haven't had any riots this serious — with two dead — in more than a year. We've had at least two race riots there this year."

Since the August riot, in which guards also were forced to fire birdshot, the convicts of north facility had been under "lockdown," the prison jargon for being locked in their cells. In the four-month aftermath, prison officials gradually relaxed the procedure.

Prison Supt. Otis Loggins said some authorities had been told by some convicts that "whenever we open up again the inmates were going to get it on."

"We've been hearing that information since August," Loggins said. "We went as long as we felt was reasonable. We took every reasonable precaution. We went to final unlock today, and we had a serious incident today."

Caribbean isle held by rebels

ST. GEORGES, Grenada (UPI) — A band of rebels today seized one of the Grenadine islands belonging to the island of St. Vincent in defiance of conservative Prime Minister's Milton Cato landslide election victory, government officials said.

The unidentified rebels captured the airport and police station at Union Island, officials said.

St. Vincent radio did not mention the attack, but Home Affairs Minister Clive Tannis said in an interview with Radio Antilles in Montserrat that a planeload of 15 police with automatic weapons had been sent to Union island to put down the uprising.

He said St. Vincent, which held elections Wednesday, has appealed for armed assistance from the United States, Britain and Barbados.

Grenada government deputy information minister Philis Choard in a radio interview denied any involvement of the revolutionary government of Grenada and said flatly, "This affair is St. Vincent's."

St. Vincent voters re-elected pro-western Prime Minister Cato by a landslide, giving him 11 of 13 parliamentary seats.

Right-to-die given comatose monk

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A judge ruled Thursday in New York state's first right-to-die case that a priest can ask doctors to disconnect a respirator supporting a comatose 83-year-old Roman Catholic monk.

Brother Joseph Charls Fox is "entitled to decline treatment," because he had told members of his Marianist community he did not want any "extraordinary means" to prolong life, state Supreme Court Justice Robert Meade ruled.

Fox has been in "a chronic vegetative state and is totally incompetent" and his religious superior, Rev. Phillip Eichner, is entitled to have the respirator removed, the judge ruled.

But Meade said no other life-support treatment — in this case intravenous feeding — may be suspended.

Thousands flock to Canadian's 'healing' touch

By JOHN DARNTON
New York Times

WARSAW — The phenomenon of faith-healing is sweeping Poland in the person of a thin, intense, curly-haired Canadian "miracle worker" named Clive Harris.

Three months ago a small sign, posted on the interior courtyard of St. Jacques Dominican Church and Monastery here, advised people with ailments to submit applications to see Harris; it was the only printed notice that he would post.

This week the church was besieged by a tumultuous crowd, estimated by Harris' assistants and confirmed by the number of printed tickets issued, at 25,000 a day. Long lines snaked along the cobbled side streets of the Gothic-style New Town. Thousands waited patiently in the bitter cold as long as five hours for that appointed moment in which they would file quickly past Harris and feel the touch of his long, slender fingers. Among them were nuns and priests, civil servants, medical students, the aged in wheelchairs, farmers who had driven hundreds of miles and terminal patients brought by ambulance from city hospitals.

Faith healing in this form is new to Poland, and judging from its attraction it has struck a responsive chord among the deeply religious predominantly Roman Catholic population. At the same time it would appear to be an anachronism for a government that follows the path of scientific socialism and adheres to Marxist principles of rationality in human affairs.

Harris, who is about 35 years old and who accepts no money or gifts, is famous in Poland, where he is universally referred to by his given name. He is not that well known elsewhere in Europe, though he appears to be in good standing in spiritualist circles in Britain, where he is known as an "independent healer." During each of his six or seven previous visits here he has drawn progressively larger crowds, but never has the turnout been as large as on his current tour. The organizers of the visit, brothers named Maximilian and Benedict Bylicki, predict that he will see 450,000 people in the course of a three-week stay that will take him to all major cities.

"When we began four years ago we had 100 people," said Maximilian Bylicki, a 22-year-old musician, clicking a counter incessantly as the crowd surged around him. "Then we had 500 and then 1,000, and we were afraid. How were we going to handle all these people? Now we get 30,000 a day and we are not afraid at all."

Neither of the two major institutions in public life, the Roman Catholic Church and the Communist Party, has given public notice to Harris, but his ability to get visas to come from his home in London twice a year and to hold his audiences in a church refectory are taken as signs that the Central Committee and the episcopate lend tacit approval to his activities.

Newspapers have not avoided comment. Even the Marxist weekly Polityka ran a long article last year that attempted to weigh the results and determine whether Harris cured people. In a tone of "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio," it concluded that evidence was lacking one way or the other.

People advance diverse theories to substantiate Harris' purported powers. Some believe that his hands emit radioactive rays; others explain him in terms of biomagnetism. Some believe the primary effect is psychological but still valid, especially for cases so severe that they are given up as lost by physicians.

"You feel a sort of pinprick when he touches you," said Marianna Witan, an elderly inhabitant of Otwock. She said Harris had cured her of a curvature of the spine, but now she felt she needed treatment for a tumor.

"I have seen him cure a man whose fingers were so black and painful that he could not sleep at night," said the Rev. Zygmunt Miszta, rector of a small parish church in Chruslin. He brought a 6-year-old whose eyes have whirled uncontrollably since she suffered a dog bite; it was her second treatment and she was already improving, he added.

What is striking is that the patients are from all walks of life. The head of the pediatric unit at a major hospital here is said to have consulted Harris, and rumors circulate that high party officials have appeared. "At night some limousines pull up," an assistant remarked.

Harris works from 6 a.m. to midnight without a break, the line moving past him constantly. Each person holds up a card that lists, in English, the site of the ailment. Harris touches the affected area for less than a second, grimaces in concentration and moves on to the the next person while his assistants gently lead the patient away.

Teacher out to clear slur

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) — A Canadian teacher has been expelled from Bermuda after two months on the island. And although Stephen Overbury, 28, returned to Canada when his two-week notice expired this week, he intends to carry on a fight to clear his name and get reinstated.

Overbury, from Toronto, says he was the victim of a campaign of antagonism by his school headmaster.

The Amalgamated Bermuda Union of Teachers has taken up his case and is trying to "get to the bottom of the matter" by going through the grievance procedure with the island's department of education.

Overbury alleged that Yvonne Simmons, headmaster at Victor Scott School where he was a specialist reading teacher, "made life hell for me." He also criticized Chief Education Officer SinclairRichards for his methods of "interrogation and manipulation."

Richards said the teacher was dismissed after a series of clashes with Simmons and other staff that climaxed with a heated confrontation between Richards and Overbury in his office. At that meeting, Overbury said he would not be pushed around and continually challenged his role at the school, Richards said.

But Overbury tells a different story. He says that Simmons's first words to him on his arrival at the school were to the effect: "I am sorry they hired you. I was hoping for someone with a different background."

Overbury said: "That was about the most civil comment I received.

"From then on the pressure was mounted against me. My motive right now is to be reinstated. I have every right. I have done my job."

He has listed his grievances with the teachers' union and has asked it to fight on his behalf.

Heron implant fills the bill

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A black-crested night heron was getting along just dandy Thursday with a new false beak implanted in a six-hour operation in a dentist's office.

The heron was found Monday night at San Francisco Zoo with its long lower beak snapped into two. All that connected it was a piece of tissue.

"We treated him for shock and gave him some antibiotics," said William Mottram, the zoo's veterinarian. "I'll tell you, I sure didn't expect to see him alive Tuesday."

But he was still alive, and the next afternoon he was taken to the office of Dr. Edward Cowan, a dentist friend of one of the zookeepers.

Cowan anesthesized the heron, wired thebroken beak in place, took an impression and made a mold. From the mold he shaped the same pink acrylic that goes in human dentures.

The denture was wired to the bill through a series of tiny drilled holes.

Back at the zoo's hospital, the bird, still an angler to the core, speared a fish inside his cage. The next day it speared nine more.

The heron is a black, white and gray bird with a flashing red-ringed eye and the scientific name, Nycticorax nycticorax Hoacti, that has had bad luck in the past.

When it arrived in 1976, it had a damaged wing, and the wing was amputated. Fortunately, the dentist worked for free. Mottram said, "That heron's just like all the rest of us in (the Parks Department). We have no dental plan."

London's squatters squat on squatters

By SHERRI BARRON

LONDON (CP) — All's fair in love and squatting, desperate Londoners agree. The question is whose squat is being squatted in by whom.

There are an estimated 30,000 squatters in the Greater London area, says the London Squatters Union. The problem is that squatters are beginning to intrude on squatters.

The dictionary says a squatter is "a person who takes unauthorized possession of an unoccupied flat."

It goes this way. Should you leave home and hearthside unoccupied for a month or so, chances are you return to find squatters have taken over.

Turf them out? Impossible. You must go to law to evict the intruders and meanwhile you aren't even collecting rent from them.

You are, however, handing over mortgage payments and taxes.

Witness the sad plight of the Charlton family of six.

They were living in subsidized housing in Furzen Close, Slough, Berkshire, when they learned there was better housing being built by local council a short jump away.

They packed up and trundled into the new housing estate in Amberley Road, Slough, and settled in. Assuring them better days were coming, council urged them to return to their original rent-subsidized premises for a while.

So, the squatting Charltons headed back home. But there was a light in the window.

Mrs. Lorraine Geard and her daughter had taken over the Charlton's abandoned dwelling.

"If they can become squatters, so can I," said 21-year-old Lorraine.

"I've nowhere else to go, so I'm staying put."

"I know how she feels," said squat-minded Mrs. Loret Charlton. "But she should have chosen another flat. We promised to be out of the flat in a fortnight but now we have nowhere to go."

In this case the young mother gave in and moved out.

Squatting has been reported in England since the mid-17th century but the most spectacular boom was in the late 1960s, says Home Emergency Office Spokesman Ron Bailey.

"In 1968 people were just totally fed up with the long waiting lists for council houses (government-subsidized housing) and many peope were living in severely overcrowded, intolerable conditions.

"They started moving into the tens of thousands of empty houses owned by the local authorities — some of them empty for more than a year."

There are close to a million council houses in the Greater London area and the Association of London Borough Housing reports a record 97,000 increase in people registering on housing waiting lists, bringing the list total to 300,000.

One-third of the housing stock in England is council housing. The housing authorities allocate houses on a priority-point system.

More and more people are turning to the public housing sector because of increased difficulty finding private accommodation they can afford.

The Homeless Persons Act of 1977 gives priority to pregnant women, one-parent families, the disabled and old-age pensioners but Paddy Coulter, spokesman for the Campaign for the Homeless and Rootless, says the act discriminates against the single homeless and childless families.

Squatting continues to increase as the London boroughs try to deal with 17,000 homeless families this year.

Government tried to curb the increase in squatting last year by introducing a Criminal Trespass Act outlining new eviction procedures.

Repealing the old Common Law and statutory offence on forcible entry dating back to 1381, the new act says squatting is a criminal offence "where a person who is a trespasser fails to leave a council dwelling on being required to do so by or on behalf of a protected intending occupier of premises."

A squatter who defies an eviction order can be charged, and if convicted faces a maximum of six months in jail and a £1,000 ($2,500) fine.

But even with the risk of conviction, squatters imposing on fellow-squatters is sometimes the only solution.

Interpreter required

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Police Thursday charged a circus elephant with attacking a young boy on is way to school and forwarded the case to public prosecutor Nic Oberholzer.

Oberholzer said he had never come across such a ridiculous thing in his life.

"We would need an interpreter who speaks elephant," Oberholzer said.

Jackie the elephant is alleged to have knocked 14-year-old Sarel Goosen unconscious and tossed him against a fence on Tuesday.

Billingsgate fishmongers pulling nets

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (Reuter) — Europe's oldest fish market is moving soon.

After 1,000 years Billingsgate Market is bowing to traffic pressures. Next summer a two-lane thoroughfare is due to impinge on its riverside setting in the commercial heart of London, forcing it a few kilometres along the river to the dockland area.

It is a traumatic moment for Billingsgate's fishmongers in their blood-smeared smocks and the porters in their brass-studded, basin-shaped leather hats.

Their eyes grow moist at the thought of leaving legendary Billingsgate, the worlds biggest inland fish forum. But there may be an element of theatre amid the pathos.

"Sad as it may be, it is inevitable," says Gerald Watkin, the chief fishmonger. "The need for a move is urgent."

1,000-year tradition ending

Billingsgate, on the left bank of the Thames near London Bridge, has rich historical associations. Painter William Hogarth (1697-1764) called it a dirty place, notorious for "ribaldry not worth relating."

It was noted for strong smells, and language to match. Dramatist Ben Jonson (1573-1637) wrote in The Devil is an Ass of bawds and roisterers dining at Billingsgate on claret and oysters.

Others spoke of stinking fish — and the visitor's nostrils twitch on arriving at adjacent Monument station. The aroma seems incongruous in what is predominantly a business district.

The market casts its nets widely. Claiming the largest variety of fish in Europe, it has a turnover of $174 million annually. On sale are squid from California, live lobster from New Brunswick, salmon from the Pacific and supplies from Japan, China, South Africa, Kenya, Hong Kong and Pakistan.

From nearer home, imports pass into Billingsgates antiquated Gothic building, with its ironwork roof and ornamental weathervane from Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium, Iceland and Spain.

Market long-noted for its smells

Normally some 250 tons daily move through the market. Wholesalers say the leading exporters include the Republic of Ireland, Greenland, Denmark and Italy.

Slender hopes persist that Billingsgate will get a deathbed reprieve. Some lobbyists are trying to save the main building, with its vaulted roof and cast-iron pillars, as a prime example of industrial architecture.

Architect Richard Rogers has joined with a conservation society in pleading with city fathers to transform the market into what he calls a fun place, built round boutiques, shops and restaurants.

He points to such centres as Boston's Quincy Market and San Francisco's Ghirardelli Square as examples of inner-city commerce turned into urban landmarks.

"The Thames is London's largest open space," says Rogers. "Now it is just a ravine dividing London. It could be a force binding the city together."

Rogers is co-architect with Renzo Piano of Genoa of the Pompidou Arts Centre on the right bank of the Seine in Paris, now thriving after early controversy.

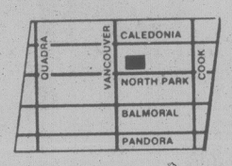

Unless Billingsgate is saved, pessimists predict that a money-making office building will be put up where the market now stands.

David Butcher, Billingsgate's superintendent, sheds few tears over the projected market move.

"It's sad to be leaving the old place," he agrees, "but it's also true that this is an exciting opportunity which will do nothing but good to the fishtrade."

Improbable naval warfare overlooked in peace talks

By ALAN COWELL

KARIBA (Reuter) — An improbable naval conflict between two landlocked countries appears to have gone unnoticed at the London peace talks aimed at ending Zimbabwe Rhodesia's seven-year bush war.

But on both sides of the vast, man-made Lake Kariba between Zimbabwe Rhodesia and its hostile northern neighbor, Zambia, the war is very much a reality.

The lakeside harbor here provides a berth for Zimbabwe Rhodesia's small but potent navy — a fleet of high-powered speedboats equipped with weapons ranging from .50-calibre machine guns to 20-mm cannons.

Roving the scenic lake in patrols of four, the navy is a crucial part of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's attempts to stem the infiltration across Lake Kariba by guerrillas from Joshua Nkomo's Zambian-based Zibabwe Peoples Revolutionary Army (ZIPRA) wing of the Patriotic Front. The Zambians also patrol the lake.

At the London talks, which group the biracial Salisbury government and its Patriotic Front guerrilla enemies under British chairmanship, the agreement in principle on a ceasefire, reached Wednesday, has covered ground troops and the air force — but there is no apparent mention of the navy.

Because neither Zambia nor Zimbabwe Rhodesia, has access to the sea, the naval war is confined to the lake — 280 kilometres ~~miles~~ long and 32 kilometres across at its widest point — and to the Zambesi River that feeds it.

Officially, little information is available about naval action in the area. Military headquarters in Salisbury refuses to allow reporters to talk to the region's commanders.

But unofficial sources here say naval action has been stepped up since the London peace talks opened more than three months ago.

A local businessman who offers power-boats for charter says his vessels have been used to augment the official patrols.

The number of "contacts" with ZIPRA groups trying to navigate the lake and enter Zimbabwe Rhodesia before a settlement is finally reached is believed to have risen markedly in recent weeks, sources say.

Groups of up to 200 ZIPRA guerrillas have been observed moving across the darkened waters of the lake and river by night, using inflatable rubber boats to reach their homeland from bases in Zambia, the sources say.

Kariba has occasionally been mortared by the Zambians, whose troops are entrenched on the thickly wooded hills.

But no incidents have been reported since last May when Zimbabwe Rhodesia troops, here in force, pounded back at the Zambians after an attack that sent stray mortars peppering the small resort of Kariba and its lakeside hotels.

Little is known publicly here of the Zambian patrols. "They have two or three patrol boats," one resident said. "Our fishermen won't go over there in case they are blown out of the water."

Since the London talks started, the number of ZIPRA guerrillas inside Zimbabwe Rhodesia is believed to have risen from some 2,000 to between 4,000 and 5,000, indicating that the Patriotic Front forces are managing to pierce the Rhodesian blockade.

Their landfall is in wild tribal trust land, or African reserves, on the craggy Zambesi escarpment. These underpopulated areas must first be traversed by the guerrillas before they can seek sanctuary in the more numerous African villages further south.

The stepped-up infiltration appears aimed at getting as many guerrillas as possible inside the country before a ceasefire is declared, bolstering Nkomo's position if the guns fall silent, and preparing for any breakdown in the ceasefire.

For much of the time in Kariba, one of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's main resorts, the war on the lake seems remote.

At evening, tiny fishing boats bob out on the waters to catch kapenta, a freshwater sardine originally introduced on the Zambian side of the lake. During the day, water-skiers churn through the waves.

Ethiopia tide turning?

ROME (Reuter) — Eritrean guerrillas say they have turned the tide of war against Ethiopian government forces after winning a big battle in the Red Sea province.

A leader of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front said the guerrillas captured government positions near the northeastern Eritrean town of Nakfa last weekend and that the Ethiopians are retreating toward the coast and the south.

It was the first reported success for many months for the front, one of three guerrilla groups fighting for the independence of the province.

Nakfa was one of the last towns held by the guerrillas after Ethiopia launched a big counter-offensive, backed by the Soviet Union and Cuba, to regain control of Eritrea a year ago.

Ermias Debesai, a member of the front central committee, said oin an interview it was the most important battle since the Ethiopian offensive and added: "The balance of power has completely changed in our favor."

Ethiopian embassy here was not immediately available for comment.

10-12% ICBC increase likely

New rates out in two weeks

By JAKE BANKY

B.C. motorists can expect to pay more for auto insurance in 1980.

ICBC president Robbie Sherrell presented the proposed Autoplan rates to cabinet Thursday and said afterwards they will be made public within the next two weeks.

Although Sherrell gave no hints about the new rates they are expected to show a 10- to 12-per cent increase over 1979.

This projection by industry sources is based on the recently released ICBC half-yearly report which expressed serious concern over the rising cost of settling claims, particularly for accidents involving bodily injury.

In the first six months of 1979, cost of the average reported claim was up 12 per cent and cost of settling bodily injury claims up 16 per cent compared to the first half of 1978.

The report says this increase puts acute pressure on attempts to stabilize rates and hold the line for B.C. motorists.

The sources suggest this translates into an increase slightly heavier than last year's 10-per-cent jump in the basic rate.

They draw particular attention to the fact that there has been no change in the premiums for collision and comprehensive coverage since the massive rate increases brought in by the new Social Credit government in 1976.

Sherrell, meanwhile, is shedding no tears for the private insurance companies who are asking the government to limit ICBC's new Fundamental Auto Insurance Ratings (FAIR) structure to basic coverage so they can compete for non-compulsory coverage.

Sherrell said the private companies will have to pull

Eerie chants from Iran's roofs

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iran's foreign minister said today some of the 50 U.S. hostages will be freed shortly and others tried as spies, with possible death penalties. But Ayatollah Khomeini quickly jeopardized the promised releases with a blistering attack on the United States.

Khomeini said Iranians should sever all ties with the U.S. and "rub America's snout into the dust." He dismissed the U.N. Security Council resolution calling for release of the hostages as an "American plot."

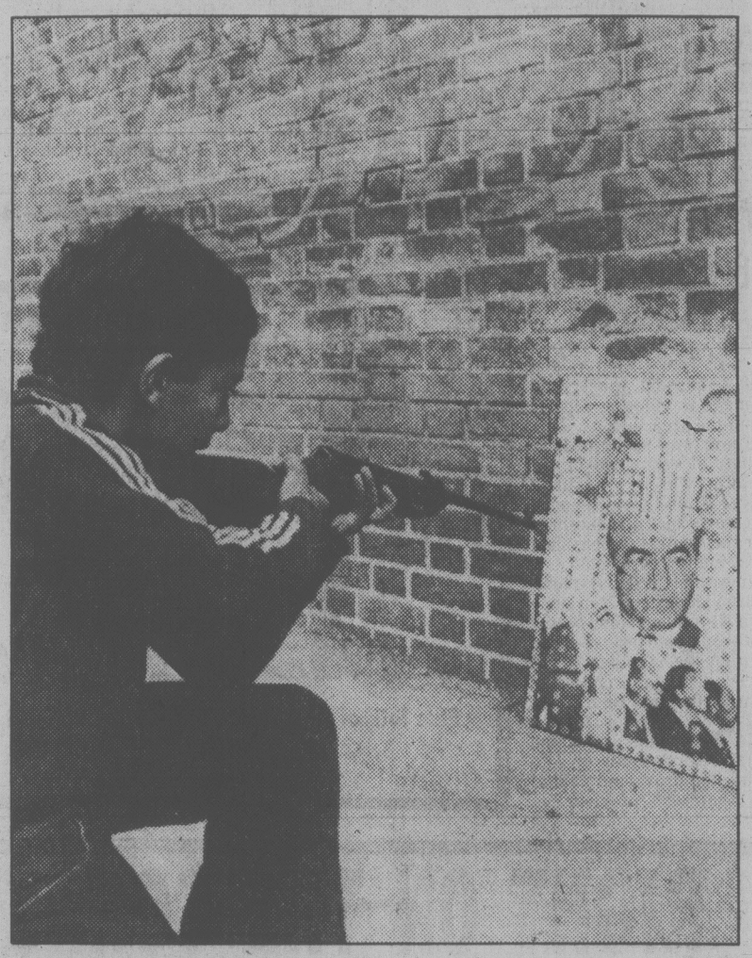

In one of the eeriest developments in the entire month-long crisis, millions of Iranians, at Khomeini's behest, took to their rooftops at nightfall chanting, "Allah Akbar!" ("God is great!"), "Down with Carter!" and "Death to America!"

The entire capital of Tehran echoed to the repeated chants for 15 minutes from seemingly the entire population.

Militant students, too, denounced Foreign Minister Sadegh Godbzadeh's statement on the release of more hostages as "completely false" and said none of the Americans, being held for the 34th day today, would be released until Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran to stand trial.

In Paris, French justice ministry sources said a nephew of the shah, the son of his twin sister Princess Ashraf, was shot and killed today on a street in the French capital. He was identified as Mustapha Chafik, 34, one of the two sons of the shah's sister.

The conflicting statements on the American hostages reflected the continued deep divisions in Tehran and a continuing battle involving Khomeini, militant students and various governmnt members about the future of the captives.

Godbzadeh initially announced what appeared to be a breakthrough in the deadlock at a news conference when he said some hostages would be freed.

"I assure you they will be freed," he said. "I cannot say when that will be ... I hope not very far from now."

But he insisted some hostages almost certainly would stand trial and promised to issue a statement on the matter by Saturday.

"Those who are guilty of espionage ... have breached the limits of diplomatic immunity," Godbzadeh said. "Some of them are not even diplomats. These people are not going to benefit from diplomatic immunity."

Asked if any hostages might be sentenced to death and shot by a firing squad, the foreign minister replied: "Anything is possible."

Meanwhile, ethnic Turkish rebels claimed control of the capital of northwestern Azerbaijan province today, and said any government peace mission must be approved by their religious leader, whose reservations about Khomeini's theocratic constitution touched off bloody rioting.

Supporters of Ayatollah Mohammed Kazem Shariat-Madari, spiritual head of Iran's 3.5 million ethnic Turks, seized the radio and TV station in Tabriz.

And in the U.S., President Carter's mother said Thursday she is "getting more money than you ever saw" since she suggested a contract should be taken out on the life of Iran's unofficial leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Campaigning in Alabama for the re-election of her son, Miss Lillian was asked about a statement she had made Nov. 29 in Bow, N.H., that if she had $1 million, she would hire someone to kill Khomeini.

Increased gas exports big bonanza for B.C.

B.C. will receive $85 million a year in additional revenue from natural gas exports as part of a $15 billion gas export plan, a spokesman for Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. said Thursday.

John Anderson, Westcoast executive vice-president, said the revenue will come from a contract under which Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. will sell a minimum of 60 million cubic feet of gas daily to El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Federal Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshin announced Thursday that additional exports of natural gas to the U.S. totalling 3.75 trillion cubic feet will be allowed between now and 1987.

The gas will be sold at $3.30 U.S. a thousand cubic feet but the price is expected to increase with changes in the price of crude oil.

Westcoast's allowable daily exports of gas will go to 869 million cubic feet from their present level of 809 million cubic feet.

Anderson said that under existing revenue-sharing arrangements, B.C. natural gas producers will get about $25 million a year and the provincial government's B.C. Petroleum Corp. will receive a minimum of $50 million and perhaps as much as $58 million.

Anderson said additional pipeline facilities needed to service the contract will reduce revenues by about $10 million a year. However, in the early years of the contract, costs will be almost entirely offset by additional revenues the province will receive for transporting natural gas from the Yukon to the U.S. under another export contract approved Thursday, he said.

Meanwhile, a B.C. energy policy promised for this month will not be forthcoming.

Energy Minister Bob McClelland said the provincial energy policy statement will be made instead "around the end of January or early in February."

McClelland, who took over the portfolio from Jim Hewitt in the Nov. 23 cabinet shuffle, says:

"I am gratified at the progress made under my

Imperial hazy over supply

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark said today the government hasn't been able to get clear assurances from the giant Imperial Oil Ltd. that oil destined for Canada won't be diverted to Imperial's U.S. parent, Exxon Corp.

Clark said that Imperial president Jack Armstrong will be asked for better assurances at a meeting today with Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn.

"The Imperial-Exxon situation, which is historic and too well known in this country, is one of those over which we have least control," Clark said at his weekly news conference.

He said the government had sought assurances from all oil companies about the security of supplies destined for Canada and "Imperial's response was one of the most equivocal of the responses that we received from the companies regarding the diversions."

Clark's comments about Imperial appeared to contradict his reply to a similar question earlier in the same news conference when he said Hnatyshyn "has dealt with all the major oil companies" on diverting oil from Canada.

"It would seem that there would be no diversion of supplies intended for Canada," he said. "The commitment of the oil companies is something we can count on."

Last winter, Exxon diverted Venezuelan oil destined for Imperial refineries in Canada to markets outside the country and set off a furor in the Commons.

Imperial, largest oil company in the country, already is being called on the carpet by the government to explain why it decided to increase gasoline prices this week by 3.4 cents a gallon.

Bouey to stay head financier

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald K. Bouey, 59, has been reappointed Governor of the Bank of Canada for a seven-year term, Prime Minister Joe Clark announced today.

Senior deputy governor R. W. Lawson has also been reappointed to a second term of seven years.

For a central banker, Bouey has been an unusually high-profile target of criticism for raising interest rates to record levels. The bank rate has been raised 11 times since March, 1978, and now stands at 14 per cent.

cabinet. It was the last directors' meeting before the governor's term expired.

Bouey, who reaches the retirement age of 65 in 1985, two years before his second term expires, said he may not stay the full seven years.

In the Commons, the Opposition criticized the timing of the reappointment before completion of a Commons-ordered investigation into the central bank and its interest-rate policies by the finance committee.

The governor has maintained the increase in rates has been necessary to defend the value of the dollar.

Sunday punch for Lord's Day Act

The B.C. government is preparing to smite the Lord's Day dilemma hip and thigh.

For years the old Lord's Day Act, a federal statute relating to Sunday activities, has been a centre of controversy.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said Thursday the government finally is ready to act.

After two years of study and nine months of discussions, he plans to put a set of recommendations before cabinet in the next week or ten days, and new regulations for Sunday opening may be revealed as early as next month.

'Get out,' top Bennett aide explodes at press

By JAKE BANKY

For the second time in two days a senior aide to Premier Bill Bennett has blown his cork at the press.

Dan Campbell, the premier's director of intergovernmental affairs, came out of his office today to tell reporters he doesn't intend to answer any more questions on the dirty tricks affair.

Then when reporters persisted in asking questions, Campbell lost his temper.

"I'm a free citizen," he snapped.

"I refuse to answer you. Get out of here."

When it was pointed out that his office is public, he repeated: "Get out of here."

When newsmen continued to press him about payment of Social Credit election expenses, Campbell angrily suggested they look at provincial election expenses.

Told no details were available, Campbell warned: "Don't come into this office."

Reminded again that his office is paid for with public funds, Campbell replied: "Sit on the floor if you want".

Campbell said he won't speak to the press "because you're hassling and harassing me."

On Thursday he threatened legal action against the news media for what he termed "political harassment."

Campbell said today: "Don't you feel, in the fourth estate, if you've been asked a question four or five times, at night, in the morning, 2 o'clock in the morning, 6 o'clock in the morning, that that's hassling?

"Now if the fourth estate in B.C., the B.C. press gallery, wishes to carry on doing that, that's fine, carry on. If it makes you happy, go ahead, that's you're decision."

Campbell's outburst came in the wake of statements by fired Socred researcher Ellen McKay.

McKay said Campbell circulated a memo last February promoting the use of the tapes that urged dirty tricks by party workers, and that he handed her a $1,000 bill during the election campaign to pay expenses with no receipts required.

"I won't say anything about what Ellen says. That's her statement," Campbell said before exploding into his tirade against the press.

Campbell told reporters he does not deny writing the memo but said he had not heard the tapes and if he had, they would not have been sent out.

"If I get harassed any more by the press," he said, "you may meet me in court."

The source of campaign funds and where they were spent is "none of your business," he added.

Mackay and another former Socred research worker, Jack Kelly, both of whom have been implicated in the so-called dirty tricks affair, turned over 40 to 50 documents to RCMP investigators Thursday.

Mackay and Kelly, who advocated sending to newspaper editors letters supporting Social Credit and signed with phoney names, met with police in the Vancouver office of their lawyer Robert Gardner.

They would not say what was in the documents until the RCMP investigators had finished with them.

Kelly, who quit his research job under pressure in October, said in a television interview he was told by Campbell receipts for a truck he had rented were not necessary.

Under provincial election laws, political campaign expenses must be reported within 60 days after polling day.

It was not immediately known whether the party reported the hotel and truck bills through receipts issued to other Social Credit members.

"I remember paying the first instalment of the hotel bill (at the Richmond Inn)," Mackay said. "He (Campbell) gave me a $1,000 bill."

Campbell did not ask her for receipts, she said.

Kelly said he had been given $200 by Campbell to rent a truck.

"The first time I went I had receipts. I took them up to his office. He said they weren't necessary," Kelly told the television interviewer.

In another development, Conservative leader Vic Stephens charged Thursday that the mass firing this week of the four Socred caucus research workers shows they were sacrificed to protect politicians.

Stephens said the press has failed to pursue the most important aspect of the Socred dirty tricks campaign.

He refers to the advice to party workers that they use pressure tactics to prevent small radio stations from running anti-Socred interviews.

It was suggested that letters of complaint be written to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission and that pressure be brought through advertisers.

Rodeo cheers behind him

An old hothead cools it

By PAT DUFOUR

At 46, Scotty MacDonald looks like many a man who's hit hard times but there is a difference — he can cling to memories of the years he bathed in the adulation of cheering crowds.

Remnants of his past remain in his saddle-molded stance, easy drawl, the weathered cowboy hat and boots.

"The Deuce brothers bet me $100 apiece that I wouldn't ride any horse and not touch leather. By luck I did do this and I became a bronc rider."

He never looked back, earning good purses around the rodeo circuit until he was almost 19.

During the first year, he says, he was earning $3,000 a week.

"I was 18 when I got broken up in Dallas, Texas. I got trampled by the horse I rode, a big roan called Sloufa. I rode him the 10 seconds. The harness went and I hung on to the saddle to wait for the pickup riders.

He'd like to teach youngster the tricks of his trade

"It was four or five seconds and I couldn't take the jarring any longer."

After he hit the ground, the horse kicked him twice until Lash Laroo, a whip expert, drove him off.

He spent 18 months in hospital with a broken back. Like most riders he belonged to the Cowboys Protection Association.

"I paid $150 a year. If you got killed they paid all funeral expenses. I got $90 a month and they paid for all medical expenses, special nurses and doctors."

The day he was released he went to a rodeo, knowing it would mean serious re-injury if he ever rode a bronc again. He resisted the temptation.

"I rode around the ring on a good riding horse. They (his fellow riders) had thought they were carrying a dead man out the day I broke my back. But this day they tossed off their hats and were whooping and hollering . . . it makes you feel pretty proud to be alive and associated with such a great thing."

From then on he tried his hand at a number of things. He drove a truck but it was too hard on his spine. He made furniture for a time, and then ice at a community rink.

"I'd be working ranches in the summertime. A cowboy is a hothead. He's got his own mind, he's got his own way. I'd be hankering to get back to the horses and cattle again.

"You'd be in a slump and you'd get so fed up in the spring, you'd take a look outside and see the leaves on the trees and the grass green, you'd have to go."

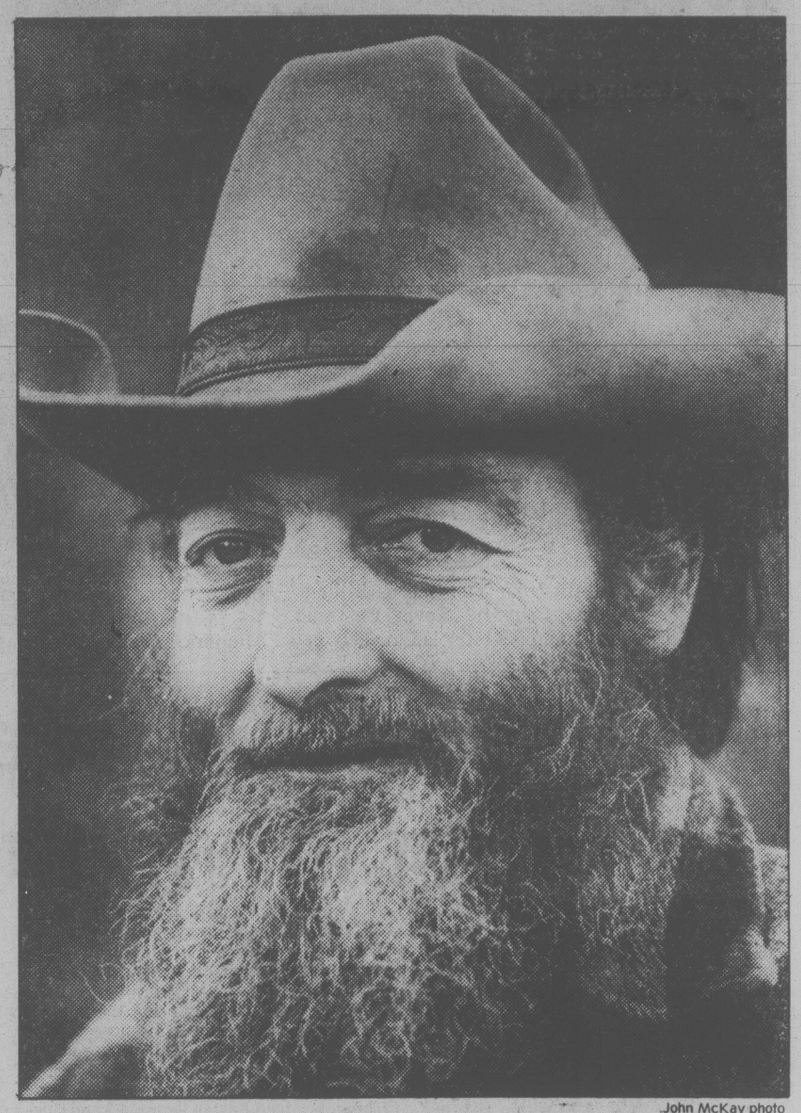

He made his way to Victoria, mostly because of the good weather. Unable to get a job, he still has dreams . . . of teaching some youngster the tricks of his trade.

"Maybe he can go further than me and this is country where you could start a rodeo school. It's just not ranch boys go into rodeo any more, it's city boys too."

He dreams of helping such a youngster make his way to the Oklahoma City King Cowboy Trophy "which is number one in the world."

With his dreams he also faces reality.

"I'm just a broken-down cowboy trying to find in his last days of good work a half decent job where they don't mind me wearing my riding hat and cowboy boots on the job."

'Good offer' by gov't on Emily Carr paintings

By JAKE BANKY

The provincial government has made an offer for part of the collection of 27 Emily Carr paintings being sold by Vancouver industrialist George Clark.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe said today the offer went in Thursday but he would give no details.

"I'd rather not say any more at this stage. I don't want to prejudice the negotiations," he said. "An offer has been made, we think it's a good offer and we're just waiting for a reply.

However, he said the offer is contingent on the participation of an anonymous Victoria woman who is offering to donate $700,000 toward the purchase if she gets to keep one of the paintings.

Wolfe would not say what portion of the collection the province would like to acquire, but he says it is a "substantial portion."

Asked when the Keenlyside Gallery, which is handling the sale, is expected to respond, he said:

"They want to consider it and I assume they want a couple of days, anyway."

Asked why the province wants only part of the collection the minister replied:

"Naturally in any selection of art work of this kind, some pieces are far more interesting than others."

He also said the province now has about 500 Emily Carr works, some in the Vancouver Art Gallery, some in the Victoria Art Gallery and others in the Provincial Archives.

In Vancouver, gallery owner Karen Keenlyside said the province wants to buy only 19 of the 27 paintings. The eight it is not interested in are from Emily Carr's early period when she painted Indian totems and villages, of which the province already has a fair number of in its collection housed in the archives.

"I presented the offer to the owner and he made a counter offer and they made another offer," said Keenlyside. "Now we're just sitting and waiting."

In the meantime, she said she is considering three other Canadian offers for the whole collection from private individuals. Bids from outside Canada had been made, she said, but they are not in the running.

'Angels' flew with him

A civilian American pilot discovered Thursday the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt has a friendly escort service.

Floyd Saltz was flying from Prince Rupert to Port Hardy in his single-engine Piper Supercub when he decided to switch fuel tanks. During the transfer 40 gallons were lost.

"He was pretty twitchy," a centre spokesman said today.

He said Saltz decided to head back to Prince Rupert — an hour's run — after estimating he had enough fuel for 58 minutes.

A Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox's 442 Squadron and a Canadian Coast Guard helicopter from Prince Rupert were despatched. The helicopter escorted Saltz to Prince Rupert.

The spokesman said Saltz landed just as the engine cut out.

"He was one happy boy," the spokesman said.

Supervisor apologizes but workers still off job

About 70 Langford and Colwood sign shop and yard employees of the provincial highways ministry remained off the job today in a wildcat walkout sparked by a cancelled doctor's appointment.

The walkout began at noon Thursday and the employees voted this morning to stay off the job despite an apology from their supervisor.

The workers are upset with supervisor Arnie Davis because he phoned the doctor of employee John Whittaker regarding Whittaker's 1:30 p.m. appointment for last Wednesday.

As a result of that phone call — a highways ministry spokesman today blamed it on a nurse's error — Whittaker's appointment was cancelled.

Whittaker had been injured earlier and was visiting the doctor as part of a follow-up program on his Workers Compensation Board claim.

The ministry spokesman said Davies was calling only to see if it was possible to have the appointment scheduled for some time after 3 p.m., Whittaker's quitting time.

He said there have been a number of such appointments made by the employees during their working hours and it makes it difficult to keep up the assembly-line style work at the sign shop.

Somehow Davies' inquiry was interpreted by the doctor's nurse as a request for cancellation, he said.

However, Don Burns, spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union, said today the workers' collective agreement allows the employees to take up to two hours in a shift for a doctor's appointment.

"The phone call shouldn't have been made," Burns said.

He said the employees voted this morning to stay off the job despite Davies' apology because the latest incident is only a symptom of a deeper labor relations problem at the Jacklin Road highways ministry site.

Davies was involved in a dispute several months ago which resulted in a one-day walkout.

TOWN TALK

Labor takes care of its own, right? Well . . .

It was only this week that the Victoria Labor Council got around to taking care of secretary Larry Ryan's salary increase for 1979.

The council's financial situation isn't that healthy apparently but the hope is that things will pick up early next year.

Ryan was given an eight-per-cent increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, on an annual salary of $15,700.

Wooden headboards with evil images in them apparently aren't all that rare.

Mrs. Leo Guigueno called Town Talk to say she too had a headboard like the one recently sold by Mrs. Norma Harris, who got rid of it because the image looked too much like the devil.

Mrs. Guigueno says her husband eventually used their headboard to make doors for a stereo unit.

But it was still pretty scary looking, she says.

Rounding up 18 bibles for the swearing in of Capital Regional District board members this week posed a challenge for the staff.

It also turned up some interesting inscriptions.

Board chairman Jim Campbell, for example, swore his oath on a bible that had the inscription: "To Violet, from Dad and Mom."

Still at the regional level, Ald. Bob Wright lived up to his name when board members voted on the first ballot to elect a chairman.

He predicted the three candidates, Campbell, Shirley Dowell and Howard Sturrock would each get six votes.

Wright was right on.

Campbell won by two votes on the second ballot.

Salt Spring Island may pride itself on its homespun, back-to-nature qualities but there are still a few pockets where new social standards haven't broken through.

Last month the Driftwood reported that almost a third of the eating establishments on the island have a policy against mothers nursing their babies on the premises.

"How dare any establishment or individual dictate how a baby be nourished!" says Gill May of Ganges. "Would proprietors and patrons prefer a screaming infant to a satisfied suckling one?"

On the other hand, Victoria is a model of progressiveness. May and a friend recently ate at the Princess Mary restaurant.

"My friend breast-fed her baby for one hour and not once did she receive an admonition or request to leave the restaurant."

If you're a new boat skipper and don't yet know your nautical ropes, perhaps what you need is an "experienced boat."

We noticed such craft are being offered in the Times classified section by Thunderbird Yacht Sales out in Sidney. Obviously they're better than mere "used boats."

Perhaps the ferry skippers wouldn't have any gripes if all those fishermen in Active Pass were operating intelligent boats.

Victoria artist and sculptor Carmen Rudd wants to see a display of dancing waters along the Belleville Street side of the Inner Harbor and sent Town Talk a snapshot with an inked-in fountain jetting water up to 40 feet in the air in front of the Welcome to Victoria floral sign.

Rudd would light the fountain at night to add movement, light and sound to a sombre atmosphere.

He went to the provincial government with the idea and former tourism minister Grace McCarthy was enthusiastic.

It got as far as the talking stage with government architects and engineers who calculated a rough figure of $100,000 for the project.

November dip precedes Christmas rebound

By AL FORREST

The Victoria economy took a sharp dip during the first two weeks of November, shattering merchants' hopes they could go directly from the tourist season to Christmas without a letdown.

Retail sales were lower than expected during the first half of the month and unemployment was on the increase, according to a survey by the Canada Employment Centre.

But things have rebounded and the Christmas outlook is good.

"Victoria needs something special in the first two weeks of November to carry us through," local CEC manager Wally Pickering said today.

"This is something the Victoria Chamber of Commerce task force on tourism might want to look at."

Task force chairman John Ansell said Pickering's suggestion would be considered.

Pickering said only 565 new jobs became available through the CEC office during November, down 19 per cent from 695 the previous November.

But to keep it in perspective, Pickering said, October had been very strong and when the jobs created in the two months are added together the 1979 totals are about the same as last year.

What happened, he said, is the autumn downturn has been shortened from more than a month to just over two weeks but it is still quite pronounced.

The number of job-seekers in November totalled 8,855, up 12 per cent from 7,924 in October, but less than the 8,988 in November, 1978.

The 8,855 job-hunters included about 2,000 newcomers to the list. Of this 2,000 total, 743 were from out of town.

"Some construction workers who went to Alberta during good weather are returning to the city now, adding to our unemployment," Pickering said.

The new job-hunters included 172 people from Alberta, 344 from B.C. regions outside the Victoria area, 116 from Ontario, 25 from Quebec, 24 from Saskatchewan, 23 from Manitoba, 14 from Nova Scotia, 10 from the Northwest Territories, seven from the Yukon, five from New Brunswick and three from Prince Edward Island.

Since mid-November, Pickering said, the economy has recovered strongly. Retail sales have been brisk from mid-November to today and the outlook is for increased Christmas spending.

A survey by CEC information officer Dan Bowes showed Victoria restaurants and hotels had a 10 per cent increase in revenues during November compared with the same month one year ago.

Lumber production continues to be strong butthere is weakness in plywood markets. The Christmas closure will be short in sawmills but longer than usual in plywood plants.

Employment at Burrard Yarrows Corporation shipyard totalled 470 in November, down from 550 in October. The November level will be sustained into the new year when it is expected to increase.

There were 109 agriculture jobs filled through the CEC's farm labor pool, up 20 per cent from last November.

Construction unemployment remains at about 25 per cent.

Real estate sales totalled $13.9 million during November, despite high interest rates. This is up from $10 million last November.

There were 223 units sold up from 172. Listings were reduced to 409, compared to 545 last November.

Execution try: defence; stick to issue: Crown

The jury in the B.C. Supreme Court trial of Thomas Young Lackey was urged Thursday to throw out the charges because of false testimony — and to ignore this allegation as irrelevant and to stick to the issue.

The contrasting appeals were given by defence counsel David Gibbons of Vancouver and Crown counsel Robert Mulligan in their closing arguments in the ninth day of the trial.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan was to address the jury today, after which it will start its deliberation on the nine charges in the indictment.

Lackey, 36, is accused of attempted murder of Matsqui Penitentiary guard Alexander Smith, 55, by stabbing him, intentionally wounding Smith by stabbing him, escape while being escorted to a hospital in Matsqui municipality and theft of a citizen's car, all on Nov. 3, 1978.

He is also accused, in Saanich on Nov. 8, 1978, of attempting to murder Sgt. William Hillcoat of Saanich police by shooting him with a shotgun, intentionally wounding Hillcoat by discharging a shotgun, possession of a shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace, theft of a private citizen's car while armed with a shotgun (robbery), and using a shotgun during flight after committing an indictable offence.

Gibbons urged the jury not to be confused with technicalities because the law is not a fool and does not convict on technicalities.

He said police officers lied to the court "and I think you know that" and courts have said that if the Crown case is so tainted with lies, especially from the police, the case can be thrown out and the accused found not guilty.

The police would have the jury believe that Lackey was shot accidentally, he said.

He said Lackey couldn't have been shot accidentally because Constable Robert Love, if his evidence was accepted, was holding Lackey's hair from behind with his left hand and his gun was in his right hand.

Lackey was shot through the left temple at a range of less than three inches according to a neurosurgeon called by the defence, said Gibbons.

"It's absolutely disgraceful, I was overwhelmed at the disgrace. This was an attempted execution. It is horrific to think it could have been you or I," he said.

Gibbons said Hillcoat testified he didn't know who shot the bullet and Love testified he would not agree it was his gun which caused the wound to Lackey's head.

"Of course it wasn't," said Gibbons. "It was Hillcoat who came round and shot Lackey in the head. I don't think there is any doubt about that. If they lied like that, their whole case is tainted."

Gibbons also charged that Love "fiddled with his bullets" because the single spent bullet was not the same as the others in his revolver.

Gibbons said police testified Hillcoat shot four times and Love once but he counted six shots — in Lackey's left leg, right leg, wallet, heel, head and in the car door.

When Lackey was shot in the left side of his head, losing his eye, "the state has taken its pound of flesh."

Mulligan said the trial was a solemn inquiry into whether Lackey committed any of the nine offences he is charged with and Gibbons didn't deal with the issue facing the jury.

The jury does not have to decide whether a police officer deliberately shot Lackey, he said. No one was charged with shooting Lackey and if that happened, it will be dealt with another day by another jury.

Prison conditions and solitary confinement were not an issue the jury has to solve.

What the jury has to decide, he said, is whether or not Lackey committed any of the offences charged in the indictment.

Several other people had been put on trial to some extent, such as the police accused of purposefully shooting Lackey, stealing his money and falsifying evidence, prison officials accused of atrocities, a lawyer in Prince George called incompetent.

Mulligan said they had been criticized and villified and not all were present to defend themselves.

But all of that, he said, is not what the jury has to decide.

Even if everything the police said was disregarded, he said there is still a case established against Lackey.

Mulligan said if a policeman wanted to execute Lackey, he would not shoot in the side of the head at an upwards angle missing the brain.

There was absolutely no doubt who fired the first shot which was admitted by Lackey. The first shot which struck Hillcoat amounted to the offence of attempted murder or wounding with intent. The offence was complete when he fired the first shot, said Mulligan.

What happened after that didn't change the fact that Lackey fired the first shot.

"The facts are clear, he is guilty," said Mulligan.

One of the last defence witnesses, Prof. Michael Jackson of UBC law school, was qualified as an expert in penal institutions and the nature and effect of solitary confinement and discipline on people.

He said solitary confinement leaves an indelible mark on people including a burning hatred of authority.

It amounted to an assault on the human spirit and quoted Charles Dickens writing in 1844 of the agony and dreadful punishment of solitary confinement which, said Dickens, no man has the right to inflict on others and worse than torture of the body.

Jackson said that, in animals, solitary confinement without escape induces violence and insanity.

The most horrifying effect, he said, is that when one inmate goes over the edge and attempts or commits suicide, other prisoners in the same block experience the man's death because they all know how close they are to killing themselves.

In cross-examination, Jackson agreed it is becoming more and more true that a very small number of people end up in places like B.C. Penitentiary and that there are medium and minimum-security penitentiaries with recreational and education programs.

He also agreed that few prisoners spend time in solitary confinement. When asked if just the most difficult ones serve in solitary, he replied "that is the theory. My experience belies that."

He did agree there are occasions when it is necessary to "dissociate" a prisoner from others, including inmates inciting a riot, planning an escape or attacking another inmate.

Jackson said there is a "very different day-to-day regime" in Matsqui Penitentiary compared with B.C. Penitentiary.

(Lackey was transferred to Matsqui from the Pen in 1977. He testified Matsqui is pretty good "for an institution" but he left because he thought "I was going crazy in there, I couldn't take the pressure in there.")

Jackson said he can well imagine that some victims of crime never get over the trauma and said "certainly" when asked if policemen have a high tension, difficult job.

Fire victim identified

A man who died in a fire Monday has been identified as Wilfred Gerald Sutherland, 54, of 521 Simcoe.

His name had been withheld pending notification of next-of-kin but efforts by police to locate any relatives failed.

A coroner's inquiry will be held.

Hearing set for American

An immigration hearing will be held Monday for a man who turned himself in to Victoria police in connection with a shooting in Lacey, Wash.

The man was identified as Gary Parker, 28, of Olympia, Wash., who is alleged to have entered Canada under false pretences.

Det. Barney McClanahan of the Lacey police department said a warrant charging first-degree assault will be served on Parker.

Police said a man with a 12-gauge shotgun entered McNamara's orthopedic clinic and shot him in the face. He is in serious condition.

"We don't really have a motive," McClanahan said.

UVic student awarded clerkship

He is one of only 10 Canadians to win the honor.

Farley, active as a student member of the UVic senate, will graduate from law school in May.

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — General Dynamics, worried about criticism of its F-16 fighter aircraft engine, is promising free replacements for some F-16s the Canadian Forces might lose because of engine failure.

This last-minute offer, hedged with several conditions, is part of final manoeuvring by General Dynamics and McDonnell Douglas, both American companies, for Canada's $2.3-billion fighter plane contract. Defence Minister Allan McKinnon still is talking about a final cabinet decision on the winning aircraft by the end of the month.

The General Dynamics proposal to replace some F-16s free of charge is unusual — company officials say it is unique in fighter plane history. But the promise, made jointly with the F-16 engine builder, United Technologies, contains several conditions and might mean replacement of few, if any, aircraft.

General Dynamics would not replace free a lost aircraft unless the F-16 crash rate was higher than the government's projected level for the competing McDonnell Douglas F-18A, sources say. The aircraft engine would also have to be maintained at the engine-builder's standards and the crash would have to be because of engine failure.

The offer is good for 10 years after delivery of the first F-16 to the Canadian Forces.

McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics have also submitted some additional offers of benefits for Canadian industry in final talks with federal officials this week.

The government has demanded substantial business for Canadian industry in exchange for the contract to build 130 to 150 planes.

McDonnell Douglas, whose industrial benefits package has been under question in recent weeks, pledged about $500 million in new business this week to make up for $507 million which the government refused to allow in the competition.

A McDonnell Douglas official said Thursday the company increased its offer in the fields of research and development and high technology during a Monday meeting with Industry Minister Robert de Cotret, McKinnon and other federal officials.

The company now is offering a total of more than $3 billion in business to Canadian industry, he said.

General Dynamics officials said recently their company and United Technologies have promised an additional $490 million in business, raising their industrial benefits program to $2.9 billion.

The $490 million includes a $400-million investment for a new United Technologies engine parts plant operated by its Canadian subsidiary, Pratt and Whitney of Canada. General Dynamics would invest another $90 million in a machining centre at Mirabel, Que., near Montreal.

The two companies are being asked to balance their offers so all regions in Canada get some benefit. Bernard Landry, Quebec's economic development minister, said in Quebec Thursday he is asking Ottawa to give his province 50 per cent of the benefits.

One federal source said the offer is a "dramatic thing and an attention-getter."

United Technologies was so concerned about recent news stories critical of the F-16's engine that it advertised a top U.S. Air Force general's favorable comments in major newspapers across Canada and the U.S. this week.

Robert Hermann, a top defence official in Washington, also reaffirmed the U.S. Air Force's "strong support" of the engine. His statement was apparently prompted by protests from United Technologies about the way news reports interpreted testimony by U.S. Air Force Gen. Alton Slay to the Senate armed services committee last week.

Slay told the committee there had been 755 cases of stalling in the twin-engined F-15 but none so far in the single-engined F-16. The F-16 engine is a newer, modified version of the F-15 engine.

General Dynamics and United Technologies said in a letter to the government this week they understand the federal fighter project team estimates the loss rate of F-16 fighters will be substantially higher than for F-18As.

A third option offered Quebec

By DANIEL DROLET

MONTREAL (CP) — Saying it is his duty as a former cabinet minister to prevent Quebec society from polarizing into two camps around the question of sovereignty-association, Rodrigue Tremblay has launched a new book describing his constitutional "third option."

Tremblay, who resigned from the Parti Quebecois in a huff last September after Premier Rene Levesque dumped him as minister of industry and commerce, has since been trying to promote a Swiss-style confederation for Canada.

He says this "third option" — which lies somewhere in the grey area between the PQ's plans for sovereignty-association and the Quebec Liberal party's idea of renewed federalism — should be included on the ballot in next spring's referendum.

In an attempt to muster public support for his third option, he has run newspaper ads and called for donations.

The book is his latest attempt to marshal public opinion for his cause, and it includes an application for membership in his "National Committee of Quebecers for a True Confederation," along with a call for money.

Speaking to reporters, the former minister said his third option is a "common ground, middle-of-the-road solution" to Canada's constitutional problems.

Multiculturalism flip-flop laid to Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative government has backed off an election-campaign promise to shift control over most spending on multiculturalism to the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism.

Senator Jacques Flynn, government leader in the Senate, said Multiculturalism Minister Steve Paproski told him the government has reviewed the campaign statement and still will consult the council but won't give it any financial responsibility.

Flynn was responding Wednesday to Liberal Senator Peter Bosa (Ontario) who asked last week when the change, promised in a policy statement issued by Tory party headquarters last May 3, would come into effect.

"It's another flip-flop," Senator Rosa, a former council chairman, said Wednesday.

HOMES TODAY

This house cost $7,500 in 1968. Now it's worth more than five times that amount

The home pictured above belonged to a sergeant in the first world war by the name of Armstrong. According to the present owner, Andrew Grundsteins, who has been living here on Haultain Street with his wife Emily for eleven years, Armstrong began to build the house before he went overseas. It had one room and a wood and coal stove, a toilet in the back yard.

Another room, a kitchen, a studio, a second storey, and a bathroom have been added over the years. Grundsteins has been working hard on it ever since he purchased it, and now it's as neat and immaculate as a doll's house. And worth somewhere in the forty thousand dollar range.

Slate floor that's lost its shine, shake roofs, and damp concrete

By GENE GARY

Q. We have a slate entry hall which has worn over the years and is in need of refinishing to renew its blackness and shine.

A few times we put something like a shellac to renew the shine, but now the white lines between the pieces of slate are so prominent we hate the looks of it.

We have almost despaired of finding what to do with it. Can you help?

A. Slate is practically immune to all common chemicals and any of the usual cleaners may be used. Ammonia in water may be used when needed, but strong acids and strong alkalies may attack the grout.

Unlike most other floors, excess water will not harm slate. Sand-rubbed slate, which is relatively smooth, may be scoured when necessary with steel wool or an abrasive pad. If this does not remove the previous accumulation of shellac and other residue, you will need to use a terrazzo-type stripper or paint and varnish remover.

When the slate is thoroughly clean, apply a coat of terrazzo-type floor sealer. This should improve the appearance and make maintenance easier. The sealer will also protect the grout.

The floor may then be waxed with either emulsion type or solvent type wax. This gives a soft natural effect.

Q. Our 30-year-old house has a shake roof which is beginning to show its age. Shakes are splitting and if the wind blows very hard, I find pieces strewn over the yard. A red asphalt type roof shows underneath in places.

When we decide to put on a new roof, we would like to make it another shake roof, but I am uncertain just how I should go about it.

Should I remove the old shakes completely or should I put new shakes over the old ones. If the latter is the recommended method, how is it done? — Harry K.B., El Cajon, Calif.

A. Because your shake roof is in bad repair and has been installed over a previous roof, I would advise removing the shakes. Shakes over shakes might add too much weight to your roof.

If the roof under the present shakes is firm, the new shakes could be installed over it.

If you have never had experience with this type of work, I would recommend getting the advice and help of an expert roofer.

Q. Late last fall at my lake cottage, using a ready-mixed concrete, I laid a 12x19-foot concrete slab on which now stands a small guest house.

The slab is four inches thick and six inches around the perimeter. Coarse gravel and sand were used as a base for the concrete. I did not use any vapor-proof or plastic sheets prior to pouring the concrete.

My problem is that the slab does not seem to dry and is constantly damp. Using a dehumidifier and fans has had no effect.

Am I destined to always have a wet floor or can I now do something to dry it out permanently? — R.L.R., Minneapolis, Minn.

A. Concrete is porous and moisture can come up through the floor, if, as in your case, no moisture barrier was installed. But there are some remedial measures you can try.

First check the drainage to make certain the ground next to the slab slopes away from the foundation, allowing water to drain off.

Then apply a sealer on the concrete surface, a sealer often used in basements to keep moisture out. There are several kinds of sealer on the market — ask at local lumber dealers and home repair centres.

If you cover the floor with tile, use only the type for on-grade floors, such as asphalt tile, vinyl asbestos or vinyl with moisture-proof backing. Indoor-outdoor carpeting also makes a very good covering for on- or below-grade floors.

Decorating tips

Q. We are redecorating our master bedroom and have a problem with the windows. The only windows in the room are directly over the bed and they look out on a city view that is not particularly pleasant.

I have had draperies across the window but they seem slightly heavy and I want to replace them.

The windows are never opened because we have air conditioning. However, I do wish we could take advantage of some of the daylight without having to be exposed to the view. — L.V.

A. Your problem is not uncommon. Many builders put in those small high windows in bedrooms and they are a challenge to decorate.

Instead of draperies, you might like louvred shutters or if you are inclined toward modern or Oriental, some pierced wood or shoji-type screens. If you need total privacy, the shutters would be particularly good but the pierced wood would work if you put a light plastic sheet behind the wood.

Q. My kitchen ceiling and cabinets are painted peach and the tile is cream colored. Above the tile on the walls is wallpaper with a cream background and flowers in peach, green, watermelon and blue.

I would like to change the walls of the living room, dining area and hall which are now antique white. Now if I paint the living room in the same peach color will it be to loud? Should the doors and wood work be done in antique white?

I like to leave the door to the kitchen opened. Can you suggest a good color scheme that will go with the kitchen? — M.J.B.

A. If a light peach would blend well with your living room and dining room furnishings, it could be a very good choice. I would suggest that you tone down the peach from your kitchen quite a bit with white so you have very light peach in the living room. Too bright a color could be harsh and unpleasant.

However, one of the most lovely rooms I've ever been in had a very light apricot wall color and the wood tones of the furniture and the colors in the fabrics look fabulous against the warm, cheery color of the walls.

Do the walls first and see if you like the existing white woodwork. If you do not, paint it the same light peach.

Q. What colors would you use for walls, upholstery, draperies and accessories if you had burgundy-colored carpeting? One of our bedrooms has burgundy carpeting that is perfectly good and so I want to decorate around it. — P.Y.

A. Why don't you use a warm light gray color with a pink cast to it for the walls. I'd try to find a burgundy, gray, blue white and yellow chintz print and use that for a quilted bedspread you might make or have made.

• Use yellow draperies at the windows and white accessories. This could be a beautiful room.

LATTICE LOOK WINDOWS: Pierced wood covers the panel of high wide windows over the bed, thus eliminating the need for draperies or some other attention-getting treatment which might conflict with the patterns chosen for spread and wallpapers in this bedroom.

APARTMENT LIVING

Apartment furniture that can 'graduate' later on

Q. My husband and I married recently and are living in a condominium. We hope eventually to buy a larger home and so the furniture we buy now we'd plan to use in another house.

We like contemporary furniture and I had considered buying a china closet I have been admiring for some time. However, it is such a large piece, I'm wondering if I'd be making a mistake. My fear is that I might not have a good place in another home for it.

Also we want to buy some upholstered furniture. What should we look for that will be flexible for our home now and later? Also what do we need to look for in deciding whether a piece of wood furniture is worth the price? — F.S.

A. When you find a piece of furniture you fall in love with, it takes great will power to keep from buying it. But, my inclination would be to forego the large piece and instead opt for some component pieces that would serve as a china closet when put together and would work equally well as end tables, sofa tables and etageres in another setting years from now.

Quality pieces such as these would be an excellent start for another home and could be very useful to you now.

The same goes for upholstered pieces. Most frequently a pair of short sofas will be much more flexible and adaptable than one long, heavy sofa.

A lounge chair can usually be fitted into anyroom. For now if you need additional seating you might invest in a pair of wicker or basket chairs and plan to use them on a patio or in a recreation room later.

In appraising upholstered furniture, examine the fabric to see that it is a tough, well-woven material and that patterns are matched where necessary. Is the welting of the cushions well sewn?

Remove cushions and check webbing if possible, or turn the chair over. Hand-tied springs are the longest lasting and usually most comfortable.

Does the fabric have a protective treatment?

For wood furniture, let your eye advise you. Does the piece have a good finish — a glow and a satiny smoothness you can feel with your hand?

Rock the table back and forth to be certain it's well balanced and doesn't creak. Hardware should be solidly and firmly attached and easy to grip. Check moving parts — drawers should slide smoothly, doors should swing easily. If the table has leaves, ask to see them in the table to make sure the finish matches the extended table.

Q. I have a combination dining-kitchen area separated by a seven-foot counter. My problem is the inside wall which is 21 feet and broken only by a hutch in the dining room area.

The inside wall has baseboard heating which prevents me from placing any type of cabinet or furniture against the wall but the wall is just too large to leave empty. I tried a wall of potted plants under a grow light and they looked beautiful for a while but the heat in the winter eventually destroyed them. — W.C.B.

A. Plants are near-impossible when artificial heating is so close. Rather, why don't you treat your wall as a large gallery of interesting treasures, collectibles, prints, photographs, and accessories?

This can be fun and meaningful to you if you select things you really like to look at. Perhaps you have some favorite prints you could mat in the colors of your kitchen, and some color photographs of an especially great trip you took, maybe some of Grandpa's old carpentry tools, or Mom's old cooking utensils. If you have youngsters use some of their artwork.

Maybe your friend is into macrame. Collect all the things you think might work. Arrange them A piece of paper on the floor, rearranging them until you find a plan that pleases you. Draw around them, and mark where the hanger should go, tape the paper pattern to the wall, and fasten the hangers to the wall through it. Then tear the paper away. Your wall willbecome a conversation piece and a joy to you and your friends as you add to it over time.

In addition, you say you can't use low furniture. However, you might be able to use a leggy table — that would give you space as a serving board. Or perhaps a deacon's bench with braided cusion might be pleasant to the eye and functional, too.

Send for plans to build a roomy captain's desk

By Steve Ellingson

Now you can add a nautical touch to your home decor when you build this striking replica of a captain's desk. The "bulge" sides were originally designed to allow a maximum writing space while requiring a minimum of floor space.

The slanted writing top lifts up to reveal a spacious storage and work area. Just close the top when guests come and presto! A clean desk.

The desk is built from full-size traceable patterns. Step-by-step instructions, photographs, finishing directions, and complete materials lists take all the guess work out of creating this project.

To order the Captain's Desk, pattern No. 612, send $3.50 (please add .50 cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to:

Here's a house built by a man who owned only a hammer when he began

By ANNE SWANNELL

In the woods, six miles from the Trans Canada Highway, on Millstream Lake Road, a man who once strained his knowledge of carpentry by building a plywood doghouse, has designed and constructed an 1,800-square-foot home for himself, his wife and their two children.

Jonathan and Haleen Franklin's contemporary log home has three bedrooms, a bathroom, living room, dining room, kitchen with eating area, a large loft play-and-hobby space, and a second bathroom which is still unfinished.

The ceiling rises to a height of 23 feet at the front door and reaches 16 feet in other rooms. Most of the trees were cut locally and Jonathan learned how to build with logs from a friend, Patrick Pothier, who started the construction for him, using scribers to fit the logs perfectly against one another.

Completing the log work was a two-year task, moving each one into place with the help of an electric winch on his Land-Rover. Apart from the beginning phase all the log work was done single-handed, with some logs 45 feet long, up to 20 inches in diameter and weighing close to one-and-a-half tons each.

The logs in the second section of the house were erected with use of a high line and chain hoist. Farmer Construction then came in to put on the 10x14-inch roof beams with a crane and do the finishing carpentry work inside.

"When building a log house, one of the great imponderables is shrinkage" says Jonathan, who is news editor at the Victoria Times. "Depending on how green the logs are, you have to allow for them to shrink about half an inch per foot of wall. On a 16-foot wall, this will mean a drop of as much as eight inches as time goes on."

Space must be left above doorways and windows to absorb the shrinkage.

All the rooms have small square skylights, each one with three layers of glass to minimize the heat loss.

Many of the light fixtures are fluorescent tubes behind rough cedar valance boards, which provide a soft, indirect lighting that blends naturally into the decor. Shelving and built-in drawers in closets are rough cedar too.

Cooking is done on a huge wood stove from Sackville, New Brunswick, like those used years ago in B.C's logging camps. The Franklins have a slate floor in front of theirs, and a circular wrought iron utensil holder suspended above it, which came from New York. Somehow, it seems to combine the best of both worlds — the elemental way of life before radar ovens were thought of and modern design.

The way the Franklins get from the living room to the loft area is intriguing and ingenious. Jonathan designed a special set of steps that are made of iron tubing, shaped like elongated letter o's turned sideways. Eight of them, graduating in size and attached by their backs to a steel beam bolted to the wall, serve as both hand-holds and steps. Jonathan took his design to United Engineering, who did the metal work.

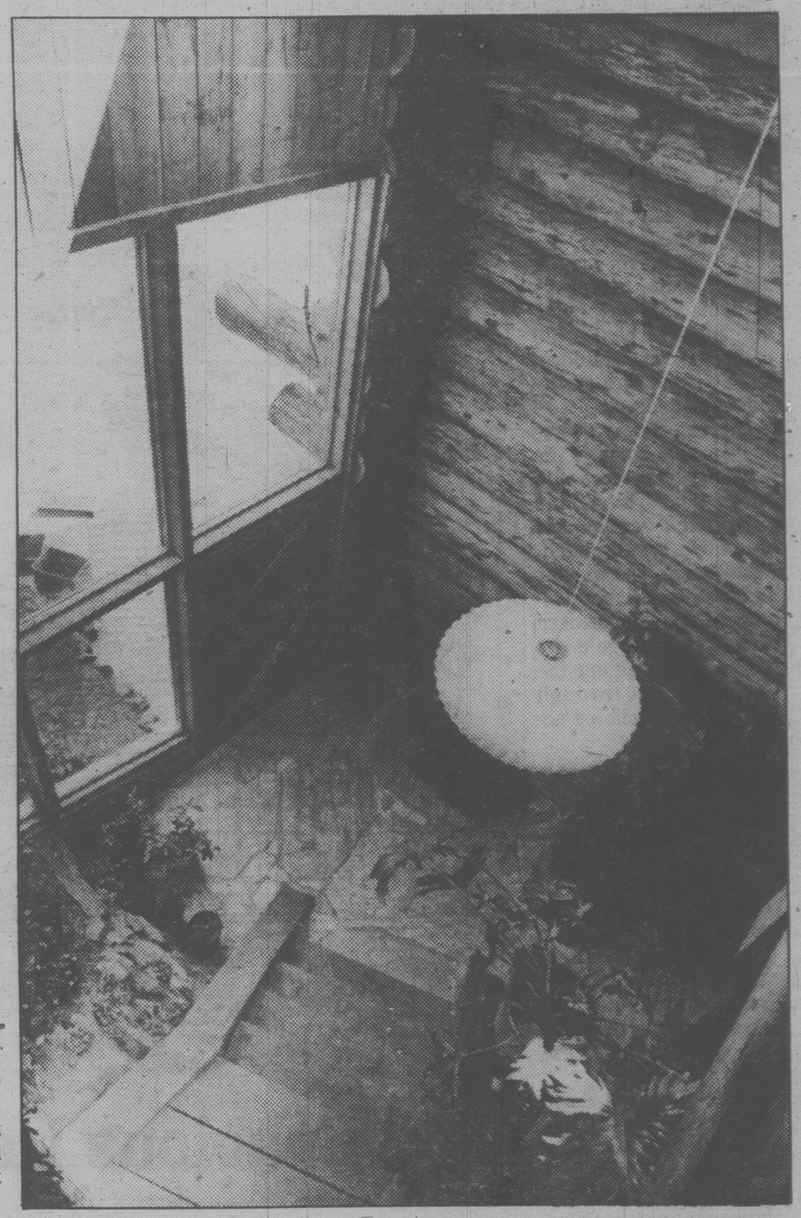

It takes a minimum of space, and is so attractive as to look like a metal sculpture. "I put the smallest step on the bottom because when you're coming down from the loft, it's easier to find the widest rung at the top," Jonathan explains. He's decided, too, to tilt the unit out from the wall about a foot, so that it will be easier to use.

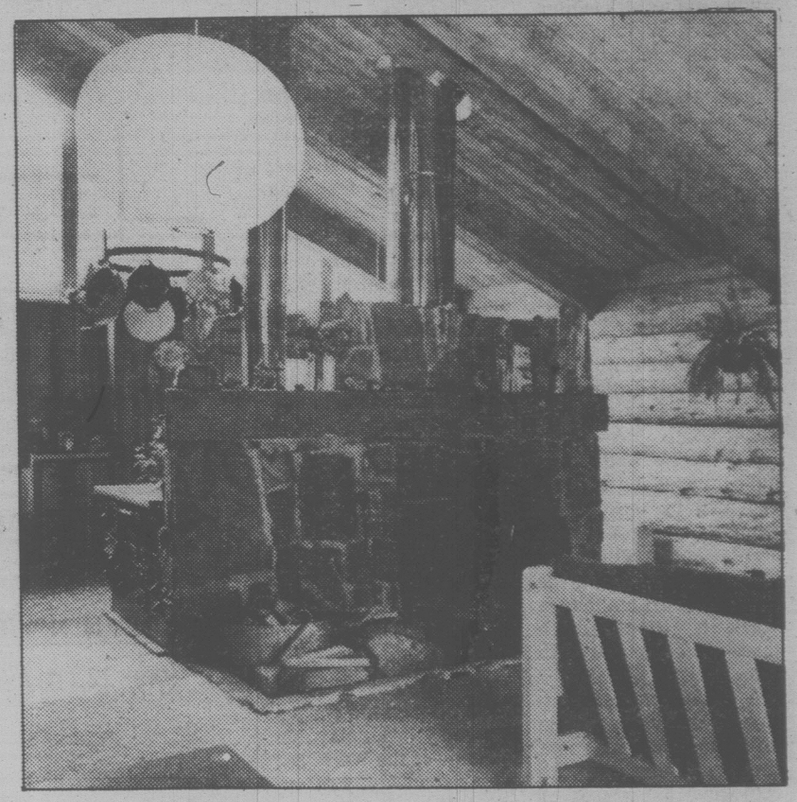

The Northern fireplace in the living room is similar to a Heatilator, but this one takes in cold air from outside the house. It is heated by the fire, blown out of a vent in the stone face above the fireplace. It was invented by a man who lives in Prince George. The stone is called Brown Mountain, comes from the B.C. interior but was purchased locally.

A large deck on the back of the house looks out over a lawn and the forest to Lone Tree Hill, the third highest peak in the Highlands.

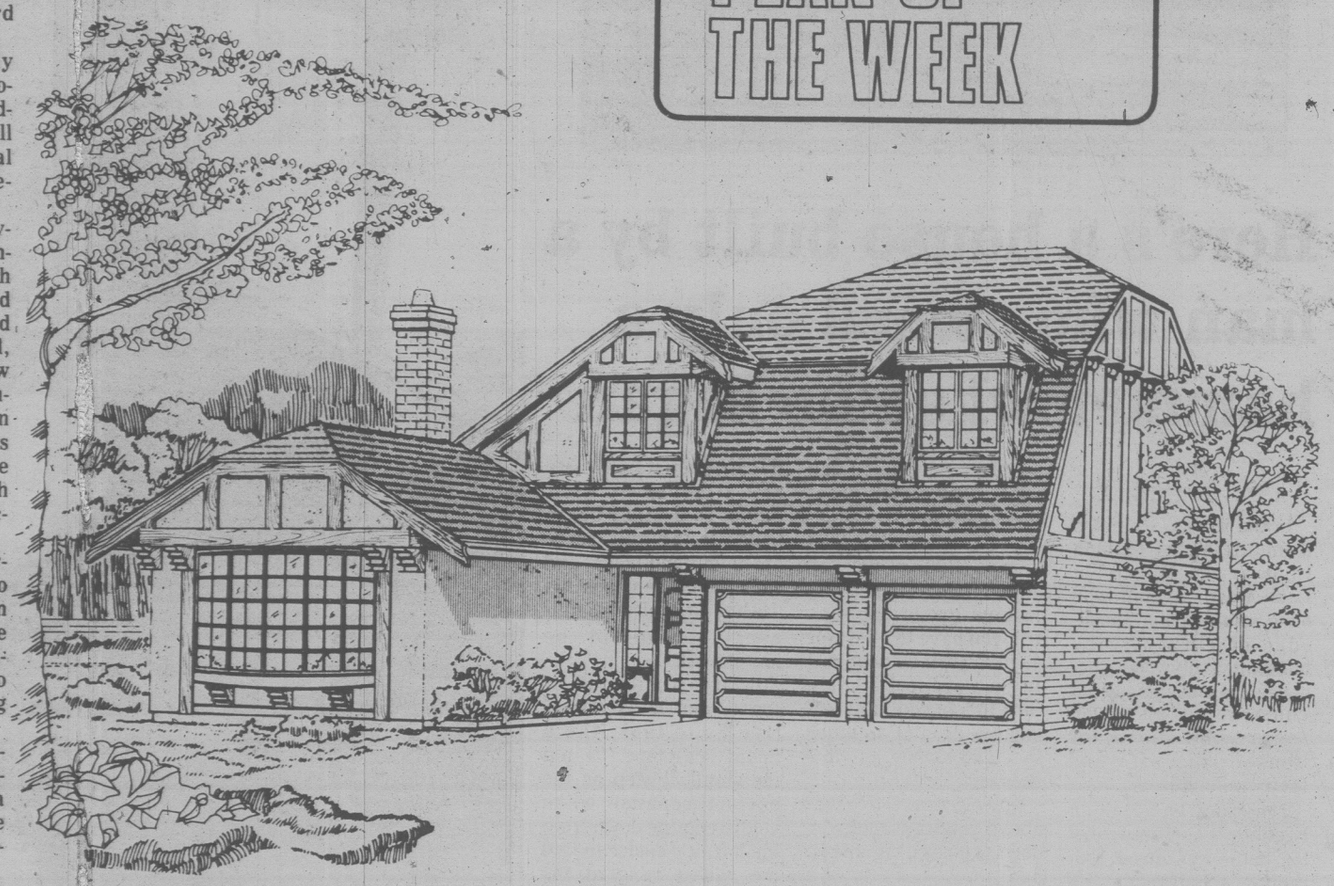

One of the supporting log beams has been left projecting over the deck, which serves to support a swing for the children.

"When you build a house out in the woods like this" Jonathan says, "there are so many things to do before you even start on the house. You have to drill for a well (here, 200 feet down), dig a septic field and put in power poles from the road before any building can begin." Obviously an immense task, even for an experienced builder, but when accomplished by a man who owned no tool more sophisticated than a hammer when he started out, it can only be called triumphant!

PLAN OF THE WEEK

Plan Number: 79-2022

Here's an exciting home design with a visually appealing Elizabethan-style exterior which contains abundant space for the medium-size family, and many conveniences which afford "easy livin'."

The design is ideally suited to the narrow-to-medium frontage building lot, and has a full basement for additional storage and future development space.

The exterior is everyone's dream home — finished in white stucco with barge board trim, and with brick veneer and chimney, small-paned, front-facing bow window and upstairs dormer windows. Even the modern note of the garage doors has been blended into the period design through their heavily reliefed accents.

The living room features a charming front-facing bow window and a corner masonry fireplace for convivial "at-homes."

A well-planned U-shape kitchen separates the formal dining room and the more casual dinette. It has an excellent work triangle, abundant counter-top work surfaces and generous cupboard storage.

The dinette has sliding glass doors to a large rear patio, for easy access to outdoor dining in fine weather. A large family room and lounge area is sunken two risers from the dinette, and also connects to the large laundry, utility and mud room area.

A two-piece vanity bath is centrally positioned to all the downstairs areas of the home.

All three bedrooms have interesting alcoves provided by the dormer windows, generous closet storage and excellent natural lighting. The large master bedroom has a walk-in closet and a three-piece ensuite with tub.

A double enclosed garage with access to the utility room or mud room facility, completes the convenience features of this highly-appealing and practical home design.

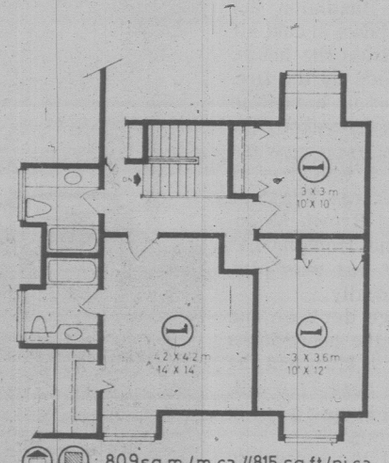

Plans for design No. 79-2022 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $14.00 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, ineluding the first set, is economically priced at $120.00 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $150.00.

Wh ever method you choos , please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs magazine, Series 42, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus 75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to Home of the Week, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

COLLECTIBLES

By JOHN HEARN

Wedgwood marketing decisions clarified; book collecting too!

Mr. Keith Mowling, who is President of Wedgwood of Canada, replies to my comments of a few weeks ago about the availability of their line in this country.

"It is indeed a fact," he says, "that the Canadian company chooses only those products from the total Wedgwood production which we feel would best suit the Canadian market taste. There are many products which are commissioned and made exclusively for Wedgwood Canada which in some instances are not avilable in other markets. In the ordering of special commemoratives, Wedgwood produces many items for general distribution worldwide, most of which are distributed in Canada. In the case of editions of less than 250, our allotment may be as few as 10, resulting in a demand far exceeding the supply."

This certainly sets the record straight. I had stated that it was the parent body in England, which withheld items from the Canadian market; Mr. Mowling now makes it clear that market decisions are made in Canada.

Note that last sentence. He speaks of "editions of less than 250" — that is an authentic limited edition which creates an almost immediate increase in value. It should be clear by now that I am not enthusiastic about self-described limited editions. An offering of plates which is limited to as many as anyone cares to order before a certain date, automatically saturates the market and makes future price rises improbable.

I will qualify that last remark. The innocent hope of those who invest in mass produced limited editions is that they will be able to realize a fairly quick profit. For me to say that most of them will never show a profit is absurd; given time enough the price must eventually go up, but that time span may well be the normal period for the antiquing process to take place — namely one hundred years.

A superbly crafted limited edition of less than 1000 world-wide, whether it be a ceramic or a fine art print, is pretty well bound to jump in price within a very few years.

Here are some general thoughts on book collecting which I hope will help some of my correspondents.

1. No more than one in a hundred second-hand books are worth more than a dollar, and any old book which fetches as much as $20 must be regarded as valuable. Books in the $100-$1000 range are incredibly rare.

2. "Complete Works", no matter how old or elaborately bound, are rarely valuable. The only exception may be "complete works" published while the author was still alive — and therefore possibly not complete.

3. Valuable books fall into two main categories: (a) First Editions, special editions, finely illustrated editions or signed editions — all of books by famous authors. (b) Rare copies of obscure works of special interests.

4. Books containing fine prints dated before 1880 may be valuable depending on the artistic merit of the illustrations. These especially include books of natural history and travel. The illustrations may well determine the actual value of the book. Two volumes of Bartlett's Canadian Scenes, for example, contains over 100 prints and would therefore be worth $1000 even at a mere $10 per print.

5. The vast majority of old books must be rejected purely on grounds of condition.

To fetch those famous high prices which we hear about they must be virtually mint. Illustrations again are critical. If they were tipped in, one or more may be missing — drastically reducing the book's value.

6. Old Bibles and encyclopedias are nearly always disappointing. The market is not good. The Bible, let's face it, is not a rare book and there is a proper reluctance to throw them away. Old encyclopedias are mostly compendiums of out-of-date information.

7. The best fun for the book lover with a small budget comes from knowing your subject. I find it difficult to pass a garage sale, or a Salavation Army store without going through the books and with any kind of luck I usually find a few at 10¢ each, which I can later sell to a dealer for a dollar or more. It's a pleasant, self-financing hobby. Happiest moment was finding a 10¢ book, which I later sold for $15.00 — but that was a record.

RE-DOING A ROOM

Tables round a cooking island replace formal dining area

The first step in redecorating is to forget what the room looks like now, according to Louisa Cowan, head of Armstrong's Interior Design Studio. After inhabiting a particular space for a number of years, many people find that first step difficult, she says.

But once that hurdle is cleared, the results can be well worth the efort. As an example, she recalled a 12' x 12' kitchen, basically well laid out, but decorated in a rather drab, nondescript way. With a little carpentry and a lot of careful planning, Mrs. Cowan had it changed into a charming oriental setting.

The transformed room hints at formality, with an evident sense of order, clean lines and sophisticated black and beige colour scheme. But there is no museum austerity here. Rather, the room is infused with the serenity of an oriental garden, or a tea room. It's a place to relax in style.

Three movable tables serve as pivotal fixtures both for the living and the dining. Each of the tables is a slim rectangle, about as big as a bridge table cut in half. They're light in weight because they are meant to be moved. Covered completely in black Formica, they're also easy to care for, as are the three matching cushioned stools.

"We decided not to include a formal dining area in the decorating scheme, "Mrs. Cowan said. "By putting the table around the cooking island, we conserved a tremendous amount of space — space that can be used for full-time living rather than part-time formal dining.

"Also, with this arrangement, meal preparation becomes an activity the whole family can share. There is a regular range top built into the cooking surface, but a wok is one of the most used appliances in the kitchen because it is a quick way to prepare nutritious meals."

From the floor to the ceiling, it is evident that the designer concentrated on carefree living in her planning. A no-wax Solarian floor from Armstrong incorporates a sunburst design in soft earthtones that inspired both the choice of wallcovering and the fabric to cover the benches.

Other than a bookshelf divider separating the cooking center from the family room, there is no wall storage. Instead, the walls were used to display a few well-chosen artifacts, like a huge black iron strainer from an old Chinese kitchen.

Too, a large window with a stunning view occupied most of the space where kitchen cabinets would ordinarily be hung. Strips of balsa wood painted black were used to create fretwork directly on the windows to carry out the Oriental motif. And care was taken to provide ample storage under the counters and the cooktop.

All the appliances have GE's black onyx finish, lending a costly custom look to a decor that really isn't out of line for most redecorating budgets.

With the three movable tables set around the cooking island, the family is ready for a cozy, informal meal at home. For entertaining, the tables can be set buffet style either in the kitchen or elsewhere.

And when the tables aren't being used for eating, they can be used for just about anything else, a desk, for example, for crafts or homework.

"Redecorating should be an adventure, "Mrs. Cowan said, "But as in our Oriental kitchen, it should be a carefully planned adventure. With a little vision and a lot of planning, a family can have comfortable living along with a new look that will stay fresh for years.

ONCE A NONDESCRIPT SPACE, this eat-in kitchen now reflects Oriental charm and tranquility. Furthering the Eastern decor are the delicately proportioned black tables and stools, fretwork on windows and a no-wax floor with sunburst insets.

Home insurance: do you have adequate coverage ?

That is an important consideration for current home owners as well as prospective buyers.

Most home insurance policies cover liability and theft as well as damage from fire, storm or other causes.

For purposes of this column, however, it's the fire insurance and other possible physical damage to the house with which we are concerned. The amount of liability you carry can be determined on the basis of what you figure your individual needs may be after consultation with the insurance agent.

If you are a new buyer of a house, it is advisable that you insure for the full replacement value of the dwelling. The same is true for the existing owner.

In the latter case, however, the owner may have become careless and finds that inflated costs have far outstripped his insurance coverage. He learns that, to his dismay, in the event of fire destruction. Often, he doesn't have enough coverage to meet the cost of rebuilding. It has happened.

So it pays to re-evaluate your insurance coverage periodically — every year is not too often the way construction costs have been climbing.

Many insurance companies now recognize this inflation factor with policies that automatically increase the insurance coverage at each renewal, with a premium cost increase, of course.

But sometimes that isn't enough. Thus, frequent checks with your insurance agent are advisable if you are to remain fully covered.

By the same token, do not overinsure. The losses recovered by insurance are based solely on replacement costs. It does not consider the value of the land, the desirability of the location, the local school system or convenience of transportation.

Thus, replacement of your house is not the same as buying it. Therefore, there is no reason to pay an insurance premium on an amount you cannot collect.

In short, there is no connection at all between the market value of your home and its replacement cost. Usually, the replacement cost will be less. But sometimes, especially if you have owned the home for several years, replacement cost of the building can be even greater than what you paid for the property — land and buildings.

Replacement cost is the money needed to construct a building of the same type, size, complexity of design and general quality of construction as the existing building in the same location.

But how do you know how much to make this? If necessary, get an estimate from a reliable building contractor or from a professional appraiser. Or, in most cases, if you are dealing with a reliable, qualified insurance agent, he should be able to come up with a protective figure, without overselling you on insurance. He should be experienced in this.

Typically, a new buyer is looking for insurance that relates the value of the house to the market value, or the purchase price. But new buyers should be alert. Often the amount on the initial policy is intended to "cover the mortgage" at the time of purchase.

That isn't enough.

Typically, too, many owners increase the amount of insurance periodically by some percentage, usually based on the general inflation rate, a practice supported by the belief that it will keep the insurance up-to-date with inflated value over the years.

But so is this solution not the best one. What if construction costs are increasing faster than the general inflation rate?

That has been the experience of recent years. Based on the general inflation rate, it actually may result in the owner himself paying a large portion of the repair bills if a loss occurs.

Buyers and owners should be aware of another point that is often overlooked: Partial destruction of your home by fire is far more likely to occur than total destruction. In fact, more than 99 per cent of insurance claims are for partial damage.

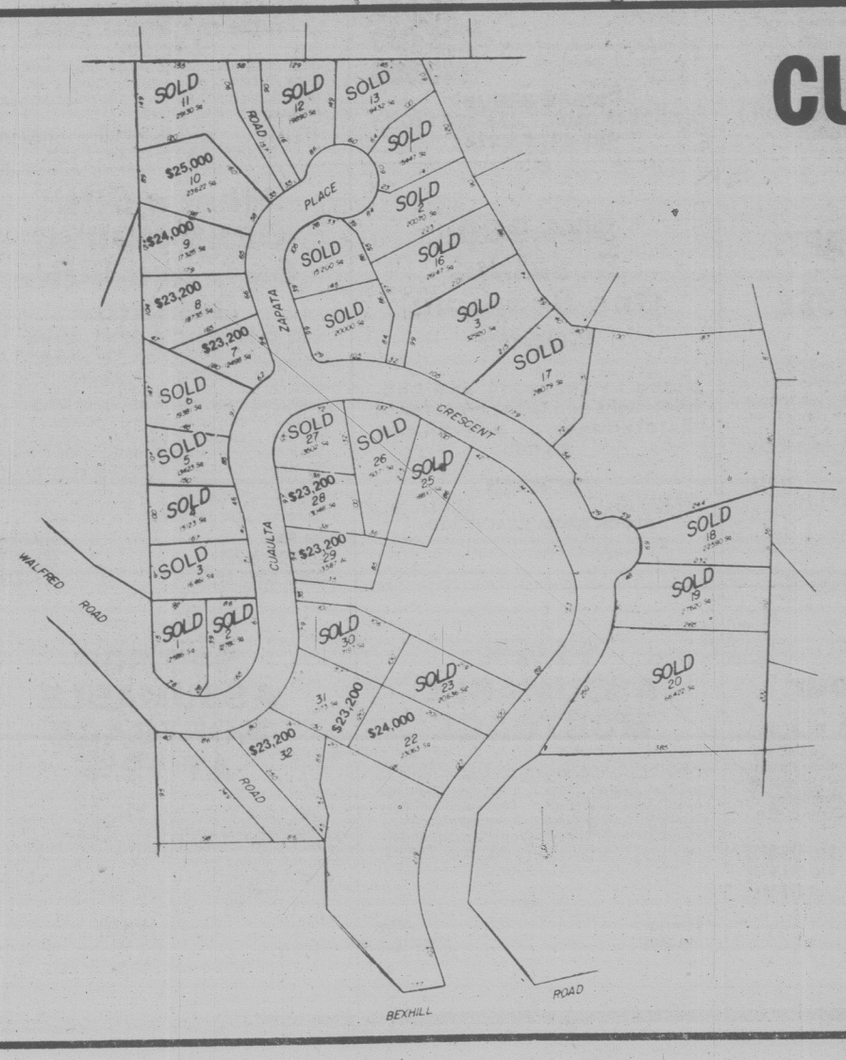

Insuring to current replacement cost is particularly important in these cases because most home owner's policies state that unless a house is insured for at least 80 per cent of actual replacement costs, partial losses will not be covered at the full cost of repairing the damage.

With this type of policy, if the face value is less than 80 per cent of the replacement cost, the insurance company will pay only a percentage of the partial loss. The specific amount is based on a ratio of the amount of insurance coverage you have.

Why did they call it Stelly's Crossroad ?

Stelly's Crossroad was named for George Stelly, who was born in Switzerland in 1829, came to New Orleans at the age of 23, pushed on to Illinois and to Iowa. He joined the gold-rush to California in the '50's, and later searched for gold in the Cariboo.

He settled down in Victoria in the '60's, became a contractor and transfer agent, and raised horses in Saanich.

OPEN HOUSE SAT. and SUN. 4356 TORQUAY DEAR SANTA . . .

Please give Mummy a nice house with a big sunny kitchen for baking her Christmas cookies. Dad wants a big basement (for us kids) and a big garage for himself. I want a big yard for raising rabbits and Dad wants to cook his masterpieces (hamburgers) on the built-in barbeque. We need 4 bedrooms so Sis won't bother me. I want to stay in Gordon head (that's where my school is). So, thanks dear Santa. P.S. I love you. And, oh, Santa IT HAS BEEN REDUCED TO $85,900.

It's Frosty special time

Frosty, that "jolly, happy soul" who has already become a musical legend, demonstrates his unique holiday magic in Frosty the Snowman, an animated musical special narrated by Jimmy Durante Saturday at 8 p.m. on Channel 7.

Comedian Jackie Vernon provides the voice for Frosty on this Chistmas fable, originally broadcast Dec. 7, 1969. The special, based on the song of the same title about the happy-go-lucky snowman, features Billy de Wolfe as the voice of the villainous Professor Hinkle, a magician whose stovepipe topper transforms the lifeless snowman into an enchanting song-and-dance man.

Pursued by the hatless professor and rising temperatures, Frosty sets off for the North Pole to keep from melting. En route, the lovable snowman weathers a whirl of adventures and overcomes the threat of evaporation.

Vienna Choir Boys featured

For nearly five centuries the Vienna Choir Boys have enchanted millions with the charm and excellence of their music-making. Their repertoire extends from sacred music to dance songs, from serious opera to comic opera, and from folk songs to classical motets.

They also are widely known for their fine, clear interpretation of traditional Christmas carols, and it is in the holiday spirit that the Vienna Choir Boys are featured in Silent Night, airing 11:35 p.m. on Saturday, December 8 on Channel 9.

Silent Night presents the boys singing a seasonal concert selection in German and Latin.
